2. Determine net total tax levy for FY 1979 and FY 1981. (Board of Assessors Tax Rate Recapitulation Sheet No. 1, Line 10).
FY 1979: 4,953,818
FY 1981 (projected): 5,616,788

3. Was your tax levy less than 2½% of "full and fair" cash value in 1979? If yes, your FY 1979 percentage is your new limit. Reduce your levy to that limit by at least 15% each year. (It is not required that you reduce the levy below the FY 1979 percentage limit).
FY 1981 (projected) levy: _____ x .85 equals _____
_____ FY 1982 levy limit
Perform the same calculation for each subsequent year until FY 1979 percentage is reached.

4. If your tax levy was greater than 2½% of "full and fair" cash value in 1979, your eventual levy limit will be 2½% of the community's "full and fair" cash valuation. Reduce your levy to that limit by at least 15% each year. (It is not required that you reduce the levy below 2½%).
FY 1981 (projected) levy: $5,616,788 x .85 equals $4,774,270
$4,774,270 FY 1982 levy limit
Perform the same calculation for each subsequent year until 2½% limit is reached.

5. Reduce your motor vehicle excise receipts to 38% of their projected FY 1981 level.
FY 1981 (projected) excise $478,000 x .38 equals $181,640 FY 1982 excise receipts

How to get involved in Metro program

Cohasset is one of close to forty metropolitan Boston communities taking part in the METCO Program, wherein children of minority groups are enrolled as students in suburban cities and towns. The goal of the program is to reduce racial isolation and provide broader educational opportunities for all. Cohasset has been a part of this program for twelve years, and this year there are 48 Boston youngsters for whom Cohasset is "My school."

Every METCO child has a Host Family in Cohasset which acts as a contact for that child's own family and as a 'home away from home' for the student during the school day. Several opportunities exist for families to get together, such as the Open Houses at the various schools and other special school events. In addition, there are usually two METCO functions, one in Cohasset hosted by Cohasset families and one in Boston where we are the guests of the Boston families.

The kids often get together after school, to participate in athletics, work on assignments together, go to scouts and just to play. Students and their parents often see one another at athletic events.

During the fall and winter (and probably the spring as well), there is a "late" METCO bus, which lea

Every year, new students come into the program and new Host Families are needed. This year, there are ten new students, some at each school.

A park bench view of Hub & Bostonians

Not all of us go to Boston often. In fact, so rural am I, so unrelated to urban influences by drifting southward, I still don't say 'Intown' with aplomb.

But when they expressed the Orient, I trundled in, or rather I was taken so as not to miss a notable occurrence in the city. That and the Tall Ships'll hold until something as good as "Annie," dinner at a big deal restaurant, the Pops or even the lighting of the Christmas tree come along.

Anyway, Jordan Marsh's (clearly) multi-million dollar campaign was about what I'd thought it would be ...magnificent and replete with gorgeous girls whose origins were at least related to the Orient. But those crowds made me feel like the wilting mums on each floor of the store, done in with the crush.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

So after a few respectful passes by the incredible displays of everything lovely that's from Japan and after looking at stuff hanging from the ceilings because I couldn't see eye or floor level for people, I teased to go outside.

And there, expressed between Filene's and Jordan Marsh was humanity on the park benches.

You can't beat a good park bench. Everyone seemed to feel that way because there was scarcely room to accommodate the number of sitters. It was the perfect fall day, the kind that puts you in mind of crisp apples.

But back to humanity...the people on the bench opposite mine. On the far right of the bench were two women of Oriental descent. I was a bit embarrassed that I couldn't say for sure they were Chinese, though that's what I believe. But then I remembered I can't tell Caucasians from one another either...French, German, Russian, whatever. These two women were earnest in their conversation. It's obvious that if you have two people talking, one's the lead talker. They spoke in their native tongue. The top talker was delivering a dissertation. I don't know if it was about family or what. But the topic troubled her. Her mind was made up and she was making her position clear to the listener who was less emotional about the subject, whatever it was.

They were dressed simply with a fall coat as a preventative measure. They took no notice of anyone else, so necessary was their discussion. On the other end of the bench was someone who knew her way around the city. She'd shifted down to the end spot when it became available and shot a determined glare right through a woman who headed for the seat at the same time. No need to tell you who won it.

Her hair was tinted a tenacious blonde in a pigment that out glows the skin when the blending of the two has been overcast by age. This woman was a city person, out for the day, I figured. She probably had a slow corned beef going at home, controlled her life well, and didn't need to put up with a lot from others.

A young girl came to take her post smack in the middle of the bench. She has a blueberry muffin. She was made up to the nines, high and to the outer edge with heavy rouge, snazzy new shades of lipstick, boots, those bloomer-like pants, short jacket, miraculously long perfectly painted nails.

She began on her muffin. And I, having a problem with becoming absorbed in watching humanity expressed, learned a lot from watching her careful, precise consumption of that muffin (blueberry). She took first from the outer top edging, picking and eating the crispy part with the residue of sugar. That done, she worked around the outside, ending after the 10 minute chore with crumbs on her designer clad knees. The inside of the muffin, best as I could tell, never got eaten.

She was hungry but careful about satisfying that desire. And when she'd cleared the offensive crumbs and checking her lipstick, she took from her one parcel the new boots she'd bought. They were lovely, light suede, more accourtrements for the person who was up to the minute on any trend or fashion that was flashed to Boston from New York. Her friends arrived to meet her. The new young woman was a mirror of exacting cosmetics and clothing. The young man had a black sleeveless shirt (the open pit effect), and heavily greased hair — pasted back. A picture. He too wore makeup, eye stuff I guess. Frankly, I was worn out trying to understand his appearance.

Near the midst of the bench, during this time had been a man who only passed by my vision and consciousness. He'd left and returned with a paper. And when the muffin scene was complete, I turned my gaze to him. He had on his winter coat. He was reading somebody's abandoned Herald, the editorial page, and he found it amusing, which embarrassed him when he caught himself laughing aloud.

Someone applied the term derelict to him. I don't know what that word means. I understand it when applied to duty. I'm not sure how it is applied to mankind. But one could see that he was not there as a shopper or browser of Orient Expressed. His benign attendance was more a way of life. And one that didn't look easy. Still, how comfortably, I noticed, did he take his place, gleaning from the former sitters his day's reading. His hair and teeth were nearly gone. Intact was his sense of humor, at least about political essays.

There were others, the man who spilled his soy sauce and tried not to swear aloud, the girl who ate as if the food was getting to her stomach just in time, the four girls singing religious songs to the front benchful.

It was more informative, more absorbing that any manmade display about any nation. Park benches are necessities. I wish we had more of them. Bostonians are lucky Kevin the Bold appreciates them. But now that he's directed his efforts toward insuring females wear skirts instead of slacks, he probably doesn't have the time to bench browse. That, so far as I'm concerned may be the best reason to go 'Intown.'

Windscreens save heat

Americans could save 10 to 25 percent on their heating fuel bills by planting windbreaks around their homes, Marc A. MacQueen, District Conservationist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service in Raynham, reports.

Well-placed trees could produce additional savings in summer, he said, by cutting down on cooling costs.

Murray

However, should Prop. 2½ pass in her district, and in the general election, November 4, Rep. Murray said she would support it totally and without any amendments. (ED.'S NOTE: Legislators can amend a statutory change. Prop. 2½ is a statutory change. Constitutional Amendments can not be amended.)

Unlike Ford, Rep. Murray does not feel that Prop. 2½, if passed, would necessarily put an end to life as we know it. "Prop. 2½ would cut the tax rate. That doesn't necessarily mean we would have to cut budgets, locally. Towns would have to increase fees, i.e. mooring fees, recreational fees, etc. Towns didn't have that permission before."

Rep. Murray strongly supports the Cohen Bill, which includes the "good portions" of a bill which she co-sponsored, H5016, called the "Responsible Limit." "The Cohen Bill has been accepted as a rational alternative by all groups, even Citizens for Limited Taxation. It appears to be a good substitute."

Question 5 on the ballot will get Rep. Murray's full support. "One of the main causes of high property taxes are mandated programs. I don't believe anybody wants any more mandated programs. Even if the state picks up the costs, they're coming from another tax pocket (state income tax).

"I have consistently voted against any increased taxes. And I'm for strong home rule. I feel state government has gotten too big. Every year I file the Sunset Bill, which calls for the evaluation of every state department every five years. If departments and programs are found to be overlapping, we should get rid of those overlapping areas."

Rep. Murray is also for stronger county government. "Other states (which have strong county governments) don't have the same taxes we have." Another bill which Rep. Murray supports came out of the local government caucus. "We filed it for the last two years. If passed, it would allow cities and towns to vote to remove existing mandated programs."

Rep. Murray is for Question 1 on the ballot, a bill prohibiting discrimination against the handicapped. And she's against Question 4 on the ballot. "I feel we shouldn't be voting on our own pay raises.

"Presently, I'm fighting for $10 million in Congress to purchase 6-8 reliable commuter boats. I feel the Yankee Skimmer is unsafe. Charles England from Watertown recently put in a bid for a subsidy to run a boat from Hingham to Logan Airport."

And she has filed and refiled a Norfolk County Solid Waste Bill. "In fact, I've refiled half of my legislation. And I voted against the telephone company charging for directory assistance."

Two years ago Rep. Murray overwhelmingly defeated former State Representative Carolyn Stouffer in the then newly-created district of Hingham, Cohasset and Hull. The Ford campaign knows the odds...and it admits they are tough ones.

The most damning thing Rep. Murray has ever said publicly about Ted Ford is "He's a nice boy."

Without any special introduction, Cohasset youngsters sensed the special needs of the children. Jack Creamer, Principal of the Osgood School, said, "Everybody's effort when beyond the narrow interpretations. They went the extra mile. It was a great experience for our kids to know others from a totally different culture and they found that someone with a different appearance and language was really very much the same after all."

When the South Shore Baptist Church agreed to accept the responsibility of sponsoring the Khlees, they were prepared to shoulder the work that would be required. What was certainly hoped for, but realized beyond their expectation, was the depth of commitment from individuals in the community.

"Ginnie Delaney," Carol Zimmermann said, "never blinked an eye. When we called to ask about renting, she said it was just wonderful! And asked, 'when are they coming?'" Mrs. Zimmermann adds that her enthusiasm didn't dim over the year either. "No one could match what she's done for this family. She just met every need beyond anything I can describe."

Mrs. Delaney's sons, Gregg, 8, a South American who has lived in Cohasset for two years, and Mark, 11, became very close to the family and particularly to the children. "Gregg and Mark were ecstatic about their coming," Mrs. Delaney says. "Gregg was waiting for them with a Golden picture dictionary!" The Delaneys came to know the Khlees as a very close knit family with a great curiousity and eagerness to understand.

Faith Bowker, friend and first grade teacher to the older three, found that the kids weren't stymied by the language barrier — they simply met on an affection level. Of the captivating children she came to know well, she says, "Bun has quite a bit of exuberance. He jumps right into everything. Et has a little spark to her. Shy at first, she became extremely affectionate. Chien, the oldest, has the most poignant memories of Cambodia." She feels he should be encouraged to talk about them through drawing, telling narratives and eventually writing.

When Cohasset's first graders drew suns in their skies, the Khlee children drew helicopters. Their classmates delighted in a picture Chien drew late in the year of his former home. "It was a straw house on stilts, with chickens, a cow, a lion in the woods and his mother was cooking outside." Kristin Martin remembers. They also were fascinated by the stylized, Gothic-like clay animals they molded in art class. "We learned alot from their culture," Miss Bowker said. "The only regret I have is that the people in Weymouth won't have the benefit of their first year's growth."

Ruth Clark's second grade class at the Osgood School was Chien's "sister" class. He joined them twice a week for math and gym. Mrs. Clark said the children in her class took to Chien. "They loved him. He was good at math and he spoke it as another language very well with us." Searching for words to describe the experience, she said, "Well, I haven't seen anything like it ever."

The total extra miles are hard to measure. There were all the friends who contributed money towards the Khlees' transportation costs; there was the special language assistance of Meredith Lehman; the gentleness and understanding of Dr. Sceery and his staff who made office visits for them easier; parents who responded to their children's friendship with the Khlees; the mothers who saw to it that Et had a full year of Brownies; the total receptiveness and responsiveness of other school staff and many, many people in the community.

Figures baffle and befuddle many of us, doing strange things each month with the check book, adding up differently with each attempt to total more than six figures. The very thought of questioning the total of a supermarket checkout tape was mind-boggling to me until the other day. It took a lot of nerve to hold up the line of customers at the check-out counter, but adding the figures anew, my bill averaged almost ten dollars less, the clerk having forgotten to clear the previous customer's bill before totaling up mine. All of us are more careful in our shopping habits these days, but it's all in vain if you meet up with people like me who can't add two and two. If you're counting your pennies, now is the time to fill up on autumn vegetables such as Alyce Rowland's

TURNIPS DAUPHINOIS

In a large saucepan combine two lbs. turnips, peeled and sliced thin, 1½ c. each of milk and heavy cream, ¾ c. chopped scallion, 2 large garlic cloves, crushed and minced, 1½ tsp. salt and ½ tsp. pepper. Bring the liquid to the boiling point over moderate heat, stirring and remove the pan from the heat. Spread the turnip mixture in a well buttered 1½ qt. casserole and sprinkle it with ½ c. grated Gruyere cheese. Bake in 400 degree oven for 45 min., or until turnips are tender and cheese is browned. Serves 8.

Figures don't lie, 'tis said and I believe it when a newspaper survey reports that it now costs more than $100 to feed a family of four for a week. Items in the market basket seven years ago when the survey began was $56.35. The most dramatic single-item increase during this time was for a five-pound bag of sugar, which went from an average 78 cents to $2.68! The prices of meat, poultry, fish and eggs continue to soar with little hope for any relief. One way to get your protein without breaking the bank is with this receipe from Millie Carr for

BAKED BEANS SUPREME

2 medium cans of baked beans
1/2 c. brown sugar
1 tsp. dry mustard
1/2 c. catsup
1 T Worstershire sauce
1 green pepper (diced finely)
1 medium-sized onion (diced finely)
6 slices bacon

Cut bacon in small pieces and fry until done. Remove bacon from the pan, leaving the drippings in the pan. Add the green pepper and the onions to the drippings and cook until onions are transparent. Drain half of the liquid off the beans and put them in a casserole. Then add all of the above ingredients together and bake in a 325 degree oven for one hour. Bacon strips may be added across the top before baking, if desired. Serves six to eight.

Sing-fest scheduled

Marshfield talent is assembling for the Fifth Annual Barbershop Show of the Mayflower Sweet Adelines on Saturday, Oct. 18, in Plymouth. While the show is attracting International Championship Barbershoppers, local performers are in the spotlight as well. Michael Pevsner, broadcaster over WATD-FM 96, will be Master of Ceremonies for the show.

Of special attraction this year is The Boston Common, currently the world's #1 Championship Barbershop Quartet. They have been singing together more than eight years, and have received third and second place medals in each annual competition during that time.

Oyster Changes

Remember way back in January when we said we'd put in your oyster ad and keep it in until it did the job?

Well, we've been doing that. And it's worked beautifully for all of us. But there's one little problem. People have not always remembered to call us when the item's been sold, the job's been found, or the carpool's been organized. Consequently, we've been informed that people have answered ads only to find they were too late.

Here's the solution. Your oyster (same rules) will be kept in for eight weeks. Then out it comes. But . . . if you still need to have the ad in, call us. We'll try to rewrite it (without additional charge) for more success for another eight weeks. So we're with you through thick and thin pianos for sale and your search for roommates. But we have to put a limit on this folks. Else we'll have a paper full of advertisements which are outdated.

Nov. 5 Deadline set to contest church sale

It appears the sale of the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road to the South Shore Hellenic Church Association of Cohasset is still pending.

Monday, a Dedham Court official said heirs of Albert A. Pope, deceased, founder of the Pope Memorial Church, have until Nov. 5 to contest the conditions of the sale.

The attorney for the trustees of the Hull-Pope Memorial United Methodist Church could not be reached before press time this week. But it is reported that one Pope heir has formerly registered his objection to the Methodist's conditions for sale. Early this week, yet another heir said she may also contest.

In 1979 the Hull United Methodist Church merged with the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road. Shortly after the merger, and for financial reasons, the newly merged group voted to dispose of the Pope Memorial Church, its organ and real estate.

Pursuant to the vote, the turstees of the Pope Memorial Church had entered into a purchase and sale agreement for the sale and conveyance of the church to the South Shore Hellenic Church Association of Cohasset, for over $100,000.

The Hellenic Association does not wish to use the name, Pope Memorial Church, as the merged churches have incorporated the name Pope Memorial Church.

However, in 1932 Albert A. Pope decreed that the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church must continue to use the name, Pope Memorial Church, in memory of his son who died in an accident.

The Mariner spoke to two Pope heirs this week, one of whom said he had not been aware, until recently, that the church was for sale. "I can't say truthfully that I'm strongly for it or strongly against it. It must be a local situation — I feel it should be run by the local people."

The second individual said she strongly objected the use of the Pope name on a Hull church that is not the memorial which her ancestor built. "I would like to know how many other heirs object to the transferring of the name. If I could persuade the new owners to keep the name Pope Memorial, I would."

Earlier this year, the Nazarenes, who had rented the Pope Memorial Church for services for one year, took legal action against the sale of the church to the Hellenic Association on the grounds that Albert Pope had, reportedly, decreed that the church

Residents favor Prop. 2½ & Reagan in Mariner poll

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Over the weekend I polled 31 persons regarding their off-the-cuff or well-thought-out opinions on several local questions they will be asked to consider at a Cohasset Special Town Meeting and at the Nov. 4 National Elections. Five additional persons would not be interviewed on anything. One person ran away from me.

The poll was conducted in the village, at Cushing Plaza, and one Cohasset resident was polled in Hingham. Very poor planning on my part...I began the poll at the New Republican Headquarters on South Main Street where I naturally picked up a strong Reagan vote. So I am discounting the poll on the presidential preference question.

However, it appears Republicans did not sway the poll in any of the other preference areas.

Of the group interviewed, only two individuals were town employees and two individuals were on town government committees. The remainder of the group were split between being regular old Cohasset residents and businessmen — about equal.

LOCAL ISSUES

Would you like to see the Board of Selectmen increased from three to five members? Twelve pollees said no, 18 said yes, and one individual said they had not really thought about the issue.

One individual said: "I think we should stay with three, with an executive secretary coming along. That will be the biggest change in 200 years." A person in favor of increasing the board said: "If they want to heckle us, we might as well heckle them."

Are you in favor of reducing the School Committee from six to five members? Twenty-three pollees said yes, six said no, and two weren't sure. One person said while she was in favor of the reduction, she didn't feel any reduction should take place until the 1982 Annual Elections. Another said: "We should keep them at six, five would be an imbalance, with five there would be more liberals than conservatives." Yet another individual, in favor of the reduction, said: "We should have as few school committee members as possible." A person in favor: "Let the odd ball decide the question."

Will you support a petition article to build a new Beechwood Fire Station? Ten persons said they would not support the article. Nineteen persons said

Vote 4–0 on Cohasset Motors

Capital Budget against 3A purchase

They're not against the consolidation of the Highway and Wire Departments into a new, more cost-efficient building, with sufficient land for the storage of school buses.

But Monday the Capital Budget Committee voted thumbs down (4-0) on recommending that the Town purchase the Cohasset Motors property on Route 3A.

The Committee said it would recommend that the Town seriously consider the feasibility of building a multi-use building on its own land at the site of the Gravel Pit. However, the proposed building would not house any Fire Department pumpers, as would the 3A property. In recent years, committee members noted that Town Meeting had turned down fire station plans several times, and they feel this year will be no different.

Committee members are presedntly waiting for confirmation from the State Board of Health that a building at the Gravel Pit loca tion would not encroach upon Town wells...if the building were 250 feet away from the wells.

The Captial Budget vote follows on the heels of a

Open house

The Cohasset School Committee and Communications Councils invite all town residents to a reception to welcome the new Superintendent of Cohasset Schools, Eugene Crowell at the Osgood School open house Sunday, Oct. 26 from 3:30 to 6 p.m.

Members of the committee working on arrangements for the reception are Patricia Anne Walsh and Diana Kornet, School Committee members; Communications Councils Co-chairmen: Mrs. Colin Studds and Mrs. Barry Bronstein of Osgood School; Mrs. Dennis Mulligan and Mrs. David Bishop of Deer Hill School, and Mrs. Russell Sandblom, Jr. and Mrs. Robert Riley of Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, and members of the Communications Councils who are donating refreshments.

Article illegal

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said this week Town Counsel reportedly has declared a petition article calling for the addition of two members to the three-man Board of Selectmen illegal because it does not specify terms of office.

Frederick Huntwork, who initiated the petition, asked Selectmen for a written ruling on the matter, saying he had been assured by moderators in several other towns that the article is legal. "They all say the intent of placing an article on a warrant is to inform, specifics can be in the motion."

Huntwork questioned if there were any way he could include the proper wording, asking why he wasn't notified before the warrant was printed.

Clark said Town Counsel is not a lawyer for citizens, "as such." But Selectman Henry Ainslie said, "It seems he might call an error to the attention of any petitioner."

"There were deadlines to meet. He checked all of our articles," Clark said. "Mine was written by a lawyer," Huntwork stated.

Clark said Selectmen would bring up the possibility of correcting the article with Town Counsel.

Ruling asked

Joan Brown asked Selectmen, Monday, for a ruling from Town Counsel with regard to whether a citizens' committee can be formed to submit plans for a new Beechwood Fire Station to Annual Town Meeting. According to Ms. Brown, the committee would be separate from the existing Fire Station Study Committee.

Parents interested in having their 8th and 9th graders attend Cohasset Sociable Dances at the Town Hall should contact 9th Grade Chairman Mrs. Clifford Mitman at 383-9766. The dances are under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. John Knott from Duxbury. Dance dates are Nov. 14, ec. 12 and May 15. The band: "The Telephones." Dessert parties are held before the dances, which begin at 8:30 and end at 11 p.m.

Famous last words

When the Advisory Committee's Donald Steele asked Lot Bates, Chairman of the Fire Station Study Committee if the townspeople had ever been advised that the Fire Department's most recently purchased pumper would not fit into the Beechwood Station, Bates replied:

"They never asked."

Parvo virus

Harold Robbins, Norfolk County Dog Officer, is urging vaccination against "Parvo" virus for all Norfolk County dogs to prevent this contagious disease, after a severe outbreak occurred in Middlesex County.

Although the disease can kill dogs, the Parvo virus is not dangerous to humans. Symptoms are loss of appetite, vomiting, high body temperature, diarrhea, dehydration and general weakness.

The disease is transmitted through the feces and vomit of infected dogs. Dogs simply sniffing the excrement of infected dogs are susceptible to the disease.

Robbins stated "I urge all owners to have their dogs vaccinated against the disease and confine their dogs to their own yards. If any symptoms show they should immediately contact their veterinarian. Time is of the essence, as the disease is usually fatal to dogs from two to seven days after the symptoms are first observed unless a serum is administered. Annual innoculation is the best method of halting the virus' spread."

Ford rebuts Murray rebuttal to Ford flyer

FORD RESPONDS

(Ed.'s Note: The following press released was submitted to the Mariner by the Ted Ford Election Committee, in response to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's statements in last week's edition of the Mariner. Last week Rep. Murray responded to a flyer which the Ford Committee had circulated throughout the district regarding Rep. Murray's position on Prop. 2½.

In all fairness to readers, we would like to preface this Ford release by pointing out that Rep. Murray has never denied that she was in favor of the Prop. 2½ bill filed by the Citizens for Limited Taxation in 1978.

Over the past two years the 1978 Prop. 2½ bill went through a maze of amendments, and according to Rep. Murray, eventually will be presented to voters Nov. 4 in a form in which she does not personally favor.

Ford sees her different votes on Prop. 2½ with its various amendments "contradictory and not in the best interests of her constitutents." Rep. Murray feels her votes on the subject have been considerate and consistant.)

TED FORD REAFFIRMS HIS CONTINUED OPPOSITION TO PROPOSITION 2½

Ted Ford, Democratic candidate for State Representative for Hingham, Hull and Cohasset, today reaffirmed his opposition to Proposition 2½. "Proposition 2½ is a meat-ax approach to tax reform. I am opposed to Proposition 2½. The across-the-board tax cuts that Proposition 2½ would mandate are irresponsible and would cripple our towns' ability to raise funds and to control their own affairs.

"Mrs. Murray has threatened me with serious legal action unless I retract the statements I made about her voting record on Prop. 2½," Ted Ford said. "Her lawyer has hinted about suing me for 'ciminal libel' and says I violated a state election law. She has not taken legal action and I doubt that she will. The statements I made about Mrs. Murray's voting record on Prop. 2½ are correct, and I'm sure she knows it."

Ted Ford has compiled a 30-page statement documenting Mrs. Murray's voting record on Proposition 2½. Each of the three statements made in the "Ted Ford is against Prop. 2½" leaflet are supported by newspaper articles and by the official source, the Journal of the House of Representatives.

"I am amazed at all the attention given to my Prop. 2½ leaflet," said Ted Ford. "In the leaflet, I merely reported the facts about Mrs. Murray's voting record. Her votes on Prop. 2½ are reported in the House Journal and in the Quincy Patriot Ledger. We reported her record, and she must stand by her record."

In her response to the Prop. 2½ leaflet, printed in last week's local newspapers, Mrs. Murray attempted to show that Ted Ford had "misrepresented" her voting record on Proposition 2½. In fact, the facts show that each of the three statements made about her votes were accurate:

The leaflet said: "July 10, 1978 (H.6127) Murray voted FOR Prop. 2½"

In a 1978 campaign ad, Mrs. Murray took credit for this "YES" vote on roll call #396, which she said was Proposition 2½. Roll call #396 was a vote on a motion to discharge H6217, Proposition 2½, from the House Ways and Means Committee. Mrs. Murray said (in her response that appeared last week) that she voted to discharge H6217 from committee. At the State House, a vote to discharge a bill from committee is considered a vote for the bill itself. (Ed.'s Note: it is also a vote for debate).

The leaflet said: "April 9, 1979 (H.5757) Murray voted AGAINST Prop. 2½"

Roll call #82 on April 9, 1979 was a vote to substitute Proposition 2½ (H5217) for the 4% tax cap bill (H5757). Murray voted against H5217, a bill she cosponsored, on roll call #82. Roll cal #91, which Murray cited last week, was a vote on another amendment to H5757, and not a vote on the 4% tax cap itself. Roll call #94 was a vote on the 4% tax cap.

The leaflet said: "June 25, 1980. (H.5269) Murray voted FOR Prop. 2½"

The House Journal for June 25, 1980 reports that Mrs. Murray (on roll call #237) voted FOR H5269 (of 1978), a Proposition 2½ type constitutional amendment. H5269 was introduced in 1978 by Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT) as part of a tax reform package which came to be known as Proposition 2½. Mrs. Murray is a charter member of CLT.

Ford commented: "I don't know whether Mrs. Murray is being deliberately misleading. Maybe she doesn't know what her own voting record is. Her contradictory positions on Prop. 2½ baffle me. She apparently tells one group she's for it, and another group that she's against it."

"Mrs. Murray has stated that she is in favor of the across-the-board tax cuts that Proposition 2½ would mandate. She says that she is against the Proposition 2½ on the ballot, because it would hurt towns like Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull, but that if it passes she would support it and would not try to change it at all.

"I find her positions contradicto · and not in the best interests of her constituency.

"My position on Proposition 2½ remains unchanged."

To the Editor:

Once again, it is time to plan our New Year's Eve celebration at Kimball's by the Sea. Gene Roma and Tim Kelley will again provide music for another wonderful evening.

As you probably know, this 24-hour party includes relaxing around the pool, or our rooms, dinner at 8 p.m., dancing til 2 a.m., morning Bloody Marys and breakfast at 10 a.m. Please note check in time is 2 p.m., Dec. 31, and check out is 2 p.m., Jan 1.

The cost of this party will be $105, with the optional night costing $25. This year's optional night is January 1, 1981. The total package for two nights will cost $130. Children are welcome the optional night ONLY!

We must have a $50 deposit for each room by Nov. 1. Please make checks payable to Marcia Clark, Treasurer. Final payment will be due on Dec. 1. After that date, rooms not paid for will be given to those waiting. Due to last year's success, we've had a good response already, so please reply as soon as possible. Rooms will be assigned by deposits received by Nov. 1.

'Opposition does not mean insult'

To the Editor:

It all started back in September, when the Cohasset Fire Chief closed the Beechwood Fire Station without notifying the community or its elected officials.

A group of over 200 concerned citizens petitioned the town Selectmen to re-open the station. The Selectmen took the petition under advisement. The Fire Chief then agreed to open the station at the request of the Town of Scituate during their road repairs.

This opening amounted to a few hours a day and then shortly after was stopped. At the present time the Beechwood Station is still closed and the safety of its residents is still in jeopardy.

The Beechwood area is a large residential area with a great number of new homes under construction. This area can only be reached by one access road.

The residents of the Beechwood area feel very strongly that the station should have been left open and manned until after the special town meeting on Oct. 28 which will be taking action on fire station articles.

Residents have explored the costs of repairing or replacing the station and have found the costs to be quite reasonable. It is also possible to build a highway barn on presently owned town property plus to renovate or replace the Beechwood and No. Cohasset Station even if land had to be purchased at far less cost then the proposed Rte. 3A purchase, and without the bond issue.

The residents of Beechwood are not questioning the integrity or the qualifications of the members of the Fire Station Study Committee who gave of their time. In a Democracty, people do not always agree with the decisions of a government or its related committees.

Opposition does not mean insult.

We hope you would carefully think out your decision on the 3A property, keeping in mind the preceding information, the inflationary period we are in, the very real possibility of Proposition 2½, and removing a large piece of business property from the tax rolls in Cohasset.

Sincerely,
Concerned Citizens of Beechwood

Notes & comments

Negatives are readily expressed by numbers; affirmatives are expressed by ideas. That's why the Citizens for Limited Taxation, who initiated the Proposition 2½ question on the November 4 election ballot, are so against us looking at numbers.

...Good luck isn't a matter of having a pail handy when it rains Kentucky bourbon; it's a matter of being so tuned in that you find a way, almost instinctively, of being where you need to be at the right time.

...Most of the people on this earth believe there can be change for the better even if history and logic seem to be moving the wrong way.

...For some time now many Cohasset Police Officers have not cared for their own police log. Officials say new Police Chief John DeBassio will be dehumorizing it in the future.

We only hope that it does not become so deafening as to leave little room for a personal voice, here and there. For instance, while we know it's not a crime for Car # whatever to break down on the road in several respects, and while we know that it need not legally be recorded for the public...when it happens often enough the advisory committee notices, the selectmen comment.

When in one week several months ago police officers answered 26 malfunctioning alarms...again, town officials commented. Businessmen and home owners learned their malfunctioning alarms were taking up a large part of our officers' time.

As it stands, the police report for the week weaves an incredibly fine net, encompassing us all in the complexities of the town. If it's to cease, well, that's the way the ice tray freezes.

Oct. special TM will be held in Nov.

Special Town Meeting will presumably be continued from Tuesday, Oct. 28 to either Thursday, Nov. 13 or Monday, Nov. 17 depending upon the availability of the CHS auditorium...the final date had not been determined when we went to press this week.

Everybody (most town officials) appear to now agree that attempting to deal with money articles before we know how Prop. 2½ will fare on the Nov. 4 election ballot would be frustrating at the least.

Presumably, next Tuesday (Oct. 28), the Town Moderator and a couple of selectmen will meet at the CHS auditorium promptly at 7:30 p.m. where someone will move to continue the meeting until a future date. However, if a quorum of voters should appear at 7:30 p.m. and vote to hold the meeting on the eve thereof, the meeting would have to be held. But a quorum of voters all arriving at 7:30 p.m. and champing at the bit for a special town meeting is unlikely.

And so, it is our opinion that the Oct. 28 Special Town Meeting will be continued until a future date (one of the November dates mentioned) unless someone should decide that one or more articles on the 12;article warrant need urgent. Oct. 28 action.

Welcome back, Lamplighters!

The Cohasset High School Lamplight page will be back in the Mariner beginning next week on a bi-weekly basis. Philip Dormitzer and Kathy O'Brien are co-editors this year, and they're already published a separate, independent newspaper for students. Between independent publishing dates, they plan to keep all of us atuned to what they're thinking about many issues.

One next week's page...a big debate! On what else? Proposition 2½ as it will affect CHS. Couldn't be more timely.

Buckley fundraiser

"Cocktails and conversation with Sheriff John Buckley," a fund raiser on behalf of presidential candidate John B. Anderson, will be held on Saturday, Oct. 25 at the Alewife Tavern, 699 Main Street, Norwell, from 2:30-5 p.m. Tickets cost $10 and may be obtained by calling the following town coordinators:

In Cohasset: Charles Lynch, 36 Sohier St., 383-1531.

Public notice

Earlier this week, Selectmen unanimously agreed to defer to Prop. 2½ and postpone the Oct. 28 Special Town Meeting to a date after the Nov. 4 election.

Depending upon the availability of the CHS auditorium, Special TM will commence either Thursday, Nov. 13 or Monday, Nov. 17 at 7;30 p.m. The actual date was not confirmed before the Mariner went to press this week.

Christmas show house

To the Editor:

Plans for the Christmas Show House to benefit the Eunice Kennedy Shriver Center for the Mentally Retarded were revealed to friends and neighbors of mine at my home on Oct. 6 at a coffee.

The residence of Professor and Mrs. John Kenneth Galbraith, Francis Ave., Cambridge, will be the site of the second Christmas Show House. It will be open on Sunday, Nov. 9, through Thursday, Nov. 13 from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Tickets will be $6 per person, groups of 20 or more, $5 a person and exact time of arrival.

For reservations call Shriver Center, 893-3500. Tickets may be purchased through any member of the committee.

The Cohasset and Hingham League of Women Voters are co-sponsoring a Candidates' Night Wednesday, Oct. 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Hingham Town Hall, 7 East Street.

Candidates participating include Senator Allan McKinnon, Paul Barber, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Ted Ford, Peter Eleey, William Robinson and Sheriff Clifford Marshall.

TSONGAS IN HINGHAM

Senator Paul Tsongas will meet with area residents at an open meeting Saturday, Nov. 8 from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m. at the Hingham Town Offices, 7 East Street.

The race for State Senate

McKinnon has faith in——bottle bill—commuter boat—mobile homes...——

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

Whereas Paul Barber has the informal, avuncular bearing of a socially secure man not given to spending time correcting his past public statements or looking in drawers for hidden microphones, his opponent, Sen. Allan McKinnon comes across as an earnest man who has worked hard to get his present position, works hard at the job, and means to work hard to keep it. Sen. McKinnon is persistent in defending his record, but he is soft-spoken and deferential, and I detect no hint of arrogance as I listen to him. He sounds like a man who still lives by the Scout Oath, and it is hard to imagine him serving with some of the loathsome, profane characters who have been his colleagues.

McKinnon is a life-long resident of Weymouth. He is a graduate of Tufts (class of 1955), has a Master's degree in Education from Bridgewater State College, and he was a history teacher in the Weymouth and Holbrook Public Schools until his first election to the State Senate in 1970.

In the Senate he was Chairman of the Joint House-Senate Committee on Commerce and Labor from 1971 to 1979. He was made Assistant Majority Leader of the Senate in 1977, a position he lost in 1979 when Sen. William Bulger (the man whose policy it is never to speak to the press) became Senate President. Presently McKinnon is a member of the Senate Ways and Means Committee and is Chairman of the Joint Committee on Insurance.

McKinnon points to a variety of accomplishments in the Senate: the Community Development Finance Agency, which provides seed money for businesses in economically depressed areas of the state; the elimination of unemployment benefits for "voluntary quitters;" a law protecting independent gas retailers from the caprices of the parent oil companies; his support of the bottle bill; funding for the Hingham to Boston Commuter Boat; legislation to protect mobilehome owners from unscrupulous trailer park owners...and many, many others.

When I present McKinnon with Paul Barber's central charge that he, McKinnon, is a "spender," I quickly learn that there is considerable difference between the two men on the issue. McKinnon calls himself an "eclectic." On the one hand he cites both his work in eliminating "voluntary quits" from unemployment compensation, and legislation he sponsored requiring arbitrators to consider the finances of cities and towns as a factor in the settlement of disputed M.B.T.A. contracts. The latter effort garnered McKinnon a physical threat by one puerile M.B.T.A. union official.

On the other hand, he strongly opposes Proposition 2½. "The worst piece of legislation I've seen in ten years." He believes there is not much waste at the town level, and with inflation running at ten to twenty percent per year the effect of Proposition 2½ on services would be even greater than people anticipate. He says that during the inflation of the last several years the oil companies have more than doubled their profits "...yet we want the firemen and policemen, who took their jobs in good faith, to be the ones to pay."

I ask him about the argument that Massachusetts needs to reduce its tax burden in order to stimulate the economy and to be competitive with neighboring states such as New Hampshire. McKinnon responds that companies are playing one state off against another, and some states are becoming "company states" like "company towns" of old. He argues that homeowners, unlike some companies, don't have the power to hold whole states at bay. He says Massachusetts should do everything it can to encourage companies to come here, but shouldn't allow them to extort sweetheart deals by threatening to go elsewhere.

CONCLUSION

It is fashionable these days to lament the want of good candidates for public office. The lament may be true, generally, but becomes a cop-out when it is an excuse for not being informed about candidates who, as public officials, will have so much to say about the quality of our lives. For too many of us it is more fun to be snobs and play a game of "they're none of 'em any good" than it is to distinguish between competing candidates who are, like everyone else, products of many influences.

In the case of the race for State Senate, the system is working in the sense that two personally excellent and highly articulate candidates differ diametrically on the central issue of the campaign, tax limitation. A citizenry which through apathy throws away its right to choose will leave politics to those special interests who would never be so stupid as to throw away their right to choose. It is the apathetic citizenry that makes a choice between men of the calibre of McKinnon and Barber such a rarity.

Prop. 2½ warning

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, (R), Third Plymouth District today warned that the estimated tax reductions being publicized in the Proposition 2½ campaign are probably larger than they will actually be if the measure passes.

Murray said, "Proposition 2½ operates its various formulae on the basis of full and fair cash value. "For a property recently on the market, the full and fair cash value is easily recognized as the price for which the house is sold. However, since not all property is sold every year, the assessors will have to estimate the full and fiar cash value for all property not sold. So far, no such estimate has been made this year, so the figures being publicized by proponents as well as opponents to Proposition 2½ are based on something other than the actual figures that would

Ted Ford wants to reduce property taxes.

"Massachusetts is a $6.1 Billion enterprise. A State Representative has a job like a Senior Vice President in a business that size. A large part of both jobs is making decisions about money — where to get it and how to spend it. Efficient government depends on State Representatives making responsible votes on financial matters.

"Property taxes are 70% above the national average! I am in favor of limiting and reducing local property taxes, but I am not in favor of Proposition 2½. Prop. 2½ would cause a very drastic cut that would cripple local town government. I am in favor of a more reasoned tax reform proposal — such as the Cohen Bill.

"Basically I am a fiscal conservative. Government, like any business or taxpayer, must live within its means. Cutting taxes shouldn't mean cutting needed services — an efficient state government should be able to do more for less money. Reducing the individual tax burden in Massachusetts is crucially important to attracting new business to the state.

"As a State Representative, I will concentrate my efforts on tax reform. After serving as an Economic Specialist for the U.S. State Department, I feel I can do a better job as Your State Representative."

☐The last time most of us bit into a slice of watermelon was probably on a hot day in August. Well, the children who attend the Carriage House Nursery School on North Main Street dined on fresh, juicy and very delicious watermelon last week from their own sandbox garden! The youngsters harvested their two huge watermelons last Tuesday after getting the most out of the playyard growing season.

It all began on the last day of school back in June when the kids celebrated by eating slices of early watermelon. They muched on the fruit and, as watermelon eaters are prone to do, spit the seeds out in the yard. Long after the rinds were cleaned up and school closed for the summer, Bobbie Barrow, custodian for the building, discovered a healthy cover of vines growing in the snadbox.

He mulched, fertilized, watered and visited the watermelon patch over the summer (neighbor Captain Frank Sequeira, watched too) and when the kids returned to school in September, they found two very large melons thriving in the sandbox! They didn't mind playing with their dump trucks, pails and shovels elsewhere for the first month of school. The miracle of mother nature was something they delighted in inspecting every day.

Bobbie continued to nurture the melons. He built a little wood frame and plastic house to protect them from the increasingly cold nights and advised the teachers, Sally Atkinson and Gail Columbear, when to cover the melons with their pink blanket for extra chilly nights. After four months growth, the decision was made to harvest the watermelons and everyone who ate them a week ago Wednesday and Thursday, agreed that they were the tastiest they'd ever gobbled!

☐During the fall and winter (and probably the spring as well), there is a "late" METCO bus, which leaves the high school at 5:30 p.m. Monday-Thursday, except for half days. This bus is provided to allow METCO students to participate in extra-curricular activities, particularly sports. It is available as well to provide back to Boston transportation for anyone who has arranged to stay in Cohasset 'to play.' The parents of the students involved should plan this a day ahead.

Trip to Korean exhibit

The Community Center of Cohasset is offering a trip to the Museum of Fine Arts to view the exhibit of "5,000 Years of Korean Art." The trip will leave the Center Wednesday, Nov. 12, at 9 a.m. and return to the Center at 3 p.m.

The Korean Exhibit is a major exhibit of over 300 pieces including many national treasures of gold. Art objects of gold were recently found in Korean archeological excavations. This is the largest and most important exhibit to ever tour the United States. Three gold crowns, two gold belts, jade pendants and other jewelry are among the more than 35 glittering gold master works included in this exhibition.

Also featured are Koryo Celedons which are unequaled any where in the world. Iron and stone sculptures, paintings, ceramics, tiles and other art objects are also included.

Due to the on going renovations at the Museum, a catered lunch will not be served but visitors may dine in the Museum's fine cafeteria. To make reservations call the Center daily from 9 a.m. until noon, 383-0088.

Heather Correa —1980 Homecoming Queen

Heather Correa

By Karin Bartow

Heather Correa was crowned the 1980 Homecoming Queen during halftime at Milliken field on Saturday in a ceremony that had a little more drama than usual.

The four senior finalists escorted by their Dads, waited anxiously as last year's queen, Christine Hanlon, opened "the envelope," a la Atlantic City. Runners-up Donna Chisholm, Hannah Clinton and Koren Lipsett cheered for Heather along with the record crowd gathered for the E. Bridgewater game.

Homecoming King and varsity football guard Sandy Ayer, however, was not on hand to escort the Queen around the field. He suffered a knee injury during the first half of the game and was taken to South Shore Hospital for examination. Not in pain, but sidelined for the remainder of the season, Sandy was up and around for the Homecoming dance that night. (He escorted, appropriately enough, Karen Froio who broke her foot playing field hockey!)

Heather received a silver Revere bowl from Austin Ahern Jewelers and all four girls were given $50 savings certificates and flowers from Elena Sestito's. The Homecoming King and Queen are voted by the senior class (the girls vote for king and boys for queen) based on their popularity, school spirit and class participation. The Gridiron Club sponsors the event.

Heather said the whole day "was so exciting!" Her escort to the dance was last year's Homecoming King Ralph Froio, now a freshman at U. Mass. She plans to attend college, majoring in psychology, and when not studying, she works at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home as a nurse's aide.

Sandy is the son of Alison and Alexander Ayer and has been playing football since he was old enough to hold the ball. After mending his knee this year (he is probably going to be in a cast for 6-8 weeks), he hopes to play college ball in the fall. When he's not playing football, he works out at Webb's gym.

Congratulations and good luck to the reigning Homecoming King and Queen!

Ghostly Elizabethan drama in Hingham

The New North Church in Hingham is presenting its own theatre group, The Elizabethan Companie of Wayts & Players, in "Blithe Spirit," Noel Coward's delightful drawing-room comedy, this coming weekend, Friday and Saturday evenings, Oct. 24 and 25.

Due to the demand for tickets for this very popular production, there will be an extra performance on Sunday evening, Oct. 26. The play begins at 8 p.m. each night, at the New North Church, 1 Lincoln Street (across from the Lincoln statue).

Sats for the three final performances may be reserved by calling 749-3970.

Republicans going down the line—with Paul Doane

By Tanna Kasperowicz

"He looks like (U.S.) Representative Gerry Studds; he talks like Gerry Studds — but he's a Republican,"is how a Cohasset resident recently described Paul Doane, the Republican nominee for U.S. Representative.

A more indepth investigation and interview with Doane proved the resident right on several counts. Doane certainly has the Studds glibness, presentation, manner. But he is a Republican, and at that point the Doane and Studds resemblance ends.

Doane, 37, could easily be accused of being an overachiever. He's a professional planner, a lawyer, an investment broker, a former Town Moderator in Harwich. And he says all the key words and phrases over-taxed voters love to hear. But then he goes a step further. He has a plan...a plan for making it all work.

And it's simple:

No. 1 — Reduce tax rates.

No. 2 — Index tax rates to inflation. "The biggest windfall profit is government and the inflation it's caused, not the oil companies."

No. 3 — Change the tax code. "The traditional Democratic approach is to tax business. If you tax it, or people, you discourage it. If you want more productivity, you must subsidize it. The Democratics have subsidized consumption, welfare, unemployment, debt.

"I would encourage providing incentives for making wages, doing business. Our present tax code has no protracted period for replacing machinery. All it's able to depreciate is the machinery's original cost. Write a five-year schedule for heavy machinery; write a 10 year schedule for buildings, structures. Vehicles — five years."

Doane said a simple revision of the tax code could save industry $6 billion dollars and provide 600,000 new jobs in its first year or implementation — putting money back into the economy through savings.

"That same plan would increase employment by 1 percent in the United States," Doane said.

Paul Doane

"Jobs and productivity have suffered a tremendous decline. I'm seeing a gradual decay of vital interests. A 4-5 per cent per year growth target is manageable. The Democratics haven't been able to achieve it. People must be stimulated to save, put money aside, fuel the economic stream by putting money in the bank which begins to provide this country the capacity to expand."

A tax schedule that taxes all income brackets at the same level forces individuals to seek tax shelters, find illegal ways to safeguard earnings and savings, Doane added. "When you raise tax rates, revenues grow with it for awhile — then there's a sharp decline. In England, at the 98 per cent tax bracket, 98 cents of every $1 goes to the government. At that level land rate England collects nothing.

"When you cut your tax rates, you improve revenues. People work more, keep more of what they earn.

Doane said our present rebate approach works on a dis-incentive theory. His method is one which has been used in past years by both Democrats and Republicans. "Now the Democrats are saying it won't work.

"The last tax hike by government was in 1952. But the Federal Government really hasn't needed to raise taxes when it's been raising taxes by inflation.

"It's estimated that the additional tax load to every U.S. family this year alone, through inflation, is $1,000.

What are Doane's chances on Nov. 4?

"People fail to bring this thing to a basic level...if you don't like the system, change the characters. Congressmen pass laws, not Congress.

"You can't just vote for Ronald Reagan. You've got to come down the line."

An adventure in sculpture—Nov. 1

The South Shore Art Center is pleased to present a most stimulating adventure in sculpture with Ruth Mordecai-Slavet. Her recent workshops have been so successful that the Center is once again offering her unusual class on Saturday, Nov. 1 and Saturday, Nov. 8. Enrollments must be made now through the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset in order to insure a place in this workshop.

This workshop will be open to all levels of painters and sculptors.

Skippers demolish East Bridgewater 31 -13

By Rob Tis

The Cohasset football team put it all together on Saturday as it demolished a sturdy East Bridgewater team 31-13.

The Skippers came out fast as they drove downfield to the five where Joe Becker fought his way into the endzone.

Did I make it? Senior Mark Froio, No. 80, peeks back to see if he made the goal. (Derr photo)

The defense held tight and the Skippers were up by 6 going into the second quarter. This proved to be a tough time for the Skippers as they gave up a touchdown on a 6-yard pass play and an extra point, putting them behind by one at the half.

Along with this, Skipper Captain Sandy Ayer tore some ligaments in an injury that could put him out for the season.

Bob Donahue injured his ankle but he is expected to be back within the next two weeks.

The running game although, did not suffer thanks to fullback Jim Kellaher.

After the half time the Skippers exploded. The defense led by Mike Jones, Bob Fessler and company didn't allow the Vikings to move while the offense started to roll.

The Skippers drove down field and once again Joe Becker plowed in from the five for a 12-7 lead.

In the fourth quarter the Skippers got tricky as halfback Jack McNiel connected with Gary Ormingston on a 24-yard pass play for the T.D.

The defense held and the Skippers took over again. This time, Kevin Dooley found Froio in the end zone, wide open, from the 15 yard line.

Paul Buckley booted the ball through the uprights to put the Skippers up by 18. The Vikings finally mounted a threat on offense as they drove for the touchdown, but for the most part the game was over. The Skippers slowly drove downfield and guess who, Joe Becker, ran it in from the five to up the Skippers final tally to 31.

Cross country's McNabb achieves best time

It was a big week for the Skipper cross country team.

Last Tuesday this team faced Abington in what turned out to be just a warmup for the upcoming Middleboro Sachems.

Chris McNabb and Mike Ellis led the team to victory, Chris shattering the 15 minute mark on the 2.7 mile course with 14:54 and Ellis with a 15:13.

Finishing in third place was Cohasset's Jaimie Replogle with a 15:18 and his comrade, Charlie Tebbets, was not far behind with a 15:34 capping fourth place.

Paul Johnson and Mike Glasfeld also finished in the top ten for the Skippers.

On Thursday a celebrity visited Cohasset. His name was Jeff Viera, a runner who many think is the best in the state, the runner who ran the Cohasset course in 13:27 as a freshman, a record no runner has even approached. All this didn't scare Chris McNabb!

The firey Skipper runner ran as fast as any human could over the 2.7 mile course but still it wasn't good enough to match the inhuman time of 13:45 set by Viera, who was running with a pulled groin muscle.

McNabb turned in a personal best of 14:39, one of the best times any Cohasset runner has ever achieved.

Chris McNabb put himself in a class with Cohasset running giants like the famous Scott Bendow, John Zobel and Chris Cahill.

Unfortunately Cohasset did not have the depth behind McNabb that Middleboro had behind Viera.

The Skippers' Mike Ellis managed to place seventh with a 15:31 and Jamie Replogle captured eighth in 15:41. The final was 19:40, Middleboro.

The cars of the future are here today!

No hope for boys' soccer team in state tourney

All existing hopes at the boys' soccer team going to the state tournament were shattered this week as their record sank to a dismal 2-5-2 with a loss and a tie this week.

The Skippers faced Norwell on Tuesday on Milliken Field. The Skippers had a respectable 25 shots on net but the Clipper goalie only let one by him, a drive by Todd Langford.

Despite some good defense and sterling net play by Greg Ratta, Norwell squeaked in two goals good enough for a win in a game that seemed to be dominated by Cohasset.

Thursday marked the return of striker Jim Leonard recovering from a broken wrist. East Bridgewater came out fast and furious as they mounted a 2-0 lead going into the fourth quarter.

The Skippers suddenly woke up and resumed play with their come back in the last quarter, a trait very evident of recent Skipper teams.

Bill Dancomb placed a near perfect corner kick right in front where Jim Leonard booted it it.

Not long after, Leonard tied it up heading in a pass from Mike Nedrow off an indirect kick.

With just under seven minutes to play, the Skippers only needed a goal to win but the ball seemed to waffle and though both teams had their chances neither could convert.

There seems to be no apparent problem with this team. The offense is there with Andy Pottenger and Jim Leonard. The midfield is controlled by All-State Todd Langford. The amazing Ed Booth, Steve Donofrio and Pat (The Cat) Duffy rule on defense and Greg Raffa plays an outstanding game in net.

There is no weakness in this team. They just have to put it all together.

Below — Billy Duncombe maneuvers to kick the ball with two East Bridgewater opponents on his heels. Almost looks like one of those time studies.

Girls' soccer defeats Whitman-Hanson with shut-out

By Rob Tis

The Girls' Soccer Team shut out Whitman-Hanson on Thursday for their second win.

Ellen Digilroramo scored on a pass from Barbie Gurnis to put the Skippers ahead in the first quarter.

Neither team could convert until the fourth quarter when midfielder Pam Johnson booted the ball to striker Barbie Gurnis who put it by the Hanson goalkeep to clinch the game 2-0.

The Skippers' record is now 2-5-1.

Intramural archery shoot-out finals

Last Wednesday Sophs and Frosh held a qualifying round of intermural archery shoot-offs at CHS, with six top archers from both male and female ranks going off to compete in the Thursday finals.

In the final shoot-off, Paul Johnson was leading the boys in the 50 feet range, with Fred Zotos second, and Sam Roebuck, third. After shooting from 75 feet, Fred Zotos ended up in first place with 66 points.

Paul Johnson finished second, with 61 points, and Chris Kuhn finished third, with 51 points.

In the girls competition, Nancy Kuntz led after shootilng from 50 feet, with Therese Lennon in second, and Ellen Candella in third. But after the final shots from 75 feet, Therese Lennon came in first with 64 points; Nancy Kuntz finished second, with 49 points; and Ellen Candella ranked third, with 38 points.

Held over 15 yrs due to contagious laughter

By Laura Doherty

She may be a great cook, an even better singer and everyone knows her laugh is contagious but it's the way she puts all of this together to make people happy that makes Marge Ritter a very special person.

"That's what it's all about — having a good time," Marge will say in reference to the years she's been entertaining just for the fun of it at Hugo's Lighthouse. Her husband Harry, the town's harbormaster, often says she's the only one who has ever been held over for 15 years. "But then, the price is right," she laughs.

Fred Huntwork, one resident who loves to listen to Marge, says it all with, "She loves to sing and people love to listen."

"The people love it and whatever they like, we do," says Lighthouse organist Al Tino.

Marge's singing career began early when she used to line her Cohasset classmates up against the wall to sing to them. "I had a captive audience," she recalls with a chuckle. "I was bigger than they were."

Now, as she sits with mike in hand at the organ bar, the one thing that bothers her is when her listeners sit there with no change in expression. Marge describes one such time when no matter what kind of song she sang, one lady sat there wooden-faced. When at the end of the night, she came over, Marge was a bit apprehensive at what she would say and didn't know whether to be relieved or to laugh when she invited her to sing in her bowling alley in California.

Marge has received many offers to sing professionally — one for a hotel in Arizona, another on a mountain top in Vermont. "But I like to sing when I want to and having to do it would take away the fun," she feels. Marge who'll "sing no matter where I go" has been known to say that she "would sing in a phone booth to a dial tone."

Singing at the Lighthouse means a lot to Marge as well as to those who have heard her. One of her special memories is the couple from out of state who drove all the way back to hear her sing And I Love You So before one of them was to have a serious operation. Another guest told her how she used to come in with her mother to hear her sing and is now returning with her own children.

Marge who never had singing lessons and whose favorite song is "the one I'm learning at the time" will often practice while driving her car. "I've had some strange looks from other drivers when I stop for a light," she admits.

Although she may, at times, have difficulty remembering someone's name, she never forgets a favorite song. However, there are some songs like Misty which she refuses to do. "Can you imagine me singing 'I'm as helpless as a kitten up a tree!'" she asks with a hearty chuckle.

Radio personality Larry Glick also enjoys having Marge on his program and a phone has now been installed in the lounge for when she "goes on the air."

About a year ago, Marge who "has been cooking for years and years" began working in the kitchen at Hugos. "Now you can be here night and day," her friends teased her.

"She keeps the kitchen smiling," says Function Manager Joanne Winters, "and is our biggest asset besides the ocean view." Joanne also has enjoyed listening to Marge sing. "At first she was Mrs. Ritter or the harbormaster's wife but now everyone knows her," she said.

Marge likes to talk about the many good times she's had cooking for people. She especially remembers the international dinners that were held once a month at tables lined up in the Ritter kitchen. Often, as many as 70 of their friends would show up and all of them whether janitor or millionaire had their love of good food in common. At first, Marge did the cooking but "soon they all wanted to cook" laughs Marge and "whatever they were, we did." She especially remembers a seven course Greek dinner cooked by the former John Carzis of Hugos.

There was also the time when Marge found herself cooking suppers for two different functions on the same night — one at a church, the other at the fire station. It would take someone with Marge's easygoing efficiency to bring that one off.

Recently, Marge started walking to lose weight and can often be seen on her regular route near the harbor. "It's almost like cigarettes," she says, "once you get going, you feel so much better that you can get addicted to it." So far, she's lost 25 pounds which is great so long as she never loses that rare ability to make people happy. That makes her such an extra special person.

Learning to like STRONTIUM—90 in her milk

To the Editor:

While visiting Maine recently, I read the Main Paper (Monday, September 22, 1980). One of the letters to the Editor was from R. Murray Campbell, a familiar writer from Cohasset. Once again Mr. Campbell stresses how much nonsense it is to be concerned with radioactive waste. He said: "—it is the concentration that counts, and whether it is kept out of the environment."

Since Mr. Campbell stresses his reliance on "academia" so much, perhaps he would permit the noisy uninformed citizen to pick up a chemistry book and look up the Actinide Series. The poor average citizen, providing he can read, might find that plutonium is a radioactive material which lasts a half a million years. It is that stuff which is stored down at Pilgrim I by the hundreds of pounds. There probably will be more stored down there too, as nobody else seems to want it.

The plutonium doesn't really go anywhere unless it radiates and latches onto a dust particle and settles in your lung. It won't happen too often; and it will just be bothersome if it happens to be you. It's the concentration that counts!

One might read on and see that metallic plutonium burns easily. In fact, plutonium oxide seems to also. Two Hanford Atomic Reservation employees were exposed to a flash fire from plutonium oxide last week. The workers were scrubbed down or sent home with a small amount of ingested powder. It only takes a particle to set up a cancer reaction. It might be interesting to ask these workers 10 or 15 years from now if "is it the concentration that counts?"

Read on — plutonium is water soluble and indeed can combine with other elements, enter the soil and be taken up in plants. Another relative of plutonium, americium, is one of the things the nuclear industry recycles for us in ionizing smoke detectors. It just happens these units end up in the dump, and really get soaked up in our food chain.

The mischief makers should not be concerned with krypton, polonium or cesium. They probably could not pronounce the word much less understand how they affect the lungs, spleen, or ovaries. Whether it is kept out of the environment is another thing. We are told the government will find a solution. So far they haven't found one, unless it is to bury the radioactive waste in salt mines in Carlsbad, New Mexico.

There is the speculation that there might be a high heat reaction and water leakage into the "dry" burial grounds. The residents of Carlsbad wonder if it is buried there it won't also bury them! Don't worry, some genius will discover what to do with it some day, I hope! In the meanwhile we will still "try" to build new plants, and the law of averages will provide a melt down once in every four years. Only two more to go since T.M.I.!

Of course we have an undercapacity in non-oil safe renewables. Why shouldn't the industries, banks, and insurance companies protect their interests, and their major investors, not to speak of government which would rather spend millions for centralized syn-fuels rather than let John Doe get a loan to insulate his house or put on a solar space.

He might even get the feeling of independence from the oil or nuclear industries. He might even put some credence in the bumper sticker which says that the renewable source of energy comes up every morning.

No way, back to the kitchen for me. Albert (Einstein) didn't know a thing. I don't mind subsidizing the nuclear industry through the Price Anderson Act, and therefore through my taxes; I don't mind paying for the fuel clause even if it isn't just fuel; I don't mind if we buy more electricity than we need; I don't mind if we generate war fever over oil (why should we conserve or drive small cars); I don't mind if a little strontium-90 gets into the air, into the soil, into the cows, into the milk. Milk is fattening anyway. I just don't care!

From here on in I will depend on the element of the scientific community which has stature with its peers. How could I ever think they will be the death of us yet!

Weekly crypt contest

The old Cohasset Cryptogram Columnist has returned...with a bevy of puzzles you'll enjoy solving. This year, first correct respondents will receive a prize. In next week's edition of the Mariner we will print the prize-winner's name along with the correct cipher.

Time, date must be noted on all entries. Mail your entry to the Cohasset Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025...or drop your answer off at the Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy by 10 a.m., Monday.

A cryptogram is a puzzle in which every letter stands for another letter. For instance, in the following cryptogram, all A's are really another letter in disguise.

Around Town

A very happy "L" birthday to Richard Delima!

Cohasset was well represented in the Bonnie Bell 10 kilometer race last weekend in Boston. Sue Killilea, Anna Abbruzzese, Mary Cowan and Jackie Dormitzer all had a good, fast race. They missed two more regulars who were unable to run this year, Monica McKenney and Jill Crafts. They watched Sarah Linsley (third place finisher) pull ahead and cheered her on. Sue Killilea said of her third run, "I felt good the whole way. Now I want to do it faster (next year)."

Although the T-shirts they wore said "I can't wait to get to the Ritz," the racers went to the Parker House afterwards for post-partying with spouses, parents, grandparents and little children. The party provided a fitting closure to a great race and a beautiful day. Congratulations to all!

One of the Bonnie Bell runners commented on the improved media coverage this year. She was delighted to see Patti Lyons-Catalano's picture on the front page of the Globe after this year's race. She remembers three years ago when the Bonnie Bell was covered on the second page of the Globe in a disparaging way by two reporters who sat out the race at the Ritz bar.

they are in favor of the Beechwood area keeping its station, and two didn't know.

A person in favor: "The first five minutes of a fire makes all the difference. Beechwood is a growing area. This is a real problem for them." The same person then suggested that I also conduct a poll on the issue of residents of the town who park on sidewalks. I said, maybe another week. He responded: "How do you feel about people parking 16 trucks in their yards? I think it stinks," he said.

"I think the Beechwood Station is so cute, we should keep it," a person in favor said.

Should the town vote to purchase the former Cohasset Motors property? Nineteen persons said no, nine persons said yes, and three persons didn't know.

Persons against the purchase said it would cost too much money. "It's taking real estate off the tax revenue of the town." Another person said: "It could be a cost-effective purchase, if the price is right."

NOV. 4 REFERENDUM QUESTIONS

Will you vote for or against Propositon 2½ ? Residents were split down the middle on this one, with 14 residents saying they would not vote for Prop. 2½, and 17 saying they would. No one didn't have an opinion. A person who said he'd vote for it said: "I may vote against it, I'm concerned in the long run of losing local autonomy.

A person against the proposition: "If it's going to pass, and it is, it's going to be devastating. The public does not know what the drastic results will be."

Yet another person said: "It's not well thought out. Government (state government) will get it (our money) anyway. I'd rather let sleeping dogs lie." A person in favor: "It's the only handle we have to put on the breaks."

Person favoring question: "We could get rid of a lot of dead wood in this town. We've got to smarten up the legislature."

If you are against Proposition 2½ are you then for Question 3, an initiative petition by the Massachusetts Teachers' Association? Twenty-four persons said Question 3 was not a good law. Seven persons said they had not really studied the question.

Whom are you voting for this year? Seventeen said Reagan, one said Carter, five said Anderson would be the lesser of all evils, eight said they didn't know.

"In good conscience, I really can't vote for any of them," one undecided said, adding that she was probably leaning toward Reagan.

"I'm voting for Reagan, but not happily."

Another Pollee on record for Reagan said: "I'll vote for Regan, but I'd really like Dukakis. Wish I knew who Regan's advisors were going to be."

"I feel Reagan will listen to his advisors. The people he's leaning on are all bright characters. That mob out of Atlanta, my God...Carter wrecked Georgia before he got out of there. There are a collection of fools under the capital dome, they ought to be...."

'Sweetest Day' prize won by David Huck

Nice try, G. Rowland Williams of 9 Highland Avenue...but "Sweetest Day," Oct. 18, was not the Mariner's birthday. Our birthday was Oct. 2.

David D. Huck of 79 North Main Street had the first and only correct answer. His "Sweetest Day" prize; a pumpkin ice cream cake from The Strawberry Parfait at 2 Pleasant Street.

Mr. Huck's answer was as follows:

—As I recall, "Sweetest Day," like all other holidays such as Mother's Day, Father's Day, etc., was the brainstorm of an individual (name unknown). It was picked up and promoted by the candy association in Cleveland, Ohio in the early 1930's.

Seeing the success it had there, the National Association of Candymakers promoted it nationwide. I know it caught on in Ohio and Illinois to such an extent that in the late 1930's and early 1940's it became the biggest candy holiday of the year... candy sales exceeding Christmas, Valentine's Day and Mother's Day.

Despite active participation in all the sales promotion campaigns, we at Fanny Farmers as well as most of the other candy companies in the states that I was involved in (New York, Pa., N.J., Virginia, West Virginia, D.C., Maryland and New England) couldn't get it to catch on. I would hate to think that it was because we here in the East didn't love one another as much as those people in Ohio and Illinois.

We had display cards in all Fanny Farmers shop windows, newspaper ads, etc., days before "Sweetest Day," with very little success. In fact, some customers would exclaim "What is this — some special Fanny Farmers' Day?"

It brings back one pleasant memory. The day before "Sweetest Day" in 1940, while visiting our shop in Baltimore, Maryland, a young man rushed into the shop and breathlessly asked if there was any way he could get a three pound box of Fanny Farmers candy delivered to his wife in Cleveland the next day.

Our card (Tomorrow is "Sweetest Day") in the window had hit him like a bolt from the blue. I told him that I believed we could take care of it. We would send a telegram to our studio (manufacturing plant) in Cleveland and the candy would be delivered to his wife, complete with greeting card. To see the metamorphosis of the young man, from a distraught husband to a smiling guy who knew he would be welcomed home with open arms, made my day.

Although the day was started by the candy industry, it wasn't long before florists, department stores, etc., got on the bandwagon. The beauty of "Sweetest Day" was that it was all encompassing. It took care of not only husbands, wives, mothers, fathers, etc., but everyone you wanted to remember. Maybe we should revive it, it might help our sick world as well as our sick economy.

P.S. — I'm getting like the Ancient Mariner, you ask a simple question and you get a treatise of a thousand words.

ED.'S NOTE: We enjoyed your answer, and we and The Strawberry Parfait hope you enjoy the pumpkin cake.)

'Non-essential' services might be 'non-existent'

By John Worley, Director
Cohasset Recreation Department

What becomes of "non-essential" services when budgets are slashed on the local level?

The prediction is at best, an educated guess, however, it is fairly reasonable to assume that services which are considered "non-essential," i.e.: do not protect life and limb directly or indirectly, will be either cut drastically or eliminated entirely.

Recreational and leisure services stand out as the least essential of all "non-essential" services. Perhaps its classification is such because of the extreme difficulties in measuring and evaluating the effects and affects of recreation and leisure activities.

To state that X% of youth did not commit or engage in criminal or delinquent acts because of their involvement in recreational, leisure, or sports activities is virtually impossible.

From a common sense point of view it must be admitted that probabilities are very good that recreational opportunities and involvement deterred some youths at some point in time from finding themselves on the wrong side of the law or engaging in abusive acts.

Recreational involvement and outlet is developed by habit. Programs for the very young remain most important for two reasons. First, for the sake of recreation itself. The opportunity to engage in good-healthy fun.

Secondly, and perhaps most importantly it is the training educational process that takes place — the child who is exposed to recreational opportunities most often becomes the youth, and eventually the adult, who continues to participate in healthy, active, worthwhile past times. Hence, the ground work is laid during early childhood, and it is only the reflection that we see during the teen and adult years.

While it remains statistically impossible to measure the effect of recreation on the future development and actions of a young child, it stands to reason that the child will develop his social/recreational habits in much the same manner all other habits are formed; from childhood exposure, participation, and opportunity.

Universally, recreation budgets are comparatively small in relation to other town budgets. This is particularly true in the New England area of the country. However, much of this is compensated for by the ability of recreation departments to utilize volunteers, and to appropriate goods and services on a donated basis.

The ultimate effect being that recreation departments are capable of having more 'purchase power' than their budgets, per se, would indicate. This does not remain so apparent with most other departments — their purchase power correlates fairly directly with their appropriations.

The basic costs in recreation are for personnel salaries — people to conduct programs for all aged residents and interest groups. Other costs, such as administration, maintainance, equipment/supply purchase, etc. amount to very little.

be required under 2½."

"The publicized figures are based on equalized valuation, which is different from full and fair cash value," Rep. Murray explained. "While the process which created equalized valuation seems proper, the resulting figures are significantly below the actual sale figures in numerous cases studied."

The heart of Proposition 2½, using the equalized valuation makes the ration between property tax revenues and property valuation, higher than it is when full and fair cash value is used. On the basis of actual full and fair cash value, some communities may find that no property tax reduction would be required under Proposition 2½.

"They may even find that property taxes could increase and still remain under the 2½ limit. Other numicipalities may find a smaller reduction than anticipated.

She added, "Because of the difficulty in finding and maintaining full and fair cash value for each piece of property, the Department of Revenue, the Massachusetts Legislature, or the courts may allow equalized valuation to be used to implement Proposition 2½. If this is the case, the conflict will be decided in favor of the lower valuation and the larger reeduction in property tax revenues."

"One further factor complicates this problem," Murray said, "The equalized valuation process incorporates increases in property value for 1978 and the first half of 1979, only. By the time Proposition 2½ would be administered under the requirements of the provision, more than a year of further growth in property values will have taken place."

Some of Life's little (and bigger) perplexities

By Lois Martin

One could justifiably assume that on reaching an age snugly within the 40s, she'd have solved a lot of life's little mysteries. We tend to be cognizant of many things, the difference between fog and clouds, the meaning of osmosis and a good handle on transient words, like 'detente.'

Ah, but there's so much left to understand. And I suggest I'd be optimisitic thinking all shadows will lift. I'm puzzled still by these things among others.

—How come there's a door on the second story of the building within which I work...and there are no stairs, no fire escape, no nothing ...just that door to a two story drop.

PATCHES

—And I don't get why I've got one mirror (on the passenger side) on my new car which says, "OBJECTS IN MIRROR ARE CLOSER THAN THEY APPEAR." Why would anyone give me a mirror like that. Who wants a mirror there that doesn't reflect faithfully to reality?

—Speaking of my car, how come my husband got a letter from that Chevrolet company complimenting his good taste on selecting 'his' 1980 Monza when I'm the one who signed and paid for it.

—Why is it I never get any decent mail on Saturdays. In theory the good stuff should come on weekends, not on Monday.

—Confusing...George Brett's scheduling of a delicate operation during World Series times...even we spectators clear our calendars for that.

—Puzzling what a naive bang some of us get out life's little treats — like seeing the new picture when you turn over the calendar to the next month... or buying a brand new stamp as a personal crusade or endorsement. This month I'm supporting Edith Wharton (no small job if you've seen her stamp).

—Why would anyone really want to 'Think Generic' like those buttons say...that's like thinking No Name, the antithesis of the brand name.

—Could it be that the debate has displaced the fuel but is ultimately more violent?

—Why do people insist on pointing and giggling at Queen Elizabeth's hats? Accept the fact that we shall not live to see Elizabeth hatless in our lifetime. That's another thing, I'm always hearing "Not in our lifetime..." What's going to be in our lifetime?"

—How come I've been appointed to oversee a young person who addresses mail to "Miss America" and has a return address of "Mr. Universe." (Takes after his father's side of the family.)

—Wonder if anyone has thought of displacing non-productive diplomacy, official statements, nuclear pacts and non-interference policies with a warm hug between ambassadors and heads of state as a means of avoiding WWIII.

—Astounding that in this age of care-lessness, there's a husband around who's kind enough to withhold the book "The Stand," until his wife gets over the flu. Seems the story's about how most of the population is wiped out by influenza.

—In all the years since the family's been around, no one has come up with a better slogan for most of us than, "Our family does pretty well, all things considered."

—But the encouraging common sense behind my favorite quote of the week is no mystery to me: "Any good ship can take a little bit of rocking."

Adding some class...to the

By Chet Ellis

Poetry is a construction of the English language that avid newspaper readers rarely get to sample. It is an art form that relates to news journalism the same way that expressionism relates to house painting. It requires real concentration to read and enjoy, and it's worth the effort.

Over the past few months my family met and began corresponding with a young man from England who has, in addition to a most regular and voluminous correspondence, included a number of his poems for our enjoyment. I thought I would share some of them with readers of the Mariner.

In addition to providing a respite from politics, budgets, obituaries and the police log it, as Mickey Spillane would say, adds a little class to the joint.

Ergo, the first of a series of poems from Colin, poet laureate of Tiddington Castle.

Love's Voyager

Attempting to reason
Writing to rhyme
Angry at distance
Frustrated with time
Devoid of direction
Whilst gazing at stars
That steer men to countries
Whose shores seem so far.

Chance conversations
That mention your name
Or stirred by a song
That has secret fame
Leaning on shoulders
Relating events
Which may sound so trivial
Which are so immense.

As if being a prisoner
Sentenced to serve
Crying on letters
Memories preserved
Yet comforting thoughts
Like the promise of 'soon,
If not the same land
We share the same moon.

Sometimes a death
Sometimes a ball
The opening doors
That lead onto walls
Fulfilment and failure
Why does it persist?
If I understood love
It wouldn't exist.

No old New England town was ever quite complete without a meeting place. Huddled beneath the spire of the white, wooden church was the inevitable little one-story hall for the GAR, the Grange and holiday pageants. The lives of the women revolved around their home, church and get-togethers for quilting bees, corn huskings, or weddings. Some things never change and to this day, we have our potluck suppers, harvest fairs and ladies luncheons. In Norwell, the First Parish Church just celebrated its 150th anniversary and next Saturday's Harvest Fair is part of an old tradition. At the Harvest Supper last week a sumptuous meal was served by Ida Jo Ross and Eleanor Gaudette and their committee. Barbara Meecham always does dessert for 150 and if you are planning a function, you might want to try this popular

APPLE CRISP

12 qts. Baldwin apples, about 34 lb.
2 c. water divided among four large pans [16x12x3] and one medium pan [14x9.5x2.25].
1/2 c. lemon juice
Divide above three ingredients between pans.
Topping:
7 lb. light brown sugar
1 1/4 lb. dry milk [2 3-qt. pkgs.]
1 3/4 lb. flour [7 c. all-purpose, sifted]
3 3/4 c. quick-cooking oatmeal
3 1/2 tsp. cinnamon
2 1/2 tsp. salt
3 lb. margarine

Topping can be made night before. Cut margarine into dry ingredients with pastry cutter. Place in large container to store overnight. Using a baby scale, set to zero with pan on it. Add sliced apples till it reads 7 lbs. Sprinkle with water/lemon juice mixture and add 3 lb. apples and topping. Bake large pans one hour and medium pan 45 min., approximately.

On the third Wednesday of each month, women gather in the Parish House in Marshfield Hills for Community League where luncheon is always followed by a program. This season began with Jeffrey Pontz of the Commonwealth Winery, a new working winery located in historic Cordage Park in Plymouth. He not only delighted his audience with an informal talk on how wines are made, but provided samples to go with this quiche served by Diane Kirkland and her committee.

IMPOSSIBLE VEGETABLE PIE

2 c. chopped Zucchini
1 c. chopped tomato
1/2 c. chopped onion
3/4 c. Bisquick
1/2 c. grated Parmesan cheese
3 eggs, slightly beaten
1/2 c. vegetable oil
2 T snipped parsley
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. seasoned salt
1/2 tsp. oregano
Dash pepper
1 clove garlic, minced, or garlic powder to taste

Mix all ingredients. Spread in greased 10" pie pan. Bake at 350 degrees until golden brown, about 30 min. Pie is done when knife inserted in center comes out clean. Let sit for several minutes before serving.

Bishop and Mrs. Dennis Lythgoe of the Mormon Church in Hingham held an open house recently and decided to try out a new recipe for punch. Their guests were quick to ask for their usual "Slush," an old family recipe of Marti's. When the Womens' Relief Society held their opening social several weeks ago, they happily sipped their favoriteSlush before sitting down to dinner served by Sue Emerson and her committee. This recipe makes 97 four-ounce servings.

2 c. sugar
4 c. water
Bring to boil and cool. Add:
1 small can frozen orange juice and 1 can lemon juice
1 46-ounce can pineapple juice
4 or 5 bananas pureed in blender

Freeze above mixture and thaw for 30 min. before serving. Mix base with eight liters of gingerale, Sprite or Seven-Up.

Capital Budget

6-2 vote from the Advisory Committee recommending the purchase of the 3A property..."Whether of not Prop. 2½ passes," stong recommendations for purchase from Town department heads, and Selectmen.

Budget committee member William Kelley said he feels Cohasset Motors is overpriced and would not adequately serve the Town's needs. Richard Avery calculated that it presently costs the Town $8,000 a year for property rentals, as opposed to the $47,000 a year the 3A purchase would cost the Town.

All members were in agreement that taxpayers could better afford a potential $150,000 price tag for a new building on Town-owned property, than the $500,000 (the committee said the total package, including interest, would run in the neighborhood of $780,000) price tag on the Cohasset Motors property.

"The cost of a bond for a building at the Gravel Pit would be $13,000, according to Avery.

should be used by nonsectarian worshippers only. According to Nazarene Minister Scott Newell, the court dismissed the Nazarenes' charge.

While the sectarianism of the Hellenic Association did not appear to be a large issue with the two heirs interviewed this week, it was brought up by both parties.

"He (Albert Pope) felt stongly about the right of people to worship in the way they wished," an heir stated.

McKinnon record hop Nov. 5

The Committee to Re-Elect Senator Allan R. McKinnon (D- Norfolk and Plymouth) will sponsor a "Pre-Election Record Hop" in honor of Senator McKinnon on Friday, Oct. 31 from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Lantana in Randolph.

The theme of the evening will be "Take a Sentimental Journey" and will feature dancing to music from the 30's through the 70's, highlighting hits from the big bands and the swing era. Music will be provided by professional disc jockey, David Oksanen of Music Distributors of New England.

Guests will be treated to their all-time favorites from such famous artists as Glenn Miller, Jo Stafford, Tommy Dorsey, Frank Sinatra, Bobby Vinton and Nat King Cole, to name just a few.

Tickets for the record hop are priced at $5 per person and may be obtained by contacting Dorothy Durgin at 337-3343 or Theresa Gunther at 659-4449.

Ford — Murray both forecast wins in state representative race

By Tanna Kasperowicz

While voters of this district certainly do want to send a message to their legislators, it is unclear whether they wish to replace their state senator or representative.

Hull is impressed by Ted Ford, Democratic nominee for State Representative, Hull officials say. "In many ways he's a younger, male, Mary Jeanette Murray. But in Hull, and everywhere, it will be McKinnon and Murray."

The unofficial word is that "Ford will do better than anybody could have," but he won't top the ticket. Mary Jeanette represents her constituents so well," one Hull official said.

Reached for comment early this week, Ford said voter I.D. polls show him winning in Cohasset by a few percentage points, and "We're doing well in Hull. I heard recently that Mrs. Murray has already conceded Hull to us."

In Hingham, however, Ford admits he has a recognition problem. "Hingham is a big question mark. I've had the same recognition problem there all along. Hingham will acount for 55 per cent of the total vote." But he still feels he and Rep. Murray are in a "real horse race."

Ford feels good about his campaign and voters appear to feel good about him. "We've campaigned on the hard issues. We've appealed to the people, caught their imagination and their respect."

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray anticipates a "good" win. She said the reaction to her campaign has been "Fantastic! People say, we're able to call you. You listen. You respond."

Rep. Murray says she's confident of receiving a large Hingham vote. Two years ago she beat former representative Caroline Stouffer by 2,000 votes in Hingham — Stouffer's home town. And she beat her in every Hingham precinct. Hull was a different story. Stouffer had represented Hull for two years. While Rep. Murray was campaigning in Hull for the first time, as a result of a state redistricting. After two years of having serviced Hull, she feels she's in a comfortable situation.

"People may be voting to send their legislators a message through Proposition 2½, but I had the message a long time ago. I think people are fed up."

Rep. Murray said she's been talking to Independents and Democrats — and wouldn't be surprised about a Reagan win in her district. "I haven't heard Carter mentioned once."

Seven questions

Proposition 2½ (Question 2) on the Nov. 4 Election Ballot has certainly gotten the public's rapt attention over past weeks. Town government officials are in a tailspin over the possibility of its being passed, while its proponents are crying for tax reform.

Special TM officially votes to adjourn to Nov. 13

By Tanna Kasperowicz

On a voice vote, a quorumless Oct. 28 Special Town Meeting officially voted to adjourn itself until Thursday, Nov. 13. This is one of the few actions which a quorumless Town Meeting may take, if an action is not otherwise directed by bylaw. At 7:45 p.m., 154 people (200 is a quorum) were registered to vote.

Previous to this session of a quorumless Special Town Meeting, much adieu had been made about certain groups and individuals pledging to show up for the Special, in spite of the fact that town officials, including Selectmen and the Advisory Committee, had agreed that it would not be wise to hold this Special in view of the (what else?) pending passage of Prop. 2½.

Early-on, there appeared to be no real disagreement with this decision. Lot Bates, chairman of the Fire Station Study Committee, didn't like the decision. He said at a Town Government Structure Committee meeting that the people should not be threatened by Prop. 2½.

However, following closely on the heels of an unofficial opinion that Selectmen should warn the citizenry it was agreed by town officials that the Special Town Meeting should be adjourned, another opinion was made.

That opinion was more or less "dropped" at a meeting of the Advisory Committee several weeks ago. Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton mentioned, matter-of-factly, that Town Counsel had advised Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark that the petition article (Number 12) on the Special Warrant (Oct. 28) was not a legal article.

That article happens to deal with a bylaw change,

Present and pending regs. could affect League

By Laura Doherty

In the event that Proposition 2½ should pass, the Social Service League of Cohasset hopes to work together with Board of Health members on budget cuts, says league president, Mrs. Sue Mullet.

Mrs. Mullet was responding to an article in one of the local papers that reported a health board member's suggestion that the board's larger budget items, such as the League's nursing services, be cut in favor of hiring a part-time nurse in the event that Proposition 2½ passes.

Each year, Mrs. Mullet explained, in addition to its own services, the League contracts with the health board to perform specific services for them and a budget is submitted to them on what the board of health related services will be.

The contract between the two boards runs for the fiscal year, until June of 1981.

Health Board Chairman, Marilyn Sweeney, said that the cut in the League's nursing services had been considered by her board but was not included in a letter to the advisory board of suggested budget cuts. She did not, however, dismiss the possibility that such a cut could be reconsidered in the future if for instance the board is mandated by the state to give wage increases to health department employees.

According to Mrs. Sweeney, other town health boards have hired their own nurse. She pointed out that if the health board were to hire its own part-time nurse, it would mean an increase in the administrative work of the health agent.

The League was founded by a group of Cohasset women in 1912 for "the betterment of the town along social and charitable lines." A district nurse was hired to provide nursing care and league members also cared for the poor particularly by distributing clothing.

Resident sues Stripper Corio for ½ M

Remember Old Scollay Square? Cohasset resident and songwriter Rik Tinory wrote it, Stripper Ann Corio and her This Was Burlesque show, comprised of Pinky Lee, Phoenix Flame, Lady Eryka and others performed it in violation of copyright laws approximately three years ago, and the court date is tentatively set for Nov. 3 — Boston Federal Court.

Tinory said he was informed by several people in 1977 that Ms. Corio was allegedly using his song Remember Old Scollay Square in her This Was Burlesque shows in Florida and New York, camouflaged under the name Remember The Old Howard.

When Ms. Corio's troupe hit the South Shore Music Circus three years ago, she was served by Federal Marshals, and only after being served, stopped performing it, according to Tinory.

Tinory's lawyer, Nick Abraham, said in a recent phone interview that his client will be suing Ms. Corio and her troupe on the federal, punitive statute which provides for automatic damages for damages which are not ascertainable.

"It's an unusual situation, and two colorful people will be battling it out," Abraham said of both Ms. Corio and his client, Tinory. He added that it won't be the first time an author has sued for copyright infringement, "This may be the first case under the new, 1977 amended copyright law."

Cohasset's week

Pope record

Comedian Bob Hope was recently presented a recorded album of Pope John Paul II, as recorded by Cohasset resident Rik Tinory, visit to Boston.

After receiving the album Hope quipped, "Talk about the greatest show on earth. Pope John Paul II recorded live has to be it."

Hope also remarked that his wife Deloris was thrilled to receive the album. Deloris is a Roman Catholic while Hope is not. The album was recorded on Boston Common in what was called "the largest recording session in history" with over 500,000 people present, on the rainy day of October 1, 1979.

The official album is the only recording commissioned by the Archdiocese of Boston available through Monsignor Andrew F. Connell-Director, Propagation of the Faith, 49 Franklin Street, Boston, Mass. 02110. Proceeds are going to a variety of charities around the world.

E.J. Flynn Engineers of Boston were hired by the Board of Health and the Dump Study Committee last week to conduct a $10,000 geo-hydrological study of the town dump.

Hung Saturday

Old Glory finally got hung, thanks to some strong-arming by Clark Chatterton, Charlie "Pat" McCarthy, Ed Mulvey and Fred Johansen at Selectmen's meeting last week.

Selectmen appeared to be having real difficulty in setting the date for the flag to go up the Town Common pole. "We don't want to wait until St. Patty's Day," McCarthy said.

Everything went off Saturday morning without a hitch. If you've been following the story of this special, special flag in past issues of the Mariner, you'll remember that Clark Chatterton, with a little help from his friends, practically single-handedly raised the funds for the new flag by selling hundreds and hundreds of Cohasset hats.

About 25 onlookers were present for the ceremony, including Burt Pratt, who "came to get my $4.50 worth," he said, having purchased a Chatterton hat. Burt is also a fence viewer in the town, and he related the fact that "Eagle Beek" McSweeney used to paint the Town Common Flag Pole — "half smashed." According to Pratt, Eagle Beek allegedly was walking along the cliff of the Atlantic House while it was burning, and was so smashed he didn't know it was burning.

Rik Tinory presents Bob Hope with Pope album; young patriots on Town Common Saturday for flag-raising ceremony.

Girl Scouts Tara Volungis, Rebecca McCarthy and Charlotte Begley and Cub Scout John Reed were present for the ceremony. Marie McCarthy led the civic-minded group in the singing of It's A Grand Old Flag and the pledge of allegiance.

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle, who stirred up all the fuss about getting a new, properly-fitting flag in the first place, was not present for the ceremony.

What now?

Briarwood Lane is still open. Last spring Annual Town Meeting voted to block the road at the point where it allows access to school property. Just thought we'd point that out.

Musical theft

Tuesday, Oct. 21 school officials reported approximately $1,500 worth of instruments missing from the CHS music room. According to Police Officer Carmelo Conte, two guitars, three amplifiers, two mikes, a base guitar and a regular guitar were taken. "There was no break — officials feel the instruments were taken sometime over the weekend of the 18th," Conte said.

Local pro-family group hears speakers at Hugo's

Dr. Margaret Whyte, an English pediatrician, and Edward F. King, former Republican candidate for governor of Massahcusetts, received standing ovations for remarks made at a Pro-Family gathering at Hugo's last week.

Both individuals described the measures by which they felt the family unit was being attacked, and the importance of the quality of family life.

"I think people who are attacking the family are failures themselves, they want everybody else to fail so they won't feel so badly," Dr. Whyte said.

"In England we had sex education for a long time. Sometimes they call it preparation for family life. Before you get married and have a family you need to have a degree in international gymnastics. No commitment is neccessary, it's purely a physical experience."

Dr. Whyte added that she felt the real enemy of the Women's Movement is nature. "Feminists are fighting nature. But we only have one body. It's not a rehearsal body. You can't turn it in when the fun's over."

During the International Year of the Child in England, Dr. Whyte said, "Officials didn't want the abortion issue muddying up the year. Instead, they set up a children's law center and then held a party for children in Hyde's Park where they gave them all a huge, big sugar lollypop."

King said the family is daily being assaulted by the mass media with comedy about adultry, casual cohabitation. "There are jokes and serious drama about every kind of sickness and perversion.

King spoke of a very moving experience, when after he had appeared on a radio talk show on the Right to Life platform, a young women called him at his office later that afternoon.

She told King that whether he won or loss his bid for governor of the state, "Somebody will be alive because of you." The woman had made and then cancelled an appointment for an abortion after hearing King's though on pro-family, pro-life.

When King quoted Thomas Wolfe as saying there is no spectacle more beautiful than the act of a woman cooking dinner for someone she loves, women in the primarily female audience disagreed through their sighs.

"That's questionable," Nancy O'Toole said.

Editorials

From the Mariner mailbag

During pressing times, local newspapers hear from a number of special interest groups seeking to explain positions on ballot questions. We thought we'd share a few of those messages, with you, this week. . . .

Ralph Rivkind, vice president of public affairs for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, urges us not to be confused on Question No. 7 on the ballot. "People who favor Pilgrim II and the use of Nuclear energy should vote NO on Question 7."

Rivkind said the Chamber continues to support the development of nuclear energy, mainly as a need for future energy security, lower electric costs, and a reduction of the regions' dependence on foreign oil by 10-12 million barrels annually. "In addition, construction of Pilgrim II will result in hundreds of construction jobs and several hundreds of full time jobs," Rivkind said.

Michael Huack of Hingham, a member of the South Shore Safe Energy Alliance which placed the nuclear question on the ballot, says nuclear power in 1979 displaced the same amount of oil that could be saved by consuming 3 per cent less gasoline. He adds: "Over 200,000 solar thermal systems have been installed in the U.S. in the last seven years." Huack asks for a YES vote on Question 7.

Eric Swider, president of The New England Council, Inc. says "Vote NO" on the question. "Solar, biomass, wind, hydro and other alternatives are all legitimate answers. However, they cannot be expected to supply Massachusetts or New England with significant percentages of our total energy requirements until sometime around the year 2000; if then.

"That leaves nuclear power in Massachusetts as a necessary part of the energy mix. Without it, the price of electricity will increase substantially, supplies will become dangerously low, job opportunities will shrink, and our economic future will darken considerably."

PROP. 2½ [QUESTION 2]

Representative William G. Robinson, (House Republican Floor Leader, R-Melrose) asks for a YES vote on Question 2. Since 1932, Robinson tells us, the legislature has considered more than a hundred tax reform proposals. "Not one has been implemented. The legislature has been consistently unresponsible to the needs of the taxpayer. Prop. 2½ may well be our last chance in this generation for property tax relief."

VOTE NO on Question 2, Susan Battles, a press coordinator for "The Vote NO on Question 2 Committee." "If only Massachusetts had billions of spare dollars, but of course it doesn't. Unlike California, it hasn't reformed its income taxes. We've rejected a graduated income tax four times. Our sales tax is one of the mildest in the country. Not surprisingly, our property tax makes up the difference."

Extras from your pocket, Murray says

"In some 80 percent of the communities where the property tax levy has been certified, taxpayers are seeing the highest increase in three years, "Rep. Murray said this week.

"At the same time, the state has recently compiled its preliminary year-end financial report which shows that there is $91 million left over from this fiscal year. That money should be applied directly and immediately to the cities and towns to alleviate the property tax increases.

"If this $91 million were distributed through the local aid formula the effects of the property tax increases would be offset in Cohasset by $60,751, in Hingham by $164,636 and in Hull by $149,490.

"The people clearly need, and want, tax relief," Rep. Murray said. "If, when the legislature meets in November, we can agree to provide real property tax relief through this formula, we will have accomplished a great deal of good."

The formula used by Mary Jeanette in her plan is the same formula used to determine the amount of local aid money a community receives. The figures applied to the distribution of the $91 million reversion (or surplus) money were prepared by the Department of Revenue.

"This money should not be considered 'extra money,' said Rep. Murray. "It came from the taxpayer, and it should be returned to the taxpayer."

Rep. Murray has consistently voted on legislation and amendments to return monies back to the cities and towns.

Gambling a disaster

Ted Ford, candidate for State Representative, last week announced his opposition to legalized casino gambling in Hull.

At a meeting of Democrats held Oct. 23 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O'Meara, 5 Cushing Street, Ted Ford said that: "Legalized casino gambling would be a disaster for Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset, and I am completely opposed to it.

"I am surprised," said Ford, "that my opponent, Mrs. Murray, has stated that she would vote in the House of Representatives to allow Hull to have legalized casino gambling. Legalized casino gambl-

3-A purchase not a 'covered wagon' approach

(ED.'S NOTE: In the following letter Lot Bates, chairman of the Town's Fire Station Study Committee, responds to a letter which was not previously published in the Mariner. While we do not usually publish letters which take issue with articles or editorials which we have not published, we felt the thrust of Bates' rebuttal was stated clearly enough to do so in this instance.)

To the Editor:

Charles Zimmerman's letter opposing the purchase by the town of Cohasset of the Cohasset Motors property on route 3A is so full of apparently deliberate misrepresentations and sheer nonsense that it demands rebuttal.

In the first place, the town is not being asked "to spend over a half million dollars for a firehouse." It is being asked to take advantage of a rare (probably once-in-a-lifetime) opportunity to solve several long-standing problems of equipment-housing, protection and maintenance in a way that should be satisfactory for many, many years to come.

To be sure, the housing of two fire engines is part of the package, but the property will also provide adequate, efficient, centralized facilities for the street department, the tree and park department and the wire department, as well as a protected area for storage of school buses. In each case the present facilities are scattered, obsolete, inadequate and costly to operate. Altogether, the cost of present operations is estimated at over $16,000 annually and it has been further estimated that some of this property could be sold for as much as $100,000.

In the second place, the property is not simply "an old garage." The buildings are modern, structurally sound, durable (aluminum covered) and well-maintained. They contain basic fixtures badly needed for the maintenance of town vehicles. But even beyond the structures, the property contains seven acres, ideally located for such a central facility or additional use.

The general area was, in fact, recommended years ago by the most comprehensive professional study of the town ever made. The property is already graded, drainage provided, much of it surfaced, protected by a chain link fence, attractively landscaped and has approved exits and entrances on 3A.

As to Zimmerman's recommendations, if our plan for these facilities is "a covered wagon approach," then his are in a far-off dream world, not the real world. Zimmerman as much as recommends that because it is sometimes impossible to put out fires we should just let the buildings burn to the ground and let people die without trying to help.

In the real world we have wooden houses and a fire department, the town has authorized expensive new equipment, and I believe the equipment should be properly housed and stationed for most efficient coverage and manning. The 3A property is far and away the most practical way to give the town fire protection with existing manpower and equipment . . . . one good location instead of two ancient, inadequate buildings that must be manned to be of any use at all. It might even lead to further consolidation.

No one can quarrel with Zimmerman's plea for fire prevention. It may be that in some distant future, in a miraculous technical age, when we have converted to completely fireproof houses, watched over by electronic marvels, we can get rid of fire departments.

But I would much rather have the assignment of persuading people that the route 3A property is the town's best buy of our lives than to try to persuade people to do away with the fire department because a fire prevention program will make it unnecessary.

Dorchester pottery talk in November

An illustrated talk on the famous Dorchester pottery that was made for years in a modest factory just off what is now Morrissey Boulevard will be presented at a dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society to be held in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian parish house Tuesday, Nov. 18.

Dinner will be served at 6:30, with a short business meeting following and the talk at 8 p.m. The charge will be $5 and reservations may be made with Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr., 383-0773.

The speaker will be Mrs. Doris Oberg of Quincy, a prominent local historian, photographer and craftsman. She will illustrate the talk with pictures that are considered collectors' items and will answer questions about pottery brought to the meeting.

Vote for TED FORD

He can do a better job.

When Ted Ford first announced his candidacy in the Mariner on May 15, 1980, he said "I am running because this is a job for which I am well suited. Hingham, Hull and Cohasset need the most effective, articulate and capable spokesman they can get to represent their interests at the State House. I can do a better job."

Since that announcement, Ted Ford has demonstrated his firm grasp of local issues and his qualifications for the job. On September 11, before the Primary, the Boston Globe endorsed Ted Ford, saying " . . . there are several races in which the voters will have an opportunity to affect measurably the quality of their legislative representation . . . Theodore Ford of Cohasset, a former Foreign Service officer, is well-regarded by Democrats seeking an effective challenge to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) . . ."

Ted won a decisive victory in the Democratic primary and is now running an energetic campaign to win the general election on Nov. 4. Last week, the Cohasset Mirror endorsed Ted Ford, saying that his stands on environmental and transportation issues "make him the best choice."

Ted Ford has taken strong positions FOR expanded bus service and expanded commuter boat service to Hingham, Hull and Cohasset, AGAINST Proposition 2½ and FOR property tax relief and responsible tax reform. Ted Ford thinks a State Representative should have a long range perspective to affectively deal with the problems of the South Shore. Ted Ford will do a better job.

" I would like to thank the dozens of supporters who, in the past two months, have held signs, addressed letters, made phone calls, stuffed envelopes, handed out literature, and in many other ways helped the campaign.

"I'd also like to thank the many people who contributed to the campaign treasury. Those many contributions, most of them under $25, have helped enormously."

"Thank you.

"The campaign is now in its last week. A strong campaign effort in the next few days could spell the difference between victory and defeat.

"I know that if we all go out there and work hard in these final days, we will be victorious. Let's go for it."

Vote Ted Ford. He has the experience, competence, and the economic training to best serve you as your next State Representative.

Elect Theodore M. Ford

Tony Laugelle won a color TV set; Mrs. Charles Ahl got the deluxe oven; Margaret Monroe won the cookware set.

N.L. Megathlen got the 10 pound lobster, and Bill Ripley got the dinner for two at Hugo's.

Mrs. McGrath also enclosed a nice note thanking the Mariner for past publicity — and she's welcome!

☐Gwendolyn Smith, daughter of Robert and Suzanne Smith, 370 North Main St., is a participant in the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra's summer camp in Poland Spring, Maine.

A violinist, Gwendolyn has traveled abroad twice with the Orchestra over the past 14 months. She is a junior at Cohasset High School, where she earned high honors last year.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

☐The Feola retirement dinner group met recently for one last time...and congratulated themselves for a job well done! Eric Pearson turned 52 years old at that meeting.

☐One last try — David Terry, Dave Campbell and Bill O'Brien were the other three Cohasset runners who joined Jaycees Roy Fitzsimmons and friends in the McGillivrary "Run for their Dreams" Marathon recently. (Last try because the powers that be seem to keep losing your names) O'Brien ran the farthest ever — 12 miles — and is nicely recovered now from the effort.

☐Everyone must be staying in these days and counting the leaves as they blow off the trees. There were no births, promotions, awards, birthday or anniversary parties (that we heard of)...one "source" even said she didn't bake a cake all week!

☐Remember when you're digging into your pockets for candy money at the supermarket this week for Halloween, to save some change for the trick-or-treaters who may stop at your door with a UNICEF box. Don't shortchange those who remember children in faraway lands who need our help.

☐The chances were one-in-a-thousand, but Evelyn Pearson's raffle ticket beat the odds! She won the Cohasset Community Garden Club's flower garden quilt at last week's drawing at the Club's monthly meeting. Chances were sold for five months, from last May until just before the drawing! The Club estimates that they raised $600 which will be used for the Lothrop House gardens.

The hand-appliqued quilt was organized and designed by Patty Knowles and Pat Eaton, who along with Doris Swain, Mrs. Rowland Gould, Mrs. Josephs, Mrs. Robert Wilson, Mrs. Hubbell, Roberta Raffa, Hope Halloran, Linda Halloran and Andy Marshall, stitched the squares and put the flowers-on-white twin size quilt together.

"It didn't take very long," said Patty Knowles. "We started it in March and it was all done by June. It was a lot of fun." Everyone in the Club was pleased that a member won it and that they were able to witness her surprise and delight at the drawing.

☐The Community Garden Club still has plenty of their popular Cohasset Entertains cookbooks around town in most stores. They make wonderful gifts.

Service League

In 1912, the League broadened its goals to include the concept of helping families to help themselves. Volunteers were encouraged to become involved in serving their community in a variety of ways. In 1946, the League was incorporated as a voluntary, nonprofit agency with the purpose of providing skilled nursing care, professional counseling and other health services.

Although services have changed with the times and town growth, Mrs. Mullet notes that the League still maintains "a spirit of caring and responsiveness to the needs of residents. The staff includes three part-time nurses, a social worker, secretary and many volunteers.

The main source of funding for the League is its consignment shop at Cushing Plaza which is staffed by more than 100 volunteers. More than 1500 consigners bring their clothing each year to be sold at reasonable prices.

Last August, the League was forced to discontinue its home nursing program as a result of new medicare and medicaid regulations. "These regulations mandated top heavy administrative staff and a need for on call 24 hours a day nursing which made it impossible for our small agency to continue this service," notes Mrs. Mullet. She continues that many small agencies are being forced out of this service even though they provide excellent care in their communities.

Before withdrawing from the home nursing program, the League made arrangements with the Visiting Nurses Association of the South Shore to provide care to homebound Cohasset patients. The League, however, continues to offer nursing services to all patients who can come to its office on South Main Street.

Services performed for the board of health include the Mantoux Tests for T.B., blood pressure screening, urine testing and health consultations. In addition, keep well, flu, hypertension and other special clinics are scheduled throughout the year. Also, nurses make assessment home visits to insure the welfare of any resident in need.

A social worker provides individual and marital counseling and serves as a referral to other agencies and programs. Recently, the League received a grant from South Shore Home Care Services for Geriatric counseling for elders and relatives which will involve both nurses and the social worker.

They will evaluate health and social needs and the elder's ability to remain at home with supportive community services. Support to the family of the elder and information and guidance in dealing with unfamiliar health, financial and other social systems will be provided.

Mrs. Mullet notes that more than 50 volunteers deliver meals on wheels daily to the elderly homebound and drive the Senior Citizen Shuttle. In addition, she continues, the League has recently undertaken a telephone survey to determine present unmet needs in the community.

"If Proposition 2½ passes, the League will have to trim its budget. We plan to work together with the board of health in an effort to trim services without jeapordizing the health needs of town citizens."

FLORAL ARRANGING

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a six week floral arranging and design class to be held Mondays, 12:30 p.m. - 2 p.m., in the Town Hall auditorium.

The fee for the six week program will be $10 per person. Also, small weekly costs for materials and flowers will be charged on a pay-as-you-go basis. If interested please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 to register. Classes are scheduled to begin on Monday, Nov. 10.

U.S.C.G.A. PUBLIC EDUCATION COURSE

The Cohasset Recreation Department and the United States Coast Guard Auxillary will cosponsor a Public Education Course designed for boating safety, seamanship, and navigation principals. Registration will be held in room 107 of Cohasset High School on Monday evening, Oct. 27, from 7 - 8:30 p.m. The only cost for the program is a minimal charge for materials. On Tuesday, November 4th, you can send a leader to the State Senate

. . . and he's qualified.

- For nine years a Duxbury Selectman
- MBTA Advisory Board member
- Local Government Advisory Committee- advised Governors Dukakis and King
- President of the Massachusetts Selectman's Association

Paul Barber consistently demonstrates leadership in public office.

Paul is an effective leader because he is sensitive to your interests.

Like YOU, he supports tax reforms to broaden our tax base and relieve your property tax.
His opponent does not.

Like YOU, he favors a reduction in state spending.
His opponent votes for larger and larger state budgets.

Like YOU, he favors increased state aid to cities and towns, helping them reduce your property tax.
His opponent does not.

Prosaic painter Farbush wants year off — to paint!!

By Karin Bartow

Rosalind Farbush doesn't exaggerate when she tells you she is a prolific painter. Forty years of painting spills throughout her Cohasset home. Turquoise from Haiti seeps out from a stack of paintings lined up against the livingroom wall; a Cardinal's brilliant red frock dignifies the sitting room wall; a stunning black portrait edges the hallway. The basement is stacked with proteges of current works underway in her first floor studio.

"I love to paint. I can't paint enough!" Farbush is not your typical artist. Diminutive and smiling, she is not cloudy about her art. It is abstract, but not abstruse. Her expressionism realigns her subjects with the upbeat pulse of life; she amplifies their humor. Everywhere she goes she sees things she wants to paint.

Farbush grew up in Dorchester where she walked miles to school from her three decker home. "We were able to live with our poverty easily," she recalls with more regret for those who grow up without it than for those who did. She majored in art at Dorchester High (imagine!) taking four classes in art and one each in English and history.

She and her friends were serious about art and proceeded without bogging down over whether or not it would support them after school. Their high school art teacher, Alva Glidden, told them to go out and paint the things around them. "I painted corners of the porch, patterns of the clothes on the line, very prosaic things," Farbush says. Her best works are those very things — a three decker house in Dorchester, a Victorian house in Hull, a Scituate vegetable stand, a Cohasset antique shop, ample senior citizens on a bench — and are featured in her current show of recent works at the South Shore Art Center Gallery through November 8.

A student at the Museum School, Boston, for four years during high school and again, fulltime for four years after graduation, Farbush has been teaching secondary art students there herself for the past twenty years.

There is strong European influence in her art, a combination of the Jewish milieu that she came from, Finnish artist Ture Bengtz and German Karl Verbe, both of whom she studied with at the Museum School. She was also influenced by the satire and humor of American contemporary painter Jack Levine and the feeling of light of Edward Harper.

She admires Van Gogh's spirit and energy and Rouault as well. The bright, primary colors and lively shapes of Farbush's pictures have had their influences, but they are uniquely hers alone.

"After 40 years of working as a housewife and teaching, I would like to take a year off," she says with a ready sense of adventure. She has traveled to Portugal, Greece, Mexico and Haiti and was successful in selling enough paintings abroad to pay for her vacation.

She's interested in going to San Miguel, Mexico, an artists' colony northwest of Mexico City. There she would have the freedom to do the thing she likes best — paint!

THE COHASSET LAMPLIGHT

Cohasset High School

How Proposition 2 1/2 Affects Cohasset:

The Debate: Pro... and Con

By Philip Dormitzer

As Nov. 4 draws near, we are being assaulted on all sides with cries of "Financial disaster!", "Fiscal irresponsibility!" and "Educational ruin!"

The opponents of Proposition 2½ would have us believe that our property tax rate is not really exceptional. They say that Proposition 2½ is a "heartless, rigid" act that leaves no room for inflation and growth.

They tell us that if Proposition 2½ passes, our cities and schools will lie in ruins and the poor and elderly will go hungry.

None of this is true.

Massachusetts property taxes are by no means reasonable.

They are the second highest in the nation. According to Massachusetts Information for Voters, 1980, property taxes here are 70 per cent above the national average.

This high tax rate has clearly hurt Massachusetts. Although Cohasset has not been as hard hit as have other areas, the new population figures show that there is an exodus from Massachusetts to states with lower tax rates.

Industry, too, is moving out, and with it go valuable jobs.

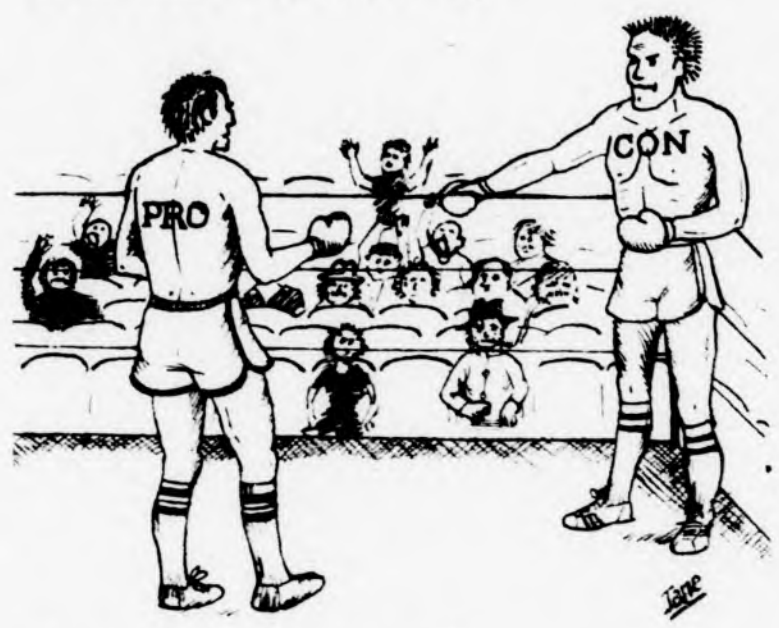
Few people will dispute these facts, and therefore most controversy has centered on the possible effects of Proposition 2½ on local cities and towns.

In Cohasset it has been claimed that over $1 million in tax revenues will be lost.

I believe that this figure is wrong. The basic error lies in a false estimate of the difference between the actual market value of property in this town and the assessed value.

Under Proposition 2½, property would be assessed at its full market value.

NEWS ITEM: Proposition 2½



"And in the far corner..."

I have talked to several realtors, and although they say that it is difficult to estimate at what rate property is assessed, 50 per cent is not an unreasonable figure.

Using the numbers given in the 1979 Town Report, I computed the actual loss of funds to Cohasset. The assessed property value for 1979 was $101,338,290.

Therefore, the actual market value was close to $202,676,580. If this amount were taxed at 2½ per cent, $5,066,914.50 would be raised. This leaves a $101,333.90 surplus over the 1979 tax rate!

This estimate does not take into account the loss of revenues from Proposition 2½ limitations on the excise tax. According to the town accountant, under Prop. 2½ we would collect 37.88 per cent of the excise tax. Based on 1979 figures, there would be a $231,707.60 loss of revenue from this source.

When this fact is taken into account, there is only a $130,373.70 loss of revenue to the town. This loss is only slightly less than 2 per cent of the town budget for 1979.

Obviously the town can trim this small amount from its budget. Even if the town's needs grow dramatically during the next few years, Proposition 2½ poses no serious threat.

At any town meeting a two-thirds majority can overrule the limitations imposed by Prop. 2½.

Voting "yes" on Question 2 will not cause undue hardship for the town or school system. It will force town officials to justify any increases in their budgets to taxpayers.

By Patty Walsh

When a deal sounds too good to be true, it usually is.

Proposition 2½ gives the "impression" of lowering taxes and ending government waste. However, does it really accomplish this goal?

Estimates on property tax savings run about $200 or less for the average homeowner. Renters can deduct half of their annual rent from their taxable income for Massachusetts income taxes. For the average rental, say $300 a month, the savings would come to $8.10. Only those who rent luxury apartments would get any real help.

Also, landlords are not required to pass along their property tax savings to their tenants. Excise tax savings will depend on the kind of car one buys, luxury or economy, and how often one buys a new car.

For most of us, who drive smaller cars and keep them longer than one or two years, savings will be minimal. All together the average person saves about $400. Remember, by whatever amount our excise and property taxes are reduced, we'll also have to reduce the amount we can deduct from our income for federal tax purposes.

Hey, did you just notice that the federal government is receiving more of our money? It will be a common trend.

Proposition 2½ has a fatal flaw — it provides no alternative state tax to fill the gap left by property tax slashes. What are the gaps? There will be drastic cuts or elimination of vital services in police and fire protection, education, aid to the elderly, garbage collection, street repair, plowing and other local services, which encompass the majority of the services you receive.

It is expected that the unemployment and welfare lines would grow rapidly. Not only will present jobs be at stake, but future ones will be rarer. Local budgets will be unable to accommodate services for a new factory or an expanding office complex.

Another flaw in Proposition 2½ is that inflation is not taken into consideration. Since inflation increases more than 2½ per cent each year your money will buy less and less of those important local services.

Proposition 2½ cannot be overridden except by two-thirds of those voting in the every-other-year general election, or in a special November election approved by the Legislature for the alternate year. This would be very difficult to accomplish. Because of this, cities and towns would become greatly dependent on the state to increase local old or pay for services, resulting in higher federal taxes.

In the final analysis, taxpayers will pay more to the federal government where the waste really exists. The money would be better spent in our own towns and our own local services over which we have some control, rather than going to the bureaucracy in Washington.

By now you're probably arguing that a similar proposition worked out in California. However, the real results will only be felt in the coming year. The large $7 billion surplus with which California was able to subsidize many local services is now depleted. In Massachusetts, local communities will not be able to look to the state for help, since the state has no surplus at all, let alone $7 billion.

Perhaps those people Pro-Proposition 2½ should wait and observe what happens in California before they try to push this measure in Massachusetts. I really don't think waiting at least a year or two would hurt.

Further Points

By Patty Walsh

Many taxpayers are upset because local education budgets have grown in a time of decreasing enrollments.

Inflation is running at the double-digit level and the significant increase in terms of energy costs and school supplies.

According to State Education Commissioner Gregory R. Anrig, "In the fiscal year 1978, the increase in school expenditures, not budgets now, but actual expenditures was only 2 per cent. In the fiscal year 1979, the increase was only 6 per cent and we're estimating on the figures we received for the last year that it was about 4 per cent.

"The proportion of per pupil expenditures for administration and overhead is less in Massachusetts than for all but

For the Cohasset Public School Systems, a possible "preliminary" list of school services follows in which certain sacrifice would be made in order to reduce its budget to the mandated 2½ per cent tax levy limit.

1. Closing the Osgood School, moving the primary (K-3) grades to the Deer Hill and probably, the 6th Grade entering the Jr.-Sr. High School.

2. Transportation cutbacks whereby "older students" would find their own means of transportation if they live less than two miles from a "bus depot."

3. Reductions and eliminations of programs, staff, and educational services for the secondary school system, Grades 7-12.

4 Elimination of the Alternative School Program

The Lamplight has no official position on Proposition 2½. However, we would like to bring the following facts to your attention.

During the past few weeks it appears lobbying by the staff on Prop. 2½ has taken place. Lobbying in the high school has not been widespread. But several members of the Lamplight have reported that both sides of the issue have not always been considered in class discussions.

In one instance, political posters that urge the election of a candidate on the basis of his views on Prop. 2½ have been posted.

Although we do not know who has distributed the posters the faculty has, as of the writing of this article, made no attempt to remove this material.

The Lamplight has no desire to end discussion of the topic, but we do think that in dealing with an issue of this sensitive nature, both sides should always be presented.

Ford

ing is more than a local 'home rule' issue for Hull; it affects everyone who lives in Hingham, Cohasset, and the rest of the South Shore. The gambling question affects the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"The State Representative from this district has a responsibility to take a leadership position firmly against legalized casino gambling. It is not enough to simply say that one is following the "will of the people" or that one is deferring to "home rule." Casino gambling is a pernicious industry that will have a negative effect on the lives of everyone in Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset," said Ford.

"Legalized casino gambling in Hull would bring organized crime and prostitution to the South Shore. The crime rate would jump. Traffic on Route 228 and 3A would become impossible. Local property taxes would increase dramatically to deal with the increase in crime, the increase in traffic problems, and the influx of new residents attracted by the casino," Ford said.

"Casino gambling attracts the worse elements. Corporate gambling influences have corrupted the state legislatures and the governments of New Jersey and Nevada. Casino gambling is a parasitic industry that preys particularly on the middle and lower-middle class. I think it would be bad for Hull, bad for the state, and I'm completely opposed to it," Ford concluded.

Ted Ford first declared his opposition to casino gambling at a June 12 candidates' night, and then in a letter in the June 26 Cohasset Mariner. There, Ted said that "A better approach towards improving Hull's economic situation would be an effort using tax incentives to attract desirable light industries, possibly pleasure boat construction and fisheries-related businesses."

Obituaries

Jean Osborne Fuller

Jean Osborne (Palmer) Fuller, 93, a resident of Ripley Road Nursing Home, died Wednesday, Oct. 23 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Born in Guilford, Maine she had been a resident of Cohasset for 30 years.

She attended Bangor (Maine) High School and formerly lived in Newton Center.

Mrs. Fuller was a former member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and formerly served on St. Stephen's Altar Guild.

Wife of the late Elmer Linn Fuller, she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Kathleen F. Dodd and Mrs. Jane F. McLean, both of Cohasset; five grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

But it's not the only important question on the seven-question (for Cohasset, Hingham and Hull) residents this year.

Question 7, a public policy question (non-binding) asks whether the representative from the district should vote in favor of legislation requiring a moratorium on the construction and licensing of new nuclear plants. Mandating in its stead,that the state promote energy conservation and renewal energy sources such as hydroelectric and solar power.

The policy question asks for a moratorium to nuclear construction, not a total halt. Proponents of the question feel New England's reserve electric capacity would provide the state with enough time for a moratorium during which plan for waste disposal could be made, an evacuation plan for the area could be considered, and total costs of closing down Pilgrim II when its life-span (30 years) is over.

Opponents of the question feel a moratorium on nuclear energy would slow down Massachusetts and New England economies. And that to maintain the state's present prosperity and continued growth and expansion, nuclear power must be continued to be used.

Question 1 would add a new article to the state constitution prohibiting discrimination against handicapped people. The passage of the amendment would affect custodians of all premises, whether public or private. Opponents argue the amendment would be unfairly expensive to small businessmen, as well as to towns and cities.

Proponents argue persons with handicaps should enjoy the same rights and opportunities enjoyed by other members of society. They also argue it would not create any special programs or privileges or require the reconstruction of all buildings used by the public.

Question 3, initiated by the Massachusetts Teachers' Association as a Stop Prop. 2½ measure, would limit local property taxes and state taxes and provide for increased state aid for local education. Opponents argue that passage of this law would require a 25 per cent increase in state income taxes or a 66 percent sales tax increase to meet its specifications.

Proponents feel the law would allow cities and towns to control their own finances within the framework of a flexible limit.

Do you approve of a law approved by the House of Representatives on Nov. 1, 1979 by a vote of 83-62, and by the Senate on the same date, which would approve increased salaries of certain state officials? Question 4 asks the question.

Before this law, the base pay of state legislators was $17,800. It is now $20,335. The House Speaker and Senate President received raises of $17,921 or raises of 47 per cent, bringing their pay to $55,921. House and Senate Leaders received pay increases as large as 27 per cent.

Question 5 would limit the power of the legislature to impose certain costs on cities and towns, unless it accepts the law by vote or appropriation of money. Opponents feel it should not be an amendment to the state constitution. Proponents feel the reverse.

Question 6 is an amendment which would change the procedure by which the legislature declares a measure to be an emergency law.

Local pony clubbers attend Gold Medal clinic

Tad Coffin, Olympic Gold Medalist and graduate A pony clubber from Meadow Brook Hounds Pony Club, conducted a stadium jumping clinic on Saturday, Oct. 4, at Ponkapoag Pony Club in Milton.

Throughout the day, the pony clubbers were divided into groups for specialized instructions at their individual levels. The emphasis was jumping style and form.

The first group consisting of Sarah Colt, Sarah Crittenden, Katie Hutchins, Debbie MacKeen, and Tracy Vazza, concentrated on warming up their horses properly and preparing their horses for jumping.

The next group learned the importance of being mentally prepared and of keeping their horses' attention throughout the jumping course. In this group were Debbie Sharp, Debbie Welch, Lee Pfaffmann, Jonathan Kelley, and Sally Davenport.

The third group, Laura Kivlan, Francesca DiRico, Alexandra Colt, Tracy Lambert, and Kurt Carberry, focused on the proper steps in the execution of a jump. Students evaluated each others performance.

Following a break for lunch the last group practiced on courses consisting of several jumps. This group was composed of Beth Colt, Sue Watlington, Marley Rabstejnek, and Liz Conklin.

Even straight set can dig Bette Midler

By Lois Martin

My peers and I have an unlikely new heroine. I don't presume, of course, to speak for all my cohorts or age group. But be advised it is with tittering glee I confide that I like Bette Midler.

I do, I really do. And that's not a whit like me, to be an outright advocate, fan to be truthful, of someone who's earned the reputation for uninhibited conduct that is hers.

Most people my age, on the tail end of raising a family, aren't "into" raising our consciousness or levels of tolerance to include Bette. We bear dregs of inhibitions carefully instilled from rlier generations. We've taken good care of keeping the lid on discretions, something for which Bette isn't known.

PATCHES

And I admit when she was chosen star of the year so to speak, by the Harvard Lampoon or the lampoons at Harvard, I was taken aback at her forward behavior. So brash was she as to bordering on crude, I mused from my proper afghan and rocking chair. There she was, bawdy Bette, driving around Boston in an open car, rumored to have uttered obscenities at whim, causing the hearts of the Harvard boys to rejoice at her every shady syllable.

But a lot has happened since then, to Bette and to me. My boys fairly gasped when I made complimentary comments about Bette this summer. They sat me down to explain why she wouldn't really be my hero. She's racy, they digressed in their own gentle way, known to speak her mind loosely, without referring to Sunday School text.

What's more, they'd heard that during a performance in the London Palladium, she'd bared her chest. But I countered defensively, saying that if I were ever to appear at the Palladium, I might be overcome by the crowd too...No telling what some of us might do if we had to sing there in front of all those people.

One big persuader of my change in attitude was Bette's appearance on a Barbara Walters special, where the guest was more spectacular than the host. Anyway, Bette exposed herself then, figuratively thank goodness, as a rather vulnerable person, who has the confidence that ebbs and flows like that of people who don't talk naughty or dirty (matter of perspective).

Besides it was apparent Bette's always on stage if another person's in the room. People look to her for a good laugh, and I doubt she can ever bear to let them down. True, some of us might not resort to mooning as a source of entertainment of a good chuckle. But there was beneath the rakish, studied discourtesy for society's gentility, a gentle soul.

Terry said I probably wouldn't like to see her in "The Rose," either. He believes I've been shielded from knowing what Bette's like. Well I never saw the film.

But I heard the song...and now I consider "The Rose," as, rendered by Bette, to be an anthem worthy of my age group, thus my elevation of her and the song to a pedestle that would strike her funny. The words and music, the sheet music says, are by Amanda McBroom. And if you've heard it you know that Bette delivers the promise of the rose with gusto and impact.

My crowd and I, we love it. We think it bespeaks our age and stage with some experience counted and more suggested. In fact there's a bloom in the melody and a significant guarantee in the words, which we just eat right up.

It's a definition of love. In part..."I say love it is a flower and you it's only seed...It's a heart afraid of breaking that never learns to dance; It's the dream afraid of waking that never takes the chance; It's the one who won't be taken who cannot seem to give; and the soul afraid of dyin' that never learns to live..."

Do you read in the message where it says we've done a few wonderful things but we haven't begun to peak. Isn't that inspiring, encouraging? We like it. And then where it says "Just remember in the winter far beneath the bitter snows, lies the seed that with the sun's love in the spring become the rose."

Well that's what's behind the elevation of Bette Midler to a status unlikely to be given her by middle age, old-fashioned mothers. We figure no one could sing that and not be a bloom we can appreciate, albeit a rose which is a bit dusty with epithets.

So maybe she won't hold up against Abe Lincoln, Eleanor Roosevelt or Princess Grace. In the matter of decorum, she's wanting. But in the arena of life she's there with zest, zeal (shaky discretion), chutzpah, energy, wit, talent through "The Rose," some of what she is and has is handed along to us. And by the time we get there, as heaven well understands, we'll take an uplifting point of view anywhere we can get it.

Don't look to us to be causing a scene on world stages, but when it comes to blooming forth with new creations, new times worth doing, we're your crowd. Just play our new mid life anthem "The Rose," and watch us rise to the occasion.

It wasn't easy playing in the rain...monsoon weather gives period affect to this Derr photo. That's Kevin Dooley, No. 12.

Skippers rained on by Norwell monsoon

I don't know if you have ever seen a monsoon, but the Skipper football team played in one on Saturday.

Neither Norwell or Cohasset could mount much of a threat offensively, but because of a fluke touchdown in the second quarter, the Clippers came up on top for a 7-0 win.

The rain-pelted field turned into a quagmire in which it was almost impossible for either team to operate effectively.

"It was almost impossible to see and hard to maneuver" said Skipper end Jeff Lyons, "but deep down I knew we were a better team."

The lone Clipper touchdown came in the second quarter when Norwell completed a 10 yard pass and the Norwell end slipped and slid 35 yards for the T.D.

Lipsett scores lone tally

It was an off and on week for the girls' field hockey team. Tuesday they were on as they defeated Abington 1-0.

Karen Lipsett scored the lone Skipper tally.

On Thursday they were off but not by much as they were defeated by East Bridgewater 1-0.

Middleboro, Hanover fall to CHS soccer

The Cohasset soccer team had two big victories this week. On Tuesday the Skippers proved their high caliber skills in the 1-0 shutout defeat of second place Hanover.

Only eight minutes into the game Andy Pottenger fired a shot that bounced off a Hanover defender and ricocheted into the net.

From here the Skipper defense took over. Ed Booth, Matt Packard, Todd Langford, Joe Whelan and Greg Raffa all played admirable defense.

Packard, in fact, bicycle-kicked the ball out of the net in the fourth quarter, almost breaking his neck.

The Skippers faced Middleboro on Thursday and once again got an early start. Four minutes into the game Jim Leonard drilled home a pass from Andy Pottenger to put the Skippers up by one. Then with three minutes left in the half, Pottenger drilled home a Leonard pass to ice the game for the Skippers.

This week's two wins catapults the Skippers record to 4-5-2.

asking the Town to increase the Board of Selectmen from three to five members.

As soon as that information hit the press, various individuals began to research Town Counsel's opinion on the same, this reporter, included. Legal sources, asked for an opinion, said they were preplexed at Town Counsel's rationale for calling the article illegal. All stated, emphatically, that of course the motion following the article would have to be proper. But the article itself? No problem (five were interviewed).

Town Counsel's opinion was not a respected one, for the reasons mentioned, among some residents. Many felt his opinion was a political one, and one which would automatically influence voters against voting in favor of an increase in Selectmen.

Because Town Counsel had been on vacation until the Oct. 28 meeting, no one was able to confer with him regarding the specifics of his decision on the article which asks Special Town Meeting to increase the Board of Selectmen from three to five members.

According to Town Meeting Time, a practical handbook of parliamentary law, the right to submit a proposition (article or motion) belongs to all members. It also states: "An article in the warrant is a motion, and while it is assumed that the meeting votes directly on the article, such is not the case. An article is not self-starting, it merely stakes out the limits of the area within which the meeting may act." Without a motion, nothing affirmative may happen on the article."

Dean Volungis, 3

As of this writing, it was not yet apparent exactly what fault Town Counsel finds with the petitioners' article asking for an increase in the Board of Selectmen, other than that the article did not specify the terms the selectmen were to hold.

An investigation into the reasons for individuals showing up for Special Town Meeting, Oct. 28, show the following:

Various persons were angry that Selectmen or anyone felt they could determine the mood of the people regarding Prop. 2½. Town Meeting purists felt this 'adjourment' was a decision to be made, properly, by Town Meeting.

Still others felt that should Prop. 2½ pass, there would be no real reason to hold the Special Town Meeting with regard to non-money articles (articles asking for a decrease of the School Committee from six to five members and an increase in the Selectmen from three to five). Those individuals attended to insure the meeting would be adjourned and not dissolved.

Most groups, a large percentage, attended the Oct. 28 Special Town Meeting with no other objective other than to insure the fact that the Special would be continued to a certain date.

Those individuals said they did not wish to push their certain article through, in view of the fact that the public had certainly been warned that it was the intention of, at least, Town Officials, to adjourn the Oct. 28 Special.

Legally, of course, no one but Town Meeting itself can adjourn or dismiss itself, unless in the discretion of the Moderator (without an appropriate bylaw, and we have none) it is deemed the quorumless meeting should dissolve.

However, a motion to dissolve would be out of order when there is business yet to complete.

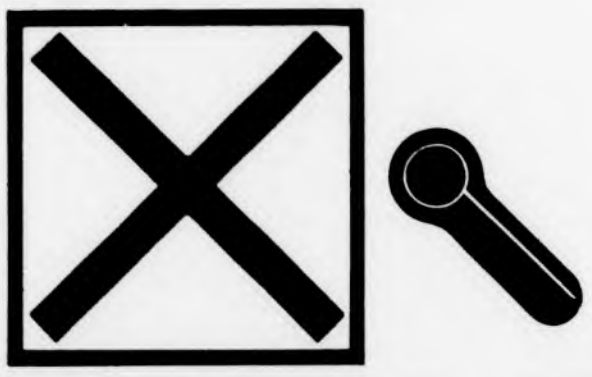
Cohasset Voters:

VOTE NO



ON QUESTION 7

We need both renewable energy resources AND nuclear power

A NO vote on Referendum Question 7 is a vote for alternative energy sources and nuclear energy. In New England we need both. We need to keep our options open for additional nuclear capacity while, at the same time, we explore new sources of energy and emphasize conservation.

Nuclear plants produce electricity at about half the cost of oil. They saved New England consumers over $500 million last year. They saved 46 million barrels of oil. And each new plant can save 11 million more barrels a year.

Nuclear energy has been supplying a portion of your electricity in Cohasset for 20 years. Today, it accounts for about 25 percent of your electric needs. It works. It's here now.

To vote NO on Referendum Question 7 is right and reasonable. To do otherwise would jeopardize our economic security and increase our dependence on unreliable and costly foreign oil.

To vote NO does not mean you don't support conservation and the further development of alternative energy sources like hydro and solar power.

What it does mean is that you are wise enough not to put all your eggs in one basket.

Let's keep our options open. To do otherwise would be unwise.

Vote NO on Referendum Question 7, this coming Election Day.

The three R's —renovation, refurbishing, replacement— keep us going

By Bucky Yardume

Unquestionably, construction of new homes and commercial structures alike came to all but a screeching stop with the crazy economy created by inflation. But the three R's — in this case, renovation, refurbishing and replacement — have kept vital signs going.

So attest two more R's — Rick Wiley and Rick Merritt.

Wiley, in addition to being a builder is Norwell's Building Inspector. Merritt is an officer of South Scituate Savings Bank, newly merged with Quincy Savings Bank with the joint operation expected to begin a new era in area banking Dec. 1.

They could just as well have been speaking for counterparts in any of the area towns.

Over what usually is the acme of the building season, from Spring to Fall just concluded, only a couple of dozen building permits for new structures, both residential and commercial, were issued by Wiley's department. Usually during that stretch they flow like traffic on the Expressway during rush hour.

"No question, they were way, way down," Wiley confirmed.

Not eliminated entirely, understand. Smith Printing is building a $1.4 million plant in Assinippi Industrial Park. Zildjian Cymbal is expanding with a $1.8 million addition to its plant in the same park, and that kind of addition doesn't come under the heading of renovation. Developer William Murphy completed the new Prouty Hill business building on Rte. 53 and is engaged in a number of other similar ventures. Grossman's has submitted the latest of several plans for a new outlet on Rte. 53 near Assinippi.

On the other hand, the proposed function facility in Assinippi Park fell by the wayside. There is no sign of the proposed Holiday Inn there yet, although developer Philip Mack insists it still will become a reality.

Renovation, though, is the order of the day.

Caldor's takeover of the J.M. Field's store in Queen Anne Plaza was a multi-million dollar overhaul job in the face of a shriveled economy. Paul Stivaletta's Grammy's Burgers filled the vacancy in the practically new but vacated Long John Silver restaurant on Rte. 53 near Queen Anne Corner, also representing a quarter-million dollar investment.

Smaller scale domestic renovation, replacement and refurbishing has kept Wiley and secretary Jan Lawson jumping since spring and through summer with the tapering off only starting to become visible with the arrival of colder weather.

"There have been an unusually large number of permits issued for swimming pools," relates Wiley, despite the shortages of water reported at almost every turn. "I think it's due to the fact more and more people are able to get away less and less for any extended vacations."

The boom in woodstoves stabilized but still is very much alive. Now the rush is to coal stoves.

"There are plenty of both," Wiley declares.

Many, many permits are for additions...reroofing ...reshingling...garages...barns...chimney construction...decks (there are more decks than in the Navy)...porches or closing in same...remodeling kitchens and baths...family rooms.

No permits are required for re-insulation.

"But there's plenty of that going on as people add to what insulation they have to conserve energy and costs," Wiley reports. "That goes for tightening up jobs people can do themselves like weatherstripping, putting on storm sash, installing dampers in chimneys, caulking and the like."

Wiley finds solar adjuncts like panels for heating water and greenhouses picking up.

"Many are replacing heating units with new, more efficient models," Wiley adds.

While there has been some conversion from oil to gas, the changeover in Norwell, at least, hasn't been heavy, according to Wiley.

"After all," he points out, "there are many streets that have no gas service. People also are holding back because they don't know what to believe with the oil and gas people publicly challenging each other's claims of efficiency and availability of fuel."

As a builder, Wiley knows first hand about inflation impacts on costs of building materials.

"In some cases, though," he notes, "there's a fluctuation up and down where demand has its effects. But materials are expensive, no doubt about that. When a gallon of good paint is going for over $10 a gallon, you know it."

That's when do-it-yourself comes in, saving on labor.

"But with the cost of materials," Wiley adds, "the amateur has to be careful. Mistakes that waste material quickly eat up any labor savings. There's no doubt folks are fixing up or adding onto homes where a couple of years ago, if they outgrew a house, they'd sell and buy a bigger one."

Merritt, like all bankers, is aware of the switch.

"Fluctuating mortgage rates," Merritt declares instantly in defining the reason. "The constant day-to-day changes make for uncertainty. So people are keeping up their homes, making renovations and building on instead of up and moving."

Banks, Merritt says, make loans on many types of home improvements like new roofs, additions, new heat, even extensive insulating projects.

"Not," he jests, "for a toaster oven, however."

"It's easier on banks to write short term loans," Merritt continues, "although not necessarily better."

Bank problems still are in having depositors keep up their savings.

"With inflation, that's become impossible for most," Merritt rues.

Like Wiley, though, Merritt confirms that, "Housing starts are down but renovations way up."

Solar housing need not be expensive

By Nancy Burns

Having a solar house or partial solar house need not be expensive nor complicated.

Over a year ago we began enclosing an existing porch which faces toward Hull bay and affords a magnificent view of the Boston skyline. The view is particularly arresting when the harbor is filled with sailboats, as the sun sets all purple, magenta and orange and finally at night with the glow of buildings, cars and streets lighted like stars.

For that reason we wanted to take advantage of the view and decided to use three sliding glass door units and two stationary full length window panels. As an added bonus the glass was used on the south and westerly faces of the porch providing passive solar heat.

Since the house is stucco with a cement floor we didn't have to worry about having thermal collectors to take advantage of the sun's energy. The stucco and cement are natural thermal storage materials. Both were painted brick red to aid in heat absorbtion.

Had we not had those materials to work with, we would have instead had to use water storage collectors to absorb the sun's energy. The cost of water collectors is relatively inexpensive and there are even workshops where the do-it-yourselfer can learn how to make collectors.

Of course the windows and sliders were thermal pane; six inches of fiberglass batting was used to insulate around and above windows and on the solid wall which faces toward the north.

Because of the wind factor extra caulking and weatherstripping was used as well as a chimney built so a woodstove can be used for supplementary heat.

During the daytime insulated drapes are pulled aside so the sun can shine in. After sunset the drapes are closed to keep in the heat.

Although we didn't set out to have a solar porch (now a comfortable family-TV room), the result has been just that. Homeowners interested in adding some kind of solar unit to their homes can find lots of information from several solar groups in the area. Also check out local colleges and Plymouth County Extension service.

One need not go to a Don Kent Solar store or similar places to get a unit or information as well as a concerted sales pitch; instead there are many simple projects easily done by the novice including a project such as the one we did, a window greenhouse, full greenhouse and passive hot water system which is only used during the warm weather months.

Next project for us — investigation of a windmill!

Gallery of Homes Ad Award

The Gallery of Homes of the South Shore has won this year's national Gallery of Homes Classified/Display Advertising Award. Other winning entries were from Green Bay, Wisconsin and Huntsville, Alabama.

"Entries were judged on the basis of layout, copy, overall impact, image compliance and use of the Gallery's national advertising campaign," said Sandra Morse, assistant director of advertising and public relations at the firm's Atlanta headquarters.

The series of award-winning advertisements appeared in the Suburban Real Estate News.

Rick Fuller of Rick Fuller Gallery of Homes of Norwell is the advertising director for the South Shore Gallery offices.

Tomorrow's yesterday is today!

'The time to buy a house was yesterday...'

By Lydia Long

What's wrong with the economy for most of us seems to be exactly what's right with it for those in the business of selling houses. Inflation: It may mean astronomical grocery bills for you and me, but for real estate brokers, it means a bullish market, or the kind of thinking that goes: "The time to buy a house was yesterday — but tomorrow's yesterday is today."

Inflation, according to local brokers, is one of the strongest single factors in the recent scramble to buy houses. Jack Conway, principal of Jack Conway Real Estate Agency, said in a recent interview with the Mariner, "People don't think the government is going to be able to do anything about inflation, so they see owning their own home as the only sure hedge against it." Most of his customers talk about two things, he added: their lack of faith in the government and how much the value of a house will go up.

Alexander Rutledge of Rutledge and Carlisle Realty, explained it another way. Whereas a dollar's worth of money may only be worth 90 cents tomorrow, he said, a dollar's worth of house will be worth $1.30. In other words, with houses appreciating at a rate somewhere between 10 and 12 percent, people see investing in real estate as the only way to stop losing on the value of their money.

The end result of the inflationary spiral, realtors agreed, has been a steadily increasing business for the last five years, with 1980 being one of the best years ever. And this has been the case, they said, in spite of dramatic slowdowns in the first months of this year due to the sky-rocketing interest rates (set artificially high to cool the economy) and their recessionary effects.

Realties with a high-income clientele, or a large part of their business devoted to executive transfers, did not experience as much of a slowdown when rates went up. Out-of-state business executives being moved to this area have little choice but to buy, and high-income buyers according to Lucy Locke, who deals mostly with $80-100,000 homes, often seek the tax benefits of higher mortgage payments.

First-time buyers, particularly young couples, on the other hand, were hard hit by the high interest rates. Rutledge estimated that the volume of sales in Plymouth County fell off as much as 25 to 30 percent due to recession. High interest rates pushed many first-time buyers out of the market, he said. This effects the market almost all the way up the line, he explained, because people wanting to buy another house must wait to sell their own first.

"Busines fell off badly following a rate jump of almost 50 percent in the last three months of 1979," Conway said. "The slowdown continued into the spring of this year — and spring for us is like the Christmas season for everyone else. In March of this year the rates were almost 17 percent, which just about shut off all demand."

"After the rates reached 15 percent," John Farraher, president of Marshfield Real Estate, agreed, "only the executive transfers were buying."

However, despite the loss of their "Christmas season," realtors are boasting big sales this year. The reason for this, they explained, is because, as long as the pressures of inflation persist, the Cutting your own wood gives a warm feeling

By Nancy Burns

Cutting your own fire wood provides more than getting wood cheaply — it also gives a sense of accomplishment.

For the past four years our family has been cutting at Wompatuck State Park under the cut-a-cord system.

The first year 20 permits were given out each day — Friday, Saturday and Sunday — for six-to-eight week period from mid October through November.

That first year my friend and I set out early — 5:30 a.m. to get in line for a number. Later our husbands joined us after they'd gotten the kids off to school. You can start cutting at 9 a.m.

We got our cord of approximately six inch diameter logs that first time; however we encountered problems with our chainsaw — a real nuisance when you're working non-stop to get the full cord done by 3 p.m.

The next time my husband couldn't join us so I went with my friend Elaine and her husband. When I went to the repair shop to pick up our saw it wasn't ready and I had to rent one — an enormous 20 pounder, or so it seemed at the time.

The rental saw wouldn't work correctly and I had to return it for another. By that time the rangers were beginning to feel sorry for me, so while I was returning the saw and getting another they felled several trees and loaded up my trailer.

I added a few more trees when I returned and went home with a full load. To this day my husband thinks I cut that half cord by myself! I'm hoping he doesn't read this.

With the rising cost of fuel the number of cutters has increased to the point that last year we had to camp out over night to be able to get a place to cut.

Actually it was fun. Elaine and I slept in her station wagon in sleeping bags. The number of persons allowed was cut from 20 to 10 so we had to be in line at the main gate by 7:30 p.m. the night before. Even then we were numbers four and five in line.

Several games of gin rummy and many cups of hot chocolate later we were set to sleep. By the time we got up next morning there were several more cars than places available. One man even had a portable TV with him.

That day the kids came with us to help lug. Despite the work, aching muscles and sore backs, it's always worth the effort to cut. It always reminds me of the effort it took to settle this country (all the cutting by hand) and simpler times, in addition to providing a sense of personal worth.

There's nothing like looking at a neatly stacked pile of wood and realizing you did it all — from felling the trees to splitting and stacking.

Paul Jevne has seen 25 years of real estate changes

Paul G. Jevne has seen a lot of changes in the 25 years since he started the real estate firm that bears his name. His company, Paul G. Jevne, Inc. recently affiliated with CENTURY 21, is now celebrating its 25th anniversary, and is the oldest active real estate firm in Norwell.

Commenting on his experiences over the years, he said, "When I opened my office in 1955 the South Shore was very rural. We did a lot with the sale of land and small farms. The Southeast expressway changed the South Shore dramatically. City dwellers seeking suburban living convenient to Boston, flocked to the South Shore, and construction boomed. In those days a family could buy a 6 room Cape Cod home for under $10,000. Today that same home would sell closer to $60,000."

"Mortgage rates in the mid 50's were approximately 5%," he went on. "A far cry from what they are today! But real estate continues to be an excellent investment, especially in these inflationary times. It's one of the few places your money keeps pace with inflation, and you get to enjoy the benefits of home ownership at the same time. Innovative financing techniques have also helped consumers cope with higher interest rates. Of course the real estate market has had its ups and downs, but it keeps coming back stronger than ever and continuing to appreciate."

"Today our firm is involved with the sale of all types of real estate, but at one time my main interest was in the sale of antique properties. We are blessed on the South Shore with a wealth of lovely antique homes, remnants of our historic past. I have been fortunate enough to have participated in the sale and valuation of many of the beautiful old homesteads, and I continue to enjoy working with antique homes."

The real estate industry has seen a lot of changes over the 25 years that Mr. Jevne has operated his real estate firm. The emergence of franchising in the early 70's brought about a new concept. Taking successful real estate firms, banding them together with a common identity, and providing services not available to smaller firms.

"When we investigated the different franchises, we felt that CENTURY 21 could serve our customers best," he said. "They are the largest real estate network with over 7,500 offices coast to coast, and yet we are still independently owned and operated."

"CENTURY 21 provides us with many extra services that we can pass along to buyers and sellers, but they have no say in the operation of our business. This is important because the one aspect of the real estate business that hasn't changed is the necessity of giving personal attention to peoples needs. The most successful firms, in my opinion, are not necessarily the largest in size, but the ones that have a high standard of professionalism and a commitment to upholding the Realtor's Code of Ethics. We are proud to have served the people of the South Shore for the past 26 years, and we look forward to our 50th anniversary."

Consumer buying alert -fall energy tips–cut costs, pollution-servicing tips-

Here is a consumer buying alert from the Federal Regional Council of New England. Fall energy tip: get the most from your home heating dollar while the sun shines — buy early.

Across the country, home heating oil is currently selling for about $1 per gallon. The Department of Energy predicts dramatic increases this winter season. Their projected low-high ranges of per-gallon prices for #2 heating oil are as follows:

		Low	High
1980	July-Sept.	$1.03	$1.15
	Oct.-Dec.	1.05	1.21
1981	Jan.-March	1.08	1.28
	Apr.-June	1.11	1.35

Consumers are advised to purchase their heating oil early for better prices and faster delivery.

CUT COSTS AND POLLUTION

Many people don't call for service until their heating equipment fails. There are good reasons for having your heater serviced regularly. First, unless the equipment failure occurs during normal working hours, you will usually have to pay for service at a higher, overtime rate. And, of course, it could mean being without heat when you need it most. Second, servicing will increase efficiency and save fuel costs.

Based on average household usage, expected efficiency gain, and current prices, this can mean a savings of over $90 per year for oil burners. For gas furnaces, servicing every two years is recommended and will save the average household more than $30 per year. Fuel savings alone outweigh the cost of servicing. Third, proper maintenance of oil burning equipment can substantially reduce pollution. Finally, regular maintenance of your gas furnace minimizes safety hazards and prevents corrosion.

TIPS ON SERVICING

Comparison shop! There can be wide range of rates for servicing heating equipment. For example, in a quick survey of Washington, D.C. firms, prices for cleaning and adjustment (not including parts) ranged from $27 to $57. Ask whether parts are included. Be aware th at replacement parts are sometimes overpriced in service packages which include basic parts.

Get the right burner adjustment. Gas furnaces can be adjusted without special tools. The flame should be clear blue (no yellow). With propane, the flame should have yellow tips. For oil burners, special instruments are necessary to adjust the air level. A qualified technician should perform the work. Remind him or her to measure the following: carbon dioxide, stack temperature, smoke number and stack draft.

Next summer turn the pilot light off. Consumers can cut their fuel bills for gas heat by 2 percent, just by turning off their pilot lights during the warm weather months.

Insulation can save on home fuel

As Iran and Iraq continue the battle, threatening our overseas oil supplies, the insulation business has never been better. Home owners are looking for ways to conserve what they have.

Ed Goff of the Edward F. Goff Company in Cohasset was interviewed recently about the insulation business, although the Goff Company is also into storm windows, doors, roofing and vinyl siding and other energy-saving measures.

Formerly with the Frank Evans Company, 30 year-old Goff has been on his own for the past two years. While he sells and installs all types of insulation, he personally recommends insulating (when possible) with mineral wool, a steel slag, which he purchases from Bethlehem Steel in Pennsylvania.

However, fiberglass, a sand/spun glass material, is also popular insulation material in the South Shore. And cellulose, composed of shredded, chemically-treated paper, is another less-expensive insulating material. And foam insulation continues to be a popular choice.

While Goff says steel slag is a little more expensive, he feels it has less of a settling quality. "The equipment we use to install it is more sophisticated. A tractor engine is used, and the installer mixes the proper concentration of air and material to achieve a good consistency."

Steel slag (mineral wool) also has greater fireproof quality. "A house would have to be completely gone before it would catch on fire, its burning point being 2,300 degrees."

The Goff Company uses fiberglas when insulation can't be blown in. In particular, new construction does not usually allow a blowing process to be utilized.

With insulation of any kind, Goff estimates a homeowner can save up to 60 per cent on their fuel bill. "I insulated my own home in Scituate, several years ago, and discovered significant energy savings by insulating with mineral wool. Insulation also provides homeowners with a cooling effect in the summer."

Goff said, "The average insulation job would pay for itself in five to seven years."

'Minute Man' shade kit guarantees savings

Called the "Minute Man," like its Revolutionary War namesake, it's a storm window shade kit which can be installed in just minutes. And it's guaranteed to save you money and energy.

This 6 mil, heavy duty PVC (polyvinyl chloride) shade recently took the Boston Energy Show by storm...dealers sold over 2,000 shades and went home with requests for even more.

Eric Pearson, owner of Highway Motors in Cohasset, said the shades come in three basic sizes which fit the windows in most New England homes. "The shade is installed on the inside of the house, and goes over the trim molding. It's installed easily, with double adhesive tape, a transparent, resealable tape. And it works exactly like a window shade."

Pearson said the key points of the shade are that it is 50 per cent more efficient than outside, conventional storm windows. "The vinyl sheet is hard-faced and can be cleaned with mild soap and water. And the sheet is guaranteed not to yellow."

People are using the shades in their homes, mobile homes, boats, recreational vehicle, porches, garages, patios, in their attics and skylights. "The 100 per cent air-tight thermal insulating barrier keeps hot air in during winter and out during the summer. The shades can keep energy costs at a minimum all year round," Pearson said.

And it easily opens and closes, repeatedly, for window cleaning or fresh air. "Between seasons, just roll it up and out of the way. It's self-storing," Pearson added.

Energy show prices for this shade are still in effect: $9.95 - $11.95 through October 31 only.

BLUERAY HEAT COSTS LESS THAN GAS HEAT

BLUERAY SYSTEMS, INC., announces a revolution in home heating systems. Developed through partial funding from the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), Blueray heating systems represent a breakthrough in residential oil heating technology.

Tested at the DOE's Brookhaven National Laboratory, the government agency has called the Blueray boiler "one of the most significant pieces of hardware to be developed to date."

The result of the new technology is that Blueray furnaces and boilers achieve a "steady-state efficiency" — the combined ability to burn and retain heat — of between 86 and 88 percent, significantly higher than any other heating system on the market today. Additionally, the systems maintain that high efficiency level year after year, again contrary to conventional units. The result: UP TO 40 PERCENT IN FUEL SAVINGS.

WHAT WILL THE PAYOFF BE?

Typically, the savings is from $250 to $600 on oil the first year . . . and probably more, as prices rise, in years to come.

A new Blueray pays for itself in as little as three years; usually within 4 or 5; seven at the outside.

ultimate effect of high interest rates will not be to quell the desire to buy houses, but to create a steam pocket of demand ready to blow when the rates finally come down again. And this it did in June.

According to Dale Stilton of Dwyer and Stilton real Estate Agency, when the rates dropped to 11 1/2 to 11 3/4 percent it triggered a demand which had been pent up for six months and created a boom market which ran through September.

As of the beginning of October, rates are up again to around the 14 percent mark — which realtors say usually sounds the buyer's alarm. For some brokers, business has already tapered somewhat as a result. For others, it is expected to soon.

Nevertheless, across the board, realtors consider prospects for a strong seller's market next year very good, and business opportunities in the years to come "very exciting."

The reasons they gave for their optimistic projections are varied, most of which were also given as factors steadily boosting business in the last five years.

The biggest one is that it appears, according to Bob Mullin's of Dwyer and Mullin Realtors that inflation is here to stay, and with it, a strong incentive to invest in housing.

Another factor insuring demand, Rutledge said, is that the "baby boom" is catching up with the real estate market. "All those kids we built extra classrooms for are now at the stage of thinking about buying homes," he said.

Conway suggested that working wives are now making home ownership possible for more couples. "Couples with two incomes can afford the $50,000 home they couldn't before," he said.

The cost of gas is another factor which will keep housing demands high in the South Shore, Farraher said. "Until two years ago, no one seemed to care about the price of gas," he said. "Now it is forcing commuters to stay within a certain perimeter of Boston."

If the demand side of real estate's supply and demand curve points to a seller's market, the supply side insures it, according to those in the business.

"Because of town controls, there is hardly any new building going on, Farraher said, "so existing houses will be at a premium."

"Because of the housing shortage, within the next 10 years, owning your own home is going to be a luxury," he said. "There are simply more people than houses."

Locke said, "the price of land hasn't gone up appreciably. But due to inflation the costs of labor and construction, as well as restrictions, have been tough on the building industry." Since 1973 and 74, she said, there has been much less development of large tracts of land.

"I think land is cheap," Conway concurred, "but home-building is off because of the high cost of doing business. Construction loans are three percent over prime, and I don't know how many town boards (governing zoning does) there are now."

Spirit thyself into a haunted house...!!!

By Joan Pinkham

What is it that draws people back to this, one of the oldest town in the nation?

For several years now, Cynthia Krusell and Betty Bates have asked themselves that question as they delve into dustry archives, decipher in a spidery handwriting in diaries, letters and wills.

Their love affair with the past has evolved into a daily regime of lecturing, traveling and profcssional researching of local antique homes.

Out of their diligent search into the records of former generations, has come a genuine conviction that these houses shelter spirits, the essence of the people who have lived under their roof.

"People who have ancestors going back eight or ten generations," Cynthia remarked, "are pulled back and they don't know why."

Admitting that they were skeptical at first, the women confide: "We can't help but believe there are energies that stay alive in these old houses. The older the house, the more essences that seem to be stored up. The stronger the person's personality, the more they leave behind in spirit."

Spirits have not only been felt, but seen over the years, as generations have come and gone in the sturdy capes and farmhouses of our town. They reach across the miles to descendents at times and these local historians believe that when they are researching a house, spirits and essences are awakened and things start happening.

Those who have come within the orbit of a ghostly presence confess to curiosity, seldom fear. The apparition seldom lingers, but the memory is never forgotten.

Cynthia and Betty have served as hostesses at the venerable Winslow House when it is opened to the public during the summer. Other guides such as Doris Boylston and Joan Abbruzzee, are acquainted with the ghost of Penelope, the unhappy wife of Josiah. Daughter of a wealthy Boston family, she was dynamic and restless and missed the social life of the city.

Her footsteps are often heard in the bridal chamber on the second floor where she died in 1703. Cynthia recalls seeing her standing in the window one grey winter's day as she was driving by.

Cupboard doors have been found ajar, furniture moved and, a most curious happening was finding a pile of salt on the kitchen floor when the house was opened one morning. No food is kept in the pantry and where it came from is another mystery.

Next door, in the former Ford antique gambrel, Cynthia once had a glimpse of a Revolutionary soldier standing on the roof.

The spirit of the master statesman, Daniel Webster, who had an estate on Webster St., made itself felt when a committee of 25 local residents worked together in 1970 on the removal of his law office to the grounds of the Winslow House.

Betty recollects: "When we tried to move his office from his estate we feel he was really against the move. Everyone on that committee, not just us, knew it because everything we planned just fell through. Even Congressman Hastings Keith, speaker of the day, never even showed up."

The tale of the Phillips' house ghost is often told as Halloween nears. It seems that at the time of the Revolutionary War, the owner of the house at the intersection of Ferry and South River Streets made a fortune. He sailed into the narby North River with his loot and was trying to get back to his home when he was set upon and his fortune stolen. The ghost is believed to be searching for the treasure and often a trap door is found open by the owners.

This ghost has been laid to rest by Cynthia and Betty as a result of 10 days of research in Halifax, where Canadian archives show Phillips died as a Tory outcast during the Revolutionary War.

Abijah White, a leading Tory in the Revolutionary War, was seen digging in the garden of his ancester, Peregrine White, looking for monies he was supposed to have buried there. Caretakers in the White homestead tell of doors opening and closing and the wife of one caretaker had direct contact with Abijah when he stood next to her one night and held up his fingers in reply to questions she asked.

A handsome colonial on Highland St. which has remained in the same family for generations has its favority ghost as evidenced by the chair that sometimes rocks as it is surrounded by wisps of smoke. The pantry door, though locked and bolted ast night, is usually ajar in the morning.

The Warren White antique Cape on Pleasant St. has a "presence" in the upstairs bedroom. One night, not long ago, when the present owner was alone in the house, she tried to talk with the resident ghost, but he went off. Without knowing his mother had seen the ghost earlier, the son told of having talked with him in his bedroom that same night.

In the garret of the summer home of retired Bishop Frederic Lawrence ther once lived a slave named Chloe. As with so many slaves, she was chained to the floor at night and Mrs. Lawrence has often heard her going up and down the stairs--at night, of course.

Skeptics once, but firm believers in psychic powers now, Betty and Cynthia feel there is a basis for these tales of ghosts that have withstood the test of time.

"They don't get going for no reason at all," Betty muses.

"Would we have the tradition of ghosts if there never really were ghosts?" Cynthia rejoins.

Conway Sept. sales continued at record pace

September sales continued at a record setting pace as the Jack Conway Co., large residential firm, wrapped up the month 87% higher in sales than for the same month last year.

"The rates go higher and the sales keep being put together," stated Senior Vice President John Reardon. "Rates bottomed out at approximately 12% late in June and, by the end of September, had increased sharply and gone through 14%, but the public kept buying anyway.

Perhaps this is a continuation of buyer demand squelched this past Spring when rates hit 17%; perhaps this was a demonstration of the eagerness of the public to get in before rates go even higher, as they did in the Spring; perhaps it is a statement of fear caused by the political uncertainty when the public reacts by buying a home — something they can really call their own.

"Whatever it is, the results are brisk sales on all fronts, with most of our 27 sales offices hitting record highs."

Reardon stated that the 6 office Greater Brockton Division was the big percentage winner as they increased September sales 118% as compared to last year.

The 5 office Quincy area group was up by 77%; the 6 office Cape Cod group was up 66%; the 7 office South Shore Division was up 54%; and the brand new Beacon Hill and Greater Boston Division did exceptionally well.

The big sales winners for the Conway Country offices during September included: Ruth Underwood-Weiss, Hingham Office; Shifi Jorden, Cohasset; JoAnn Haag, Scituate; Dick Warren, Marshfield; and Marie Krabisch, Hanover.

Century 21 announces new Money Card Program

Sales soared past the Million $ Mark during the month of Sept. 1980 at Century 21 Dwyer & Stilton — breaking all previous records for the firm, announced Dale Stilton, president.

The firm is affiliated with the national real estate franchise Century 21, a network of 7,5000 independently owned offices.

Stilton announced the introduction of the new Century 21 Money Card Program, which provides secondary financing for its clients.

Century 21, Dwyer and Stilton is located at 58 Main St. (Rte. 3A) Marshfield.

Century 21, Dwyer and Stilton is a member of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, and the Plymouth County Multiple Listing Service.

In addition to Dale Stilton, President and Treasurer, other firm associates are John Colley, Vice President, Harriet Brannum, Nancy Connon, Joseph Carroll, Mary Jo Loveridge, Sandra Quilty, Judy Timmins, Evelyn Vaughn, Michael Weaver and Don Whoren.

Fagan earns Bermuda trip by topping million$ mark

Betty Fagan, a veteran leader in the Jack Conway Real Estate Company team, once more topped the Million Dollar mark recently and earned a place in the coming company trip to Bermuda.

This annual Sales Rally with professional seminars led by outstanding guest speakers, will be held this year from Nov. 8 to Nov. 13 at the Sonesta Beach Hotel in beautiful Bermuda.

Betty, formerly of Norwell, now a resident of Duxbury, has gained the magic $1M circle in each of the past three years, and she is looking forward to this year's all-expense paid journey in the group of some 50 company people. A growing number already have earned the gala trip, and with sales of the 27-office firm moving at a record pace, more associates are qualifying each week.

"I'm delighted, and very proud to be working for the Jack Conway Company," she said the other day. "Jack himself is a dynamic and totally involved leader and it is great to follow his enthusiasm as shown at our most recent sales meeting.

"This is a super company and playing a part of its work gets better all the time."

Betty has been a member of the Conway Country force for 13 years, and has been among the top producers as a Hanover office broker. She resides in Duxbury with her husband, James Fagan, Sr., a Boston banker. They have three grown sons, James, Jr., Thomas and Richard.

The Jack Conway Company is the largest privately-owned real estate organization in New England. It offers complete service t home seekers, with its own greatly expanded Northern Mortgage Company; two full service insurance units, the Jack Conway office in the Hanover headquarters and the William Wade Agency in Scituate Harbor; and membership in RELO International which helps make moving pleasant for transferred executives and their families across the country, plus real estate sales and listing with more than 5000 properties offered at present.

Charlie Spalt sells storm windows to Southerners!

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Who would have ever dreamed there would be a market for storm windows in the South? Cohasset's Charles Spalt and M.I.T. Professor Ken Foster dreamed. Just about one year ago they took their Viking Magnetite Window to Southern dealers who grabbed them up faster than Spalt could gather the five component parts together.

Neat thing about the South. Homeowners and businessmen had never even heard of a storm window. So Spalt and Foster had the total inside storm window market to themselves, along with millions of Southerners who also needed to conserve energy. Electric energy.

"It costs more money to run air conditioning than a furnace," Spalt said. "Almost 40 per cent more."

The magnetic window process was developed by the world's leading manufacturer of magnetic refrigerator door gaskets. Ken Foster of M.I.T. added a little space-age technology to the process and the Viking Magnetite Window was born.

The heat-saving magnetic inside storm window seals like a refrigerator door to a color-matched steel strip backed with adhesive. A tight magnetic seal is created around the entire frame of the existing window...eliminating cold or hot air infiltration.

The window pane: acrylic, non-yellowing glazing with an impact strength 18 times greater than glass. And unlike glass, acrylic pane is not a conductor of heat, cold or noise.

'Spalt and Foster had the total market to themselves, along with millions of Southerners...'

Charles Spalt displays energy saving storm window

Although the magnetic window is a fairly recent invention, it has already earned the approval and the respect of the building trades and architects. Hospitals, schools, museums, banks, power companies, homeowners (in both the North and the South) and the Feds are its customers.

Spalt said magnetic windows offer a 50 percent return (in a two-year period). "One North Shore dealer recently told a computer company official he would install the windows for free, if the company would give him the money saved in energy costs over the next four years."

Ultimately, the deal went through. But it was cash on the line.

Foster is presently working on a process by which the window can be burglarproofed. "The window already has a magnetic field. Once an electric charge is produced in that field, the window, if removed, could ring an alarm. It could be virtually foulproof," Spalt said.

The window, which costs considerably less than the average-price aluminum outside storm window, is sold on an installed basis only, and only through dealerships, of which there are several in the South Shore area.

Viking Energy Systems Co., a division of Spalt Industries in Hanover, presently has over 250 dealers in the United States, Canada and overseas and is doing $1/2 million in sales a week.

Vin Doyle — 1980 Mass. Realtor of the Year

William (Vin) Doyle, owner of Vin Doyle, Realtors, Scituate and Marshfield, was named the 1980 Massachusetts Realtor of the Year at the 56th Annual Convention and Educational Conference of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR), held at Lowes Paradise Island, Nassau, The Bahamas, Sept. 29.

Doyle was selected from among 23 nominees of local Boards of Realtors at the Association's annual banquet. Selection of the Realtor of the Year is based on state, local and national Association contributions and activities as well as community service and business accomplishments.

Doyle will be additionally honored at the annual Realtor of the Year Luncheon of the National Association of Realtors, held in November in Anaheim, Calif.

Doyle was 1979 President of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors. On the Board level, he was three-year chairman of the Education Committee, chairman of Program and Equal Opportunity Housing Committees and originator of Board and education seminars. He also was chairman of the Membership Committee, three-year member of the Program and Conferences Committee and has been Convention Speaker at the State Association level. He has been both a state and local Board of Directors member for three years.

The 1980 Realtor of the Year is the founder of the Scituate Rotary Club and is Realtor representative of the South Weymouth Savings Bank. He is a member of the Driftway Land Use Committee in Scituate, South Shore and Marshfield Chamber of Commerce, Plymouth County Development Council, Scituate Zoning Board of Appeals and is Senior Lector of St. Francis Church. Doyle also is an associate member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers.

Doyle is a graduate of Boston State and received his master's degree from Bridgewater State College. A former teacher, he is past president of the Scituate Teachers' Association and a director of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association. He has been designated a Certified Real Estate Brokerage Manager (CRB) by the Realtors National Marketing Institute and is a graduate of the Realtors Institute of Massachusetts (GRI). Doyle has taught real estate sales techniques across the country.

He and his wife, Joan, have six children and reside in Scituate.

Nuclear question fails

Murray, Reagan, Prop. 2 1/2 score in Cohasset

President Elect Ronald Reagan, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) and Prop. 2½ were the big vote-getters in Cohasset and throughout the tri-town district, Tuesday.

The final Murray-Ford results were 11,272 votes for Murray; 7,522 votes for Ford.

Question 7, a public policy question (non-binding) asks voters to direct their representative to vote for a moratorium on the construction and licensing of new nuclear plants failed in the tri-town district by a vote of 9,329 no, 7,760 yes. In Cohasset, the vote was 1,611 yes, 2,163 no.

In Cohasset, 84 per cent (4,252) voters of 5,029 registered voters swept the polls...final figures on all questions were counted around 10 p.m., with Rep. Murray scoring 2,571 to Ford's 1,561.

Proposition 2½ received 2,482 votes yes, 1,651 votes opposed. Question 3 (a Stop Prop. 2½ measure) failed, 2,546 no, 1,402 yes.

Hingham votes weren't tallied until early Wednesday morning...but when around 11 p.m. Hull votes were tallied, with Murray getting 2,688 to Ford's 1,666...Phil Murray, husband and right-hand man to Rep. Murray threw up his hands, saying "That's it!"

In Hingham, Rep. Murray scored 6,013 to Ford's 4,295.

In other Cohasset scores, Reagan tallied 2,190 votes for a first place in the Presidential race, with Jimmy Carter getting 1,286; John Anderson getting 676; Clark getting 37 and Deberry scoring 2. Senator Ted Kennedy received one write-in vote.

In the Representative in Congress race, it was Gerry Studds (D) all the way with 2,930 votes; Paul Doane, Republican candidate, 1,047.

William Robinson (R) won in the councillor's race with 2,065 votes compared to Peter Eleey's 1,507.

Senator Allan McKinnon (D) received 2,100 votes to Paul Barber's (R) 1,695.

Special TM
Nov. 13 - 7:30 p.m.
CHS auditorium

Following right on the heels of Nov. Elections... more decisions to be made at a Special TM scheduled for Nov. 13, 7:30 p.m. at the CHS auditorium. The warrant is chuck full of controversial articles sure to attract a crowd. Those in the know predict it will be at least a two-night sessions.

Article 7 — a Selectmen-sponsored article asks the Town to purchase the former Cohasset Motors land and buildings on 3A for the appraised price of $450,000; Article 7 asks for $50,000 in renovation costs. Selectmen, Fire Station Study Committee, Advisory Committee are for it. Capital Budget says no way, at least not at that price.

It is likely an article asking questions pertaining to the renovation or construction of a new

Hellenic Church awaits decision

Trustees of the Pope Memorial Church, on Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, were scheduled to appear at Dedham Court this week to finally determine whether they (or anybody) have the power to sell the church to the South Shore Hellenic Church Association of Cohasset for over $100,000.

Heirs of Albert Pope, the individual who built the church in memory of his son who died in an accident, had until Wednesday, Nov. 5 to contest the conditions of the sale.

Gregory Tragewlis, attorney for the South Shore Hellenic Church Association, said Sunday as far as he knew none of the heirs of the church had contested the sale.

He added that he planned to file a motion with Dedham Court, Monday, confirming that the Hellenic Association is willing to use the name Pope Memorial Church in an appropriate manner. In addition, the Association would keep the church and a plaque in the church dedicating the church to Albert Pope's son, in good repair. It would also recite a weekly litany for Pope's son.

In 1932 Albert Pope decreed that the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church must continue to use the name, Pope Memorial Church.

This presents two difficulties to the Hellenic Association. First of all, the Hull Methodist Church has incorporated the name Pope Memorial into its own name. And second, the Hellenic Association cannot, under its articles of religious incorporation, use the name Pope Memorial as its official, legal name.

However, while the name Pope Memorial could not be used legally, the Hellenic Association would make every endeavor to display the name on its letterhead and at the site of the church.

Ernest Sofis, treasurer of the Hellenic Church, said this week the only issue before the court is a request to clear the title for sale. "The procedure calls for a 90-day notice to heirs asking if anyone questions the right of the Methodists to sell the building.

"The court has already stated that selling to an orthodox church is not a problem. Under law, it is illegal to discriminate, by decree or otherwise. There's no issue there.

"The issue is that the building will fall into disrepair unless someone with the means will maintain it." Sofis said in just 20 weeks, 175 persons

Chartis Langmaid on government

By Tanna Kasperowicz

The forces that brought 154 residents out to the Oct. 28 Special Town Meeting, with many more voters prepared and waiting in their homes for "the call," should they be needed, are more interesting than the counterforces.

In spite of the fact officials warned voters they planned to continue the meeting until after Nov. 4 elections, "People showed up because they didn't trust what might happen," said Chartis Langmaid, a Wellesley psychology graduate and former administrative aide to Mayor Kevin White.

"Prop. 2½ has been an issue for two years. I'm sorry, I'm not going to be so naive to believe that 10 days before the meeting Selectmen decided Prop. 2½ might be a problem. I don't feel selectmen gave us all their reasons for urging postponement."

Another reason Chartis felt Selectmen urged postponement, was because of an article submitted by petitioners asking that Selectmen's membership be increased from 3-5 members.

"It had been determined a while ago that this Special would require at least two meeting nights. "There was no reason why we couldn't have voted on non-money articles at the Oct. 28 meeting and then adjourned until after the Nov. 4 election to consider money articles.

While she is the first to agree that it isn't a crime for officials to select people of like minds and philosophies to serve on appointed boards and committees, she feels selective choices produce an astonishing defiance and mistrust of institutional control, i.e. Oct. 28 Special TM. "Certain philosophies are not represented on various appointed boards," she said. And her opinion is born of both personal and observed experiences.

"The town is run by a small group of people with like-minded philosophy. Maybe town officials are afraid the tax rate will go up if less conservative people get involved in the power structure. But I think a more diverse group of people always results in a better decision."

She agrees officials can point with real pride to a reasonable tax rate and a comfortable status quo.

Cohasset's week

Jurors selected

Carolyn Jenks, King Street and Susan McVeigh, Atlantic Avenue, were selected for jury duty at Selectmen's meeting last week.

Asbestos disposal

John Zotos, associate professor of mechanical engineering at Northeastern University, is one of two Northeastern professors who have helped perfect a new process which will eliminate the hazards of disposing of asbestos.

Zotos said many communities in Massachusetts have been reluctant to allow asbestos wastes to be buried in their landfills for fear that asbestos can enter the air, be inhaled and cause cancer.

"That will no longer be a problem," said Zotos, who added that this new technique destroys wastes at 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit, temperatures twice as high as those of conventional incinerators. "The process actually changes the physical properties of asbestos and makes it safe for disposal in a landfill."

Straits Pond drawdown

At last week's Selectmen's meeting, Hull Executive Secretary Chris McCabe notified Cohasset Selectmen a letter had been sent to the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering asking for permission to draw down Straits Pond (a Great pond) October through March of each year. The drawdown would allow for consolidation of sediments, facilitate removal of debris, and possibly destroy midge larvae. The drawdown was recommended by CZM, in a study funded by the same organization.

Sargeant exams

Per a request from Police Chief John DeBassio, Selectmen have agreed to call for exams for two sergeants. The exams were called in anticipation of a possible vacancy in the position of lieutenant in the future.

Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge, asked to comment, said "I have no immediate plans."

Chief DeBassio told Selectmen, however, if a vacancy should occur, he would plan to replace that position with two sergeants in order that a sergeant be available for each shift with a spare to cover.

Dillon art

Among the artist-members of the Copley Society whose work will go up for bid on the evening of Nov. 23 at the Copley Plaza Hotel during the Copley Society's Fine Arts Auction will be Margaret Dillon of Cohasset.

Ms. Dillon's acrylic painting "Dinghy Float," a rendering of dinghies tied up to a float, will be up for bids. Margaret Dillon is an associate member of the National Society for Artists in Casein and Acrylics, a gallery artist at the South Shore Art Center, member of BVAU and is represented in Boston by the Helen Shlien Gallery. Her most recent exhibit of landscapes was at the Curtis Savel International Center in Boston in October of this year.

Her work is in corporate collections of Hay Associates and the Charlestown Savings Bank.

Early release deferred

The planned Early Release Day of Nov. 6 at Cohasset Public Schools has been deferred. Accordingly, Thursday, Nov. 13, will be an Early Release Day in the Cohasset system. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions.

'Game' land bought

Late last week MGM Grand Hotel Corp. bought 57 acres of land in Hull (near West Corner of the Hall Estate) for $325,000 — in anticipation of the passage of gaming legislation.

Should gaming pass (legislation to legalize it has died in several sessions of the legislature) MGM, which operates hotels and casinos in Las Vegas and Reno, Nevada, would build a 17-story hotel on the Hall Estate.

Drugs film

Thursday, Nov. 6 at 7:30 p.m., parents are invited and encouraged to see a film clip previewing David Toma, a former Neward Policeman, who will eventually speak to CHS students about drugs.

This is a first of a series of meetings which have been planned for the parents of students in Grades 7-12. The meeting will be held in the CHS auditorium.

State Park appts

Peter Laugelle and Barron Salvador were appointed to the Wompatuck State Park Council, comprised of members from Norwell, Scituate, and Hingham, last week.

Arts Lottery members

The following individuals were appointed to the newly-formed Arts Lottery Commission for the Town: Robert Lessler, Helen Ketchum, Charles Wheelright, and John Packard.

One year the valedictorian didn't make honor group!

By Karin Bartow

The National Honor Society chapter at Cohasset High School has been an unaddressed school committee agenda item several times since July 14 and committee chairman Frank England, says the topic has been on his mind since way before that. The committee discussed "Student National Honor Society Selection Process" in executive session on October 6 and just what has been on England's and other committee members' minds has been a question of speculation.

The school committee seems to be divided as to whether the selection process for the National Honor Society (NHS) is within the realm of their jurisdiction and they seem equally split over a discussion in an open forum or executive session.

One thing is clear at this point. Superintendent Eugene Crowell will review the process with the administration and teachers.

Chairman England explains, "All the school committee wants to do is review this and see if it's being done fairly. Is it right for Cohasset?" Since the procedure currently followed at the high school was set up originally around 1969, current school committee members should be informed as to how Cohasset selects its scholastic leaders. Whether they should be involved in studying the process and talking about it in executive session remains debatable.

The idea behind the NHS is to elevate academics in the student body as a counterbalance to athletics. Leadership, service and character qualifiers round out the academic base.

One parent whose son did not make final selection after qualifying academically says, "I think the feeling of people in Cohasset is that academics doesn't seem to come out on top." Others questioned whether a top ranked student should be passed over by one who couldn't begin to compete scholastically with him. Many questioned whether students are well enough informed about the qualifications for admission.

The disappointment of students and their parents when a scholastically qualified kid doesn't come up to par in the other areas is often bitter. It is also inherent in any rating system and not a situation unique to Cohasset. Peter Kapolka, Guidance and NHS Advisor at Norwell High School says, "Every year we have hard feelings. We've even had the class valedictorian not make it, which was embarrassing." He said that usually 50% of those students in Norwell who are eligible are deemed acceptable by teachers. "It's not a perfect system. The way we do it is fairly time consuming, but the effort is to do it right and to be consistent."

The selection process used at Cohasset High School is one of the prescribed examples given in the National Association of Secondary School Principals Handbook. It has been used for more than a decade and after preliminary observation, Superintendent Crowell finds that "The formula Cohasset is using is quite usual and there appears to be no bias, no prejudice and no holes in the formula that could create a situation in which members could be discriminated against."

His perusal of the selection process is in midstream and he stressed that he would be "Looking forward to fine tuning."

Paul Narkiewica, Chairman of the Foreign Language Department at Cohasset High and faculty advisor to the NHS since 1973, admits that "Some years kids don't get selected who I think should." He says this sometimes hurts, but once the selections have been made that's it. He recalls only one reconsideration in the thirteen years he has been in the school system. There was a legitimate mix-up and all those who didn't make it were reconsidered. Principal Richard Streeter remembers another time when due to a documented misunderstanding, one student was reconsidered. As a rule, it doesn't happen.

Both the procedure for the selection of NHS members and the school honor rating system upon which students' cumulative scholastic standing is based, are outlined in detail in the "Program of Studies" which goes home with each high school student after the first of the year. The computation of class rank and grade point average are arrived at through the recognition and weighting of course and section difficulty, of which there are five levels.

The page dealing with NHS clearly spells out the objective of Cohasset's chapter: "To create an enthusiasm for scholarship; to stimulate a desire to render service; to promote worthy leadership; and to encourage the development of character in pupils of C.H.S."

Juniors and seniors who meet the scholastic requirement of a cumulative grade point average of 8.00 and 7.00, respectively, are proposed for nomination to the Society. All teachers are instructed to nominate seven students from the list who they feel would be qualified for final selection.

DEBATE...According to Webster, "a discussion involving opposing points; dispute," or according to American electoral tradition, a battle of wits in full view of the electorate waiting impatiently for one candidate to devour the other.

Commentary

Webster vs. Clay, Lincoln vs. Douglas, William Jennings Bryan vs. Clarence Darrow, Nixon vs. Kennedy, Maloney vs. Walsh (who?).

What ever happened to the good old days when knock down drag out debates really meant something? Now all we get is used, hand-me-down debates reported in the newspaper.

Too much analysis, editorializing, commentary and lettering to the editors. What we need is more shoot from the hip, blustery, out-shouting style of debates.

The Murray and Ford camps never got together on a debate. If they had, Mrs. Murray and Mr. Ford and other lesser known candidates for state representative would have had the chance to state their positions (or lack thereof) on the assembled issues of the day. A shame. A tradition nearly extinct.

Consequently, although there has been a great deal of intra-columnar posturing, the spectre of a face-to-face confrontation has been lost, except, of course, for a chance meeting at the pharmacy, or perhaps an accidental shaking of each others hand at a home football game. (Wouldn't you love to have been there for that one?)

Since this column was written prior to, but will be read after the election on Tuesday; and since the lack of an adequate forum of political expression is now history; I inquired of several lesser known candidates for state representative how they felt about not being able to sound off in the American way.

Carderock Williams, the Beechwood Separatist Party candidate for state representative has told this reporter that the lack of a debate has probably cost him the election.

Said Williams, "Debatin's a way of life in Beechwood. Everybody's been arguing with everybody else around here for years. I'd have won in a walk."

H. Ronald Millsap, Liberty Pole Road, Hingham, West End, and Neo-Libertine candidate for state rep.

"I would have welcomed a stump debate. I've lived in Hingham for years and frankly, I've been stumped since the beginning. Where is South Junior High anyway?"

Jack (smoking gun) McKillbane, Hull, candidate, former Nantasket roustabout and leader of the movement to fill in Hull Gut, had this to say about the lack of a debate prior to the election.

"You ask me another dumb question like that and I'll fill in your head. Now get outa here."

Clark, you missed your chance to create the promotion of the year. A Ford vs Murray debate with the others on the side, held on a Saturday afternoon at the Music Circus during that first warm week in October; with real stumps instead of a stage; no microphones; and straight Moxie served between rounds, (sorry, during intermission), would have been a real show. A golden opportunity missed, there's no question about it.

However, there's always next year when election to the Board of Health comes up. Plan to attend.

Cohasset 1980 campaigns

Government is continually trying to mop up the failures of an old crusade. That was the answer to last week's cryptogram. Hopefully, it will not be next week's headline.

Before going to press this week we had no knowledge of whether Prop. 2½ would pass fail in the Commonwealth. We did save a big front page news hole for the earlier Tuesday night results of the Third District Representative race. But when this was written we didn't know whether Rep. Murray would stop smoking Nov. 6, or whether Ted Ford upset her.

It always amazes readers when we try to explain that often times Page 4 doesn't know what finally happened on Page 1.

The campaigns are over. There were winners and there were losers. But of equal, if not greater importance, is that there were candidates this year...people willing for whatever reason to put up with the fickle electorate in its search for a more perfect life.

It's important now that we don't let our winners down, don't completely ignore them for two years hence.

The fundamental question we must now ask ourselves is how to realize whatever vision it is we think we are after. There is no longer any escape from facing front and asking the real and hard questions, and sharing in the development of the answers. In this nuclear age we cannot hide and we cannot drop out. We can only choose where to take our stand.

Thank you...to all of you who participated in the 1980 Campaigns, as candidates or as informed voters.

Please help us to begin to stand for the things for which we said we always did stand for.

Notes and comments

...Town Counsel Blake Thaxter said this week that no official opinion has been reached regarding the legality or illegality of petitioners' article asking for an increase in the Board of Selectmen from 3-5 members. Thaxter said he has contacted the Attorney General's office for assistance in the matter.

He further stressed that a "ruling" had never been made; that his "doubts" regarding the article and its mechanics were rendered at an informal discussion before he left for vacation. Thaxter added he felt it unfortunate that his questions regarding the article were quoted as being that the article in question was definitely illegal.

...The incinerator in Duxbury is for people, not trash. Duxbury is worlds ahead of Cohasset.

...This week the Mariner learned of yet another piece of property on 3A whose owner says could be acquired for a very reasonable price to construct a Highway Department garage.

...Because we were recently asked again...the Mariner is for an odd-numbered School Committee. Five is a very good committee number. If good arguments can be made for a seven-member committee, that's fine too. But please, no 6's or 8's.

...No, the "Sly Fox" sign on Town Hall which says 8 p.m. does not refer to any of the Selectmen or the time of their meeting.

...With the new position of Executive Secretary to be appointed in 1981, we agree the petition article asking for an increase in the Selectmen from 3-5 members appears excessive.

Properly the article should be judged in the context of a very different attitude from what now prevails. But it goes without question that five-member boards demand consensus. Two-member boards require only an agreement.

...The Beechwood Coalition has been acting very properly and has been trying, an extraordinary attempt, to do everything legal in terms of its petition article regarding a new or renovated B.W. Station. Nice work, B.W. Coalition.

Survey shows firemen against 1-man station

By Chet Magee

After the Beechwood residents' meeting with the Selectmen and Fire Chief in September, I told myself I am not going to get involved.

Commentary

Today I am involved, because our people need more information. When one needs advice, one seeks out professionals and they get answers.

At random, I chose eight firemen to answer six questions. Four men are retired, two have close to 20 years'service and two have less than 10 years in the department.

It's a three-generation gap.

I agreed not to produce names due to the nature of the questions and all were cooperative.

I chose this (three generation gap) of men to get an overall true picture of their assessments. The results are as follows:

1. Do you feel a one man station is adequate in handling any given situation a fireman encounters in the line of duty?

All eight answered NO.

2. On a scale of 1 to 10, what do you feel the efficiency rating of the Beechwood station has been in the past?

Answers: 0/5/5/8/3/5/4/6 = 36%

3. On a scale of 1 to 10 how would you rate the station when you made a run and no call fireman showed up to help?

Answers: 5/0/2/6/2/2/6 = 25%

4. Do you feel a two-engine station and ambulance combination on 3A would serve the Beechwood area and other sections of the town better than an improved one man station in Beechwood?

Answers: Eight yes, 100%

5. If you had a choice of a new facility and engine manned by two men in Beechwood, or the present 3A proposal, which would you choose?

Answers: Six for Rte. 3A, two for Beechwood.

6. In your tour of duty at the station, One, did you feel this station was a pacifier to the people or, two, a reliable station in its day?

Answers: three, a pacifier; five, reliable.

I thought I could get away with just these six questions and this proved wrong. They wanted to talk. Other firemens' comments to question two:

At times I felt lost, all I could do was my best. I rushed into a burning home alone, this is against all Finds 'Patches' sparkling!

To the Editor:
(Dear Mrs. Martin:)

Someone was kind enough to send me the Lois Martin (Patches) review of the "Mitzi Gaynor Show" dated Sept. 10, 1980. I found it sparkling reading. I don't remember reading a review in that area by you before, I hope I do again.

Next time we are in Cohasset or the Cape area I hope we will have a chance to thank you personally. Say hello to those two males in your family, one of whom was interested but not captivated, the other one who was both interested and captivated.

Thank you sincerely for your wit and for your generous thoughts.

Drama club breaks tradition with X-rated show!

Jordache Jeans advertisements are tame by comparison.

Equus was nothing.

"This [Sly Fox] is disgusting," one woman said, somewhere in the back of the hall. But we noticed she didn't leave. In Row Four, right, a teenager said "Oh, my God!" several times, over scenes too embarrassing to describe.

Never mind. Theater is alive and thriving once again in Cohasset with the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of Sly Fox, most ably and wonderously directed by Harry Heineman.

There is such a thing as personal style and thank heaven for it, especially when it is as sensitively (and outrageously) handled as Benedict Duffy (Foxwell J. Sly) managed it.

There was a new stress on stardom and vivid personalities with this performance — and in every case the performers made vertical yardage. Sly Fox will be chiefly noted for its unnerving glimpse of our sometimes unseen purgatory here on earth.

Super, super scene changes and fine set make ups. Good props, and neat, neat costumes.

And...outstanding performances by just about everyone down the line. Foxwell (Duffy) was the protagonist, for whatever perverted reason he pretended to be dying, in order to see his friends' reactions to his pending death and dupe them of their smaller fortunes: a ring, a wife, a will. What a marvelously creepy person.

Chuck Sullivan, as Simon Able, was Foxwell's manservant. He was the person who consciously undertook to give shape and meaning to Foxwell's life by arranging it in alternative, extended periods of action-in-the-world followed by periods of meditated experience in Foxwell's bedroom.

His performance made the production all the richer. Nice casting job, director.

Bob Julian's tic (he was Lawyer Craven) was strangely familiar. He said, not so. Just one of those cases of life imitating art. Julian artfully ran riot in a field of the most glorious specifics, and kept looking for generalities. Typical lawyer.

Abner Truckle, as played by Ron Massa, had very round, round eyes with wild little dots in the middle. And with his entrance, one sensed immediately that one of the casting director's criteria for this role required the respondent to be a visible, negotiable personality, in addition to his more routine virtues.

Other fine, fine, star-studded casting: Wayne Miessner as Jethro "the undertaker" Crouch, Carlene Laney as Miss Fancy, a woman of the night. And applause to Gari Glennon (Mrs. Trucke) who went after her grail in a state of purity and innocence in spite of the chaos around her.

Captain Crouch was finely portrayed by Tom Ryder, and W. Carter Hill (Police Chief) was crazy, funny, nuts. Loved the belly-show in the court-room scene.

Peter Tolman did practically nothing and stole the show. What a bunch of scene-stealers, this group.

Very nice supporting performances by Kerry Crehan, Scott Ketcham, Jane Antoine, Mike Sestina and Mike Mendlovicz.

New England Baptist Hospital Administrator Raymond C. McAfoose announces the appointment of Edmund A. Steimle as assistant administrator of Clinical Services.

A resident of Cohasset, Mr. Steimle was graduated with a bachelor of arts degree from Hamilton College, Clinton, New Jersey. He subsequently received a master's degree in business administration from Suffolk University, Boston.

For the past four years Mr. Steimle was employed by the South Shore Hospital in Weymouth as assistant director for general and professional services. Prior to that he served in the department of clinical administration at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

The North River Chapter of the Friends of the New England Home for Little Wanderers is one of the most active chapters in the group of Friends. The reason being that they do such good work and present organized functions. Their annual craft show and sale is no different. The show will be held at the Scituate High School on Nov. 8 and 9.

The hours on Saturday will be from 10 to 4 and Sunday from 12 to 4. There will be over 40 crafters present to show and sell their products. Most are local crafters looking for an outlet that allows them not only to indulge in their hobby but to sell them at reasonable prices so that the public can enjoy them.

Some of the crafters from this area are: Marsha Silvia with children's hand embroidered and personalized quilts and pillows.

The "Dirty Dozen" tennis group, who have been playing "fun" matches on a bi-weekly basis for ten years, ended their season last Thursday with their traditional outdoor round robin in costume.

The players were: Joan Kenney, continental soldier; Ellie Kay, chipmunk; Carolyn Koonce, "Rely;" Mary Bigler, woodstock. Also, Lynn Whipple, giant pumpkin; Alice Sokolowski, Paddington Bear's Aunt; Gil Kilbourn, farmer; Candy Faucett, army colonel; Marge Barry, fireman; Rachel Kennedy, astronaut; Jane Strone, dog; and Sally Wilkins, monster.

Winners of the tennis tourney were Rachael Kennedy and Sally Wilkins, who tied.

Happy Birthday to Mrs. Shirley Manna, "39 and holding," very nicely, too! Students allowed her many many wishes on her birthday candle that refused to blow out.

the survival rules, no one was in there. — Once I felt I could have saved a life, if I'd had help. — There is only one call fireman left in the Beechwood area.

Comments on Question 4: The 3A station is a substantial step in the right direction for that area, however, Hull St. and the North sector of town needs to be a two-man station. That area has grown out of a one man station also.

The acceptance of 3A will save me money. I am retired and I have to watch where the pennies go. — The north side of town needs a two man station, like 3A and the Beechwood area has been growing for years, and can't be over looked. — It's not only a wise move, but other departments will benefit. — Vandalism will be kept to a minimum in all departments on 3A, a good choice and a smart move for the town.

I thought this a good time to stump the professionals as before these telephone calls. I wanted a new two-man station where the old one is.

I thought it a good idea having firemen next to the Beechwood ball field as I have witnessed a number of firemen assist in injuries there.

It was pointed out to me that the need for an ambulance to Beechwood from 3A is less time than Central by half the time or less, also this coverage would dispatch one if not two engines to assist. I could not argue on this point. When have I, as a Beechwood resident, ever had this amount of full protection in two minutes or less? The answer never, not in 25 years of living in Beechwood.

As one retired fireman said, where in town can you triple your protection for the low increase that you're going to get in taxes? It's better than a five-year savings account.

After taking the time to ask these professionals questions, I know the way I am going to vote. I hope others will join me, now that they have read this survey.

When one can improve from a 36% efficiency rating, I for one am all for it.

Remember, all these statements were made by professionals that you and I depend on for life and fire protection.

'Dancers don't eat noodles,' Barbara said

By Tanna Kasperowicz

The brochure is tempting . . . full of recipes invoking pungent aromas of a swirl of tomatoes, a waft of garlic, a dollop of wine . . . a ladling of cream.

But when a friend of Barbara Donahue's reached the last line of the brochure, which stated, innocently enough, If you're having an affair, call us! the friend said "I certainly will not call you!"

Barbara said "We're thinking of dropping that line when we start to really advertise."

Celebrations Unlimited, a business which will cater everything from soup to nuts, was officially born September 8. But it was seeded under the Big Top at the South Shore Music Circus last summer . . . when Ann Abbruzzese, Carol Walls and Barbara were asked by Ron Rawson, producer of the Circus, to do a little catering to his stars and their entourages.

Unfortunately, most of the stars didn't get a chance to sample what these gourmet cooks can really do. Diets must be adhered to, weight and complexion is carefully watched.

"Mitzi Gaynor ordered a plate of plain chicken. Judy Collins asked for clear, unsalted chicken broth," Ann lamented.

"Entertainers really watch their diets," Barbara said, adding "Dancers don't eat noodles." So much for the top stars and dancers.

But — "Sha Na Na was fun to cook for. They ate chicken, beef burgandy. Khris Kristopherson didn't eat. He eats after a performance," Carol said.

Their uniforms are the easiest . . . colorful matching aprons that untuck from envelope or over-the-shoulder handbags at a moment's notice.

On Thursdays and Fridays Ann, Barbara and Carol can be found in St. Stephen's kitchen which they rent for their various Celebrations.

Because of their efforts to provide each and every partyhostess with the newest and most imaginative dining delights possible, they are naturally reluctant to share their recipes.

The women shop for their fresh produce locally, and they've already handled dinner parties (soup to nuts) of up to 50 persons. Having raised large families, they're not "floored" by numbers.

"It's more difficult to cook for four people than 40," Carol agreed. But sometimes when the numbers get really larger, they hire additional help to do the chopping and stuffing.

A client who requires the services of Celebrations Unlimited can choose from a continually expanding list of foods and recipes, some of which are original recipes passed down by their ancestors.

Working with and servicing the public has been fun, interesting and even a little crazy at times they said, remembering the time they had to hide in the bushes for not a little time with their food preparations, until the guest of honor had arrived at her surprise party.

How have their husbands reacted to their new enterprise?

"They take us out to eat more often, they know we're tired of cooking."

"Our next big function is The Cohasset Gridiron scholarship dinner dance at which we will serve over 130 people at Sons of Italy Hall, Nov. 21," Carol said.

Beechwood Fire Station will be discussed in tandem with the former 3A purchase.

Pending Town Counsel's advice, the Beechwood Coalition will present a motion on Article 11 (its petition article) asking Selectmen to appoint a Study Committee and provide it with approximately $5-$7,000 to provide plans for either renovation or a new building. The Advisory Committee and Selectmen have recommended against this article. Capital Budget has made no recommendation.

Should we increase the Selectmen from 3-5 members? Selectmen, Advisory Committee and the Town Government Structure Committee say no.

Now it is unclear whether a proper petitioner's motion can save the article, whether the article's sponsors will ask to withdraw it without prejudice, or push for a vote and let the Attorney General decide its legality. A recent Mariner poll showed voters split down the middle on this question — but that was before Town Counsel said it was illegal.

Should we decrease the School Committee at 1981 Annual Elections from the present six-member board to five members? The School Committee is split down the middle on the question (a private survey). The Town Government Structure Committee is in favor of reduction. It is thought another group will argue for an increase to seven members. But it is not known at present time if a motion regarding an increase to seven members would be ruled within the scope of the article.

Other article requests: $12,000 to pay hospital bills for veterans; an article asking the Town to accept the provision of the General Laws allowing purchases under $4,000 to be awarded without public bids; an easement article; $10,400 for a "mandated" hydrogeologic study at the sanitary landfill; $1,330 to reinstall old police radios in Town Department vehicles; and two articles dealing with by-law changes.

Five year capital plans look light so far

Committees and Town Department Heads have until Nov. 22 to present any five-year capital budget expenditures to the Capital Budget Committee.

According to Chairman William Kelley, Police Chief John DeBassio would like to acquire, or rent as needed, an unmarked vehicle to facilitate criminal investigation.

Pending any action which might be taken on the purchase of the former Cohasset Motors on 3A, the Municipal Garage Study Committee projects the need for a Highway Department Garage within the next five years. The item will be addressed by Capital Budget if the Town votes negatively on the purchase article.

Trustees of Paul Pratt Library would like to purchase a $20,000 automated circulation control system in 1984. An additional $8,000 was estimated for book theft control.

A municipal garage, Town Hall and harbor improvements were cited by Selectmen as being capital items. While the Town Hall Study Committee suggested four items for 1981: $50,000 for aforced hot water heating system; $6,500 for ventilation; and $35,000 for a sprinkler system. Carpentry and demolition work were estimated at $20,000.

Over the next five years Sewer Commissioners estimated $4.5 million in capital expenditures for the new sewerage treatment plant.

The following committees and boards projected no capital expenditure items: Drainage Study Committee, Recreation, School Facilities, Planning Board and Conservation Committee.

Next week's Cohasset crypt will be even tougher!

Answer to last week's crypt — see editorial. Both Andy Trask of Bancroft Road and Janet Figueiredo answered correctly. But Andy time-dated his entry: 9 p.m. Thursday, 10/30. Janet did not. Therefore, the winner is Andy Trask! Your prize will be, or already has been, delivered to your door, Andy. Hope you enjoy it! It was specially selected for cryptogram-solver types.

This is the last week the crypt will be so easy, in spite of its errors. Janet suggested we double or triple-space the puzzle, and "more carefully proofread it — there are three mistakes!"

The Massachusetts Ski Club is now accepting applications for membership in this winter's ski program. Formed back in 1969 for youngsters between the ages of 9 and 17, it is now the largest program of its kind in New England. Each week-end local children and adult supervisors board buses in the Norwell Cohasset area for a fun-filled day of skiing and ski lessons.

Since some programs fill up quickly, early registration is recommended. Information on the program can be obtained by calling the club in Needham at 449-3074.

Every eligible student who gets a nomination is considered. There is no quota and Narkiewicz says there has never been a situation where a student didn't receive any nominations. The number they receive has no bearing on their consideration.

Nominations go to a selection committee, one each for juniors and seniors, formed by Streeter consisting of guidance counselors, teachers, coaches and directors of activities. The committee (excluding Narkiewicz and Streeter) rates the candidates by secret ballot in the areas of leadership, service and character from one (poor) to four (excellent). A student must receive an average of three for final selection; more than three ratings of two (fair) in any one quality or one rating of poor will eliminate the candidate from further consideration.

The "one" (poor) rating which can potentially eliminate a student for final selection in a single stroke is a rule of some concern among parents. Streeter has never seen it used and Narkiewicz only remembers one time (during Streeter's two year absence from CHS) when it was used by several teachers in a situation where the student ws known to have cheated.

"It is there and so it has the potential to be used," Streeter says. He feels however, the same purpose could be accomplished without it. Narkiewicz said that if it ever came up he would want to know the reason why it was used.

The example procedures in the Handbook, as well as systems in Norwell and Hingham, have provisions for elimination based on poor ratings although they are arrived at by taking an overall average score and the lowest marks of even one teacher are averaged out. Some systems only rate students in the areas of service and leadership and invite comments on character. In Hingham, for example where this form is used, "Good character is to be assumed unless there is specific evidence to the contrary" and negative comments to the contrary must be substantiated by evidence.

Students who do not make the Society in their junior year may ask Streeter or a guidance counseler where they were judged weak so that they may improve. All juniors eligible for consideration who didn't make it are automatically reconsidered as seniors if they maintain the grade point average.

Teachers and administrators who are involved in the selection process admit that rating a student in the areas of leadership and service can be difficult. Peter Kapolka of Norwell says, "There are usually two things that pull a student down — lack of involvement or not being well known." The problem, Narkiewicz says is analogous to the Presidential election. "A lot of people think Carter has got a lot of leadership and a lot of others don't."

Impartiality in subjective analysis is at best, difficult and at worst, vulnerable to human misjudgment. Strict adherence to a formula and the greatest amount of objectivity in criteria are essential to a program like this.

Four third grade students at the Joseph Osgood School were winners for their essays on "Why We Should Save on Energy." Karin Story, Miss Baush's class; Pamela Hasse, Mrs. Price's class, Seth Low, Mrs. Tewksbury's class and Lucia Kegan of Mrs. Manna's class received a $5 prize for their ideas on ways to save energy and the causes of our energy shortage.

The contest was sponsored by the Ladies American Legion Auxiliary, Unit 111, Cohasset, George H. Mealy Post. Beryl Bukllivan, President of the Auxiliary, said choosing the winners was difficult. "The eight year olds knew more about energy problems and Iran and Iraq than most adults!" The Auxiliary stressed that every student who finished what they started was a winner and they each received a small token prize.

The winning essays reveal sophisticated understanding of the problems of energy. "We need to find our own fuel in our own country," Karin Story concludes. The effect of energy shortages mean more to us when they relate to something pleasurable, Lucia Kegan points out. "Do you like Doritos? Well, they can't make Doritos without engery." "Look," she says, "Energy is a nice thing to have and not to have it is bad."

"Without energy it would be a still silent world," Pam Hasse prophesies. She points out the many ways we can save energy, "Drive slower...turn off lights and TVs when no one's home... turn down thermostats and put on a sweater...or put in solar heating."

Seth Low explains, "Because Iran and Iraq are fighting and Iraq is destroying Iran's oil fields, the United States may have a shortage of oil. American cars use too much gasoline and people haven't gotten into the habit of car pools so we waste fuel. Airplanes also waste a lot of fuel." Seth also points out that while there are other sources of energy, they have their drawbacks. "Some people think it costs too much to get the equipment to use solar, wind and water power... coal is too dirty and some refuse to use nuclear power because they think it's too dangerous."

We are all bound to be winners with third graders who already understand the problems we face and sacrifices ahead for the solution to energy shortages. Congratulations to the winners and all the students who write essays!

   a. Eric Richards c. Sue Darymple
   b. Dianne Gunvile d. Tracy Swain

7. Who holds the fastest time of a Cohasset person on the Cross-Country course?
   a. Chris Calacousis c. Jack Bowen
   b. Steve Bowen d. Drew Dougherty

8. What newcomer at CHS coached football at his old school?

9. Who placed highest in the Cross Country League meet on the boys' and girls' X-country teams?

10. Who is going to wrestle in the heavyweight category for the wrestling team this year?

O'Connor finds success on Babson tennis team

Kim O'Connor, of South Main Street in Cohasset, recently completed her first year on the Babson College Tennis team in Wellesley, Massachusetts.

O'Connor, a sophomore, played fourth singles on this year's team. She finished the season with a 4-4 record and her best performance was a split set 6-4, 0-6, 6-4 win in a match versus Worcester State College.

The Babson team finished the season at 7-9 with wins over Lasell (5-0), Worcester State (6-1), Endicott (5-2), Simmons (4-3), Emmanuel (5-2), Curry (7-0), and Wheelock (5-0).

O'Connor is a 1979 graduate of Cohasset High where she played tennis for four seasons and captained the team as a senior.

She is a Marketing major at Babson.

Eddie Pratt to be honored at retirement dinner

One of Cohasset's best known public servants, Edwin H. Pratt, Superintendent of the Cohasset Water Department, will be given a testimonial dinner by his friends on the occasion of his retirement. The dinner will be held at Hugo's Friday evening, Nov. 14 at 7 p.m.

Dinner Chairman Bill McAuliffe, Chief Plant Engineer for the Water Department, is planning on over 200 attendees for the dinner. Tickets may be obtained by calling Annette Sawchuk at 383-0050, or Arthur Clark at 383-1195.

The dinner will have a real Cohasset flavor with comments coming from Burt Pratt, town historian, who is the brother of the guest of honor; State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray; Chairman of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen Arthur Clark; Paul Ross, President, SEA Engineering, builders of the new Cohasset pumping station; Joe Perroncello, President of the Cohasset High class of 1941; and Robert Amory, Chairman of the Waterworks Association of New England.

Master of Ceremonies will be Cohasset resident and old friend of the guest of honor, Jack Conway. The Rev. John Keohane, Pastor, St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset, will give the invocation.

Eddie Pratt was born on Ripley Road, Cohasset, graduated from Cohasset High School, served with the U.S. Army Amphibious Engineers in the South Pacific during World War II, and after the service he worked as a plumber for John MacNeill Co. of Cohasset.

Ed Pratt founded his own plumbing business in 1953 and joined the Cohasset Water Department as outside serviceman in 1959. He was promoted to working foreman in 1961 and to Water Department Superintendent in 1967.

He also has served since 1967 as Cohasset's first Sewer Superintendent. He also served Cohasset as its first Plumbing Inspector, 1960-1967, and was a Cohasset call fire fighter during the same period.

The honored retiree married the former Eileen Andrews of Cohasset in 1946, and they had three children. Glenn, his wife Kathy, and their two children live in Cohasset; son Vaughan, his wife Dolly, and their one year old also lives in Cohasset; daughter Sherry, her husband Jim Craig, and their one year old daughter live in Kensington, Maryland.

New weapon in cancer war

By Ann Fogg

Cancer. The word arouses dread in all of us. The hold this word has on our imaginations and the determination to dispel that hold keep Barbara MacDonald and Rosalind Sullivan, both of Scituate, in active contact with other cancer patients and their families.

Both women, cancer patients themselves, say that no matter how supportive and understanding families and friends are, they still need contact with other people who are also suffer from a life-threatening disease.

"I felt so alone," says Sullivan. "I felt there must be something out there. I called the American Cancer Society, and they gave me the number of the Hotline (749-2535). There I talked to Barbara and she told me about the support group."

The Hotline, listed in the South Suburban phonebook under American Cancer Society, Patient Services, serves the communities of Cohasset, Scituate, and Norwell along with the wider area of Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Randolph, Hull, and Hingham. It is operated in half-day shifts, five days a week, by volunteers, many of whom have experienced cancer either themselves or through a relative. Marshfield is covered by a Plymouth hotline (746-5248) which is open from nine to 12, five mornings a week; and Brockton has one (588-9335), open from 10 to 12 and from about four to six, also five days a week.

Most calls, says MacDonald, are for transportation to chemotherapy or radiation treatment. Despite the fact that drivers are reimbursed for their gas by the Cancer Society, she says that the biggest problem is finding drivers who are willing to go to Boston. People just don't like to drive there. The Hotline also answers general questions about cancer and gives information about available pamphlets, services, and resources.

When Barbara MacDonald was recovering from her first cancer operation, she recognized the need to talk with other people who were experiencing the same fears and feelings she was. For awhile she found that contact with Make Today Count, a branch group of a movement started in the early 70's by a cancer patient in Iowa. It was based on the idea that what the patient needs everyday is not professional expertise but reassurance that you're not alone, that you can live with cancer.

LOCAL SUPPORT

When the local group fell apart several years ago, MacDonald looked for another. She found that the only other option was Reach for Recovery. But Reach is limited to mastectomy patients, and she felt the need was wider than that. With Pat Smith, a Board of Health nurse and chairman of the American Cancer Society Service Committee for the South Shore, she worked on the idea of forming another group.

They found space at the Lutheran Church in Hingham which, on Rte. 228 near Queen Anne's Corner and the Expressway, is easily accessible for many people. Carolyn Housman, a social worker at the Social Service League of Cohasset, agreed to be the facilitator.

The support group (it never has been given a catchy title) doesn't base its success on attendance figures. "It's a difficult message to get out," says MacDonald, feeling carefully for words, "that taking the step of going to a group where you're looking for something is not a long-term commitment.

"I don't go religiously," says Sullivan. "It depends on my need. But I've made friends. The day I learned that I need chemotherapy treatments, I needed to call Barbara. We have that in common.

Hellenic Church

from Hingham, Hull and Cohasset had raised over $53,000.

"The stones of the church are beginning to separate. The Cohasset Building Inspector said he would not issue a certificate of occupancy until the necessary repair work is done," he added.

Architects have estimated that $15,000 minimum will be required to refortify the outside of the building alone. Presently, the separating stone is allowing leakage into the building.

The Hellenic Association is looking forward to an affirmative decision by the courts, and hopes to hold its first ecumenical worship service, with all churches of Cohasset invited to attend, Dec. 25 at 10 a.m.

"We need a lease. We're going to make it happen," Sofis said.

A weighty problem

By Lois Martin

"See the holidays in a new light," says one ad. "I can even fit into my wedding dress again," says another.

Just what I need, a shot at cooking Christmas dinner in my wedding dress. But I sound bitter, cynical, piqued that after 20 years I'm still scanning diet ads. Now with time (and a good deal more) under my belt, I'm driven to reading what I consider last ditch stand ads about how to lose weight. The Boston Globe slaps those ads on the living pages, the ones on which I drop food crumbs and butter drippings while I read at my hearty breakfast table. They think permanently plump people read Ann Landers and recipes so they trap us into being tempted to try yet another way to become like the people I see around town.

PATCHES

You've seen them, women who can get away with wearing long, toss-over-your shoulder hair after they're 40, in those loosefitting blouses which only serve to hallmark ribs and collar bones when they brush against the flesh.

I'm sure they're nice people, but they are a nagging reminder of inadequacy to those of us who know better than to wear any jeans, let alone with 'Diana Von Furstenberg' on a two foot label across our rears.

We, who are always softer, more generous, Rodin's delight women, unerringly diet. I have a complete library of diet books, some in hardback. I did Dr. Scarsdale until I felt blighted by his unfortunate death allegedly at the hands of a woman scorned. It was not I. I was in Quincy Market at the time muching from one booth to another.

My most recent failure (my weight has remained impressively stable through all diet junkets) was with Dr. Atkins. A friend put me onto it. After several weeks with the good doctor, I restored my weight gain to three pounds. Anyway it's a meat, cheese diet — no carbohydrates, tons of protein.

My husband, always a supportive, though no longer optimistic person, said it would be cheaper to have the meat truck pull right up to our back door. Cut out the middle man, he said, buy direct and wholesale.

The thing is that with Doc Atkins the color purple has some relevancy. I shan't elaborate since it would be contrary to a degree of decorum we like in our hometown newspaper. But purple and I never achieved the goal...too much lavender and tiresome tan.

For a spell a couple years ago I did a grand job on that power stuff where you eat just one meal a day. But in the intermittent years I've changed. I do fine until a whiff of food comes near my nostrils, then I suddenly can't remember what was wrong with the way I was in the mirror that morning. And I believe that I'm probably an anemic person who should get more nutrition than others in order to avoid fainting and embarrassing myself.

Anyway I bit the bullet last week. I called a couple of those places that promise a new but lesser me darn quick.

A thin-sounding woman answered the phone. She said they'd have to talk with me in person and go over my problems, see what would have to be done. I wondered if I'd have to send out specs, take bids and open them publicly to see who could move the mountain for the least investment.

This place fixes food for the dieter. It's packaged, no toying with toying with the goods, a bal[illegible]ced diet, she said, on which I could lose 30 pounds in 40 days. She didn't say so but I can only belie[illegible] I'd have to be locked up during that time far away [illegible]rom a bread baking plant where food odors sift into nearby buildings.

I'd be medically supervised (in case I start biting people, I guess, they'd know if I had rabies). She said the easiest part was getting my weight off. It's modifying my behavior they expect to be difficult. Someone told.

In the next business Christine answered and immediately treated me as if she were my confidante. It would go no further, I felt, about my weight and all, and she wasn't surprised I had this problem a long time. I suspect they have video phones.

With that firm I'd be an outpatient in their clinic. And I'd have to be in Brockton three to five times a week. There's a toughie. But the food used can be purchased in my local supermarket. My favorite spot...bakery, deli, snack bar.

I told them I'd call them back if I were interested in getting my free consultation. They both urged me to waste no time in getting started. I surmised I'm no stranger to them and that they believe the world's supply of food balances on my participation in their programs.

I'm hesitant, jaded by past failures, not pleased with the prospect of eating out of a baggie or traveling a lot. They probably mean for people to jog to the clinics.

Ah, well, I'll think about it over lunch. You'll know if I choose to take part. I'll be sashaying around town in my size 10 wedding gown. That's for the left side of my body. On my right side will be my bath robe. We deserve some comfort at my age.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Until we moved to Marshfield when our sons were young, I had always assumed that growing up in a nice neighborhood was a way of life. When I was a girl in Wellesley, kind neighbors always stopped by with goodies to tempt an ailing appetite. When I married and moved to Needham, it was party-time every weekend and the boys never lacked for playmates. Moving to Marshfield on a bleak, December day, seemingly stranded in the midst of 18 acres of sheer wilderness, I soon began to wonder if I'd ever meet a friendly soul. And then, we were invited to a progressive dinner party and all was right with the world. Everyone is neighborly on Rugani Avenue where they just had their fourth annual progressive dinner party — complete with singing telegram invitations, if you please. Hosted by the Frank Cunnings, Jim Connellys, Robert McGillicuddys and Ed Gaughns, Ron Roberts was head cook. Wending their way to dessert, was well worth the effort, as Heather McGillicuddy served this scrumptious

BRAZILIAN CHOCOLATE ROLL

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Makes one 10" roll.
3/4 c. sifted cake flour
1/4 c. unsweetened cocoa
1 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
3 eggs
1 c. granualted sugar
1/3 c. strong, cold coffee
1 tsp. vanilla

Grease 15x10x1 jelly roll pan. Line with wax paper. Grease paper. Mix flour, cocoa, baking powder, salt. Beat eggs until thick and creamy. Gradually add sugar until mixture is very thick and light. Stir in coffee and vanilla. Fold in flour mixture. Spread evenly in pan. Bake 12 min. until center springs back. Loosen cake and invert onto towel sprinkled with powdered sugar. Peel off wax paper. Trim edges. Starting at one end, roll up cake and towel together. Place seam side down on rack until completely cool.

2 tsp. coffee
1 1/4 c. powdered sugar
Beat until stiff.

Unroll cake carefully and spread with filling. Reroll, place seam side down. Drizzle chocolate glaze of:

1 sq. unsweetened chocolate
1 T margarine

Stir in 1 2 c. powdered sugar and 2 T boiling water. Spread on cooled cake. Sprinkle with pistachios or shaved chocolate. Refrigerate until served. Serves 4 to 6 approx.

This marks the 13th year the Couples Club at Trinity Episcopal Church has held its progressive dinner party. Fifty-six are expected to start off with punch and nibblies at the Scott Slades, going on to Jane and Stan Hardy's for a German meal of sauerbraten, potato pancakes, red cabbage, Waldorf salad and pumpernickel bread. Dessert will be served at Petie Burnap's home. Getting ready for the evening is half the fun, for the men spend the day preparing the meal at Johnson Hall.

Today we welcome those cooks in Hingham who enjoy every minute spent in their kitchens, whipping up meals and trying out yet another newrecipe. Since the Marshfield Mariner made its debut over eight years ago, this little corner of the paper has been devoted to an exchange of recipes, hints, ideas and suggestions. Now that women in four other towns here on the South Shore have laid aside their pots and pans long enough to share their family favorites with us, we hope that both men and women of Hingham will join in the fun. Most recipes have misty origins, but if it's a favorite in your family, we've learned over the years, it's usually good enough to print.

The School Music Association sold a variety of used musical instruments at its annual consignment sale but has 21 more instruments available.

Ranging in price from $15 to $250, they include trombones, trumpets, cornets, violins, clarinets, guitars, an antique flute, a snare drum and a bass drum.

Music Association President David Bond said the group will continue to serve as a clearing house for used instruments, taking a 20% commission on sales to help finance school musical programs in Norwell.

The group is seeking a bass violin, electric piano, electric bass, upright piano, baby grand piano, tuba, French horn and trombone case for potential buyers.

AT SCI CENTER

• Island trip on tap

A March trip for nine days and eight nights for members and friends of the South Shore Natural Science Center is being planned.

Travel to beautiful Maho Bay, St. John, U.S. Virgin Islands 20 minutes from St. Thomas bordering 9,500 acres of National Park. Temperatures in March range from 69.5 to 83.7 with an average of 76.6.

Maho Bay's canvas cottages house two to four people in three rooms on wooden platforms joined by a network of boardwalks for easy access to grounds and the magnificent beach while protecting the delicate flora.

Watch for full details in December, including special rates for children. A beautiful Holiday gift for you and your family! For more information call 659-2559.

Chartis

"The problem is, the town doesn't have a creative outlook. It's afraid to break patterns."

Poor or unbalanced appointments cost the town money in the end.

After moving to Cohasset 12 years ago, Chartis joined the League of Women Voters and was a part of that group's first Local Government Study Committee. She was also practically a one-woman observer corps, assigned to Selectmen for a four-year period.

"I stopped observing Selectmen's meetings for two reasons. It became more and more difficult for me to remain a silent observer. And I began to interject my opinions. And I felt uncomfortable about that, as a League observer."

Then, as now, Chartis said Selectmen complained about there not being enough willing volunteers to serve as appointed committee members. So Chartis volunteered. "I knew an important part of the Selectmen's job was to appoint committee people. But every time I volunteered, I always got this blank look, and nothing happened. It didn't just happen to me. Several other League members volunteered, with no results."

Then she wrote several letters. "One year I said I would like to serve on the Board of Appeals as a citizen advocate, which would have been a change from the lawyers and developers and engineers already serving on that board. But needless to say, I was not ever appointed.

"All during this time I kept hearing how the Troika (appointing committee consisting of the Selectmen Chairman, Moderator and Advisory Committee Chairman) were all so hard pressed. But after three years of applying I gave up. I decided to participate in town affairs in my own way. It didn't even occur to me, until fairly recently, that the Troika should hold their meetings in public and make their committee apointments in public."

Chartis said: "Our appointing authorities do not feel confident enough to allow themselves to put somebody on a board who they don't know a lot about. Appointments are made based on balance of power considerations."

By not seeking out new people in town to serve on various committees, Chartis feels the Selectmen and the Troika are missing out on important information.

"New people aren't confused by tradition. A lot of intelligent people with good ideas have been lost. Cohasset shouldn't belong to a one-philosophy group. We're very diverse. Officials are forcing outsides to become an opposition group."

In any case, when Chartis can get recognized, she offers her nonsolicited ideas about a large scope of things to any who care to listen or learn from her personal knowledge of League-inspired research. She has always felt the town is far too small to have embarked on its own water supply and sewerage disposal systems. She feels the expense could have been more easily borne through several regionalized efforts.

"Incineration and sludge disposal," she feels, "will have to be entertained on a more regionalized level.

"If we become so expensive, we won't be able to support the district on our own."

A regular Town-Meeting goer, Chartis is also active in the First Parish Church and has served on the parish council for a two-year period.

She frequently drives the Senior Citizen Shuttle bus, sings in her church choir, and has been on the board of the League of Women Voters for 10 years. She also holds membership in the discussion club, volunteers in the schools and was recently elected to the Democratic Town Committee.

She is married to Jack Langmaid, School Committee vice chairman. And they have two sons, Willie and Jayme.

Art center plans gallery gala

Newly elected President Ubaldo DiBenedetto and his board members of the South Shore Art Center are currently planning their annual Gallery Gala to be held Saturday, Nov. 22 at 8 p.m.

This event is open to the public and everyone is welcome. The Gala is a celebration of the opening of the Gallery Artists' Blue Ribbon Show as well as a fund raising event for the Benefit Scholarship Fund which aids high school seniors accepted at art schools.

The studios at 103 Ripley Road are being decorated in a cafe atmosphere for the opening of this Blue Ribbon Show and entertainment consists of a flute quartet, a silent auction and party goers may paint their mural.

Enthusiastic members working on the party as hostesses and hosts are Mrs. Stephen Tooker of Scituate, Mrs. Donald Summers of Cohasset, Sheldon Ripley of Cohasset, Mrs. Judith Campbell of Pembroke and Ms. Virginia Moore of Hull.

Receiving scholarship donations at the door are Mrs. David Alschuler of Hingham, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Williams of Cohasset and Mr. and Mrs. David Avery of Marshfield. Assisting with food preparation are Mrs. Vahn Kalian of Weymouth and Mrs. Theodore Macklin of Cohasset.

MacNeal exhibit in Hingham

The paintings of Cohasset artist Kerstin MacNeil will be on exhibit during the month of November at the Staircase Gallery of the South Shore Conservatory of Music, off 19 Fort Hill St. in Hingham.

Mrs. MacNeil's work has been on exhibition at Boston City Hall, the J.F.K. Building, the Boston Symphony, the Brockton Art Museum, the Duxbury Art Complex, and the South Shore Art Center, to name a few. She studied under the late MacIvor Reddie, portraiture with Robert I. Wilson and sculpture with Charles Chiampa.

Landscapes, seascapes and floral still life are her favorite subjects worked mainly in acrylics, oils and occasionally collage. This exhibit will continue through November. The Gallery is free and open to the public from Monday to Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Scouts announce plans for 80-81 meetings

Spooky looking creatures met at the Town Hall Oct. 29 to enjoy games with prizes and refreshments. Cohasset Pack 38 is grateful for the return of Cubmaster Jeff Forsdick and Merle Brown who has many Boy Scout responsibilities but helps the Cubs, too.

Gerald Deveney agreed to be Treasurer and Paul Migliaccio will take care of Advancement badges. Peggy Reed began implementing her ideas as Program Chairman with the party. Donna Grafton is Secretary.

Den 1 has met two weeks already with Leader Jeff Matherly and Assistant Leader Paul Coletti.

Other dens will begin meeting next week. Den 2 Leader Margaret Webber is returning for a second year with new assistant, Sheila Wilson.

Den 3 will be led by John McDonald with Paul O'Leary assistant. Den 4 will be led by Jane Long with Nancy McLaughlin, assistant.

Webelos are still in the planning stage.

A Scout show is planned for many area towns at Brockton Fairgrounds Nov. 15. Cohasset's Boy Scout Troop 28 will participate. Cubs are selling tickets for this event.

In keeping with the National Cub theme for November of "Thanksgiving Living and Sharing," Mrs. Reed has made reservations for Plimouth Plantation Nov. 22.

Next committee meeting is planned for Sunday, Nov. 23, 7:30 at the Unitarian Parish House. Committee members, leaders and other persons with ideas to share are invited.

Next Pack meeting will be Nov. 27, 7 p.m. at Town Hall. A Gong Show will be featured.

Beechwood Church sale

The Beechwood Congregational Church of Cohasset and Scituate will hold a rummage sale Saturday, Nov. 8 from 10-2 p.m. Clothes, white elephant and household items and a snack bar will be the featured attractions. Proceeds will benefit the Sunday School.

Election

Exactly 2,393 voters said they wanted to add a new article to the state constitution prohibiting discrimination against handicapped voters as opposed to 1,593 voting no.

A total of 3,420 voters said they did not approve of a vote by the Senate to increase salaries, 600 voters said they were in favor.

Voters were in favor of limiting the power of the legislature to impose certain costs on cities and towns — 2,698 yes, 1,093 no.

Voters were against Question 6, which would have changed the procedure by which the legislature declares a measure to be an emergency law, 2,163 no, 1,611 yes.

See the world...be a school bus driver

It must be a nice place to work, because for the last seven or eight years Rose Pape, school bus coordinator, has had little and almost no driver turnover.

A month ago two long-standing "career" drivers left — creating the hopefully temporary problem of a few double bus runs, which result in kids getting home a little later from school.

CHS Business Manager John Raftery said he has advertised the positions several times with no success. "I'm getting to the point that when people call to complain about late routes, I ask them — would you like to drive a bus?"

Contrary to rumors, Raftery said, "The buses are not over-crowded, and we do not allow standees on the buses."

The job's not a bad one, four hours a day, $5.25 an hour. But the responsibility appears awesome to some. Rose Pape, who has been driving a school bus since 1960, said.

Getting a bus driver's license isn't difficult, but is time-consuming, Rose admits. If a person applied for a bus driver's license from the registry this week, it might take up to two months for paperwork, physicals, etc. to be wrapped up. "The second hurdle," Rose said, "is that some people don't want to take the responsibility of keeping 50-60 kids to a low rumble on a bus."

But if you're a mother, and Raftery and Rose feel mother-types could do the best job, it should be a snap.

"You've got to have eyes all around. And in addition to obtaining a Class II license, you've got to have 12 hours behind-the-wheel training and eight hours in class training," Rose said. Training is done by Rose, a certified school bus instructor.

After all the above, you take your first trip with the kids, who are really pretty good on the trips, there being only a few rotten apples over the years.

Is it more difficult to maintain order today, as opposed to 20 years ago? "Kids have changed," Rose said. "They're more rights conscious, but then everybody is. A driver basically has to maintain discipline, stop fights and guard school bus property. That's sometimes difficult to do when you have to keep your eyes on the road."

Rose is the first to admit the job has been rewarding. Just as kids return to CHS to see their old teachers, they also look up their old drivers.

"A few years ago one of my riders met me on the street. He said, 'Boy, Mrs. Pape, I used to be really scared of you.' " Rose said she used to be really scared of him, too. He was over 6 feet tall, but she remembers he always sat quietly on the bus.

United Fund drive on

Cohasset United Fund Chairman Robert Magner, V.P. at Cohasset Savings Bank, announced this week that Cohasset has reached 40 per cent of its $8,800 goal — with one month of fund-raising to go. Manger said the drive was started in September, letters, door-to-door collections and individual businessmen have been solicited.

Court may order second look at Smith case

The Civil Service Commission may be ordered to hear new testimony regarding a ruling in which it upheld Cohasset Selectmen's firing of former Cohasset police officer Douglas Smith earlier this year.

Boston Municipal Court Judge John Pino took the matter under advisement last Friday, saying: "It has been proven to my satisfaction that Civil Service has erred clearly in not hearing this new evidence."

In September 1980 Smith's attorney, Alexander Matulewicz, appealed to Civil Service to reconsider its penalty imposed upon Smith as a result of new evidence obtained after the Civil Service hearing. According to Matulewicz, Civil Service rejected the appeal and apparently did not consider the new evidence.

In an affidavit in June, 1980 Police Lt. Charles Stockbridge said during an executive session with Selectmen in February 1978 he had recommended suspending Smith for five days without pay previous to a Selectmen's hearing on charges against Smith. One charge was assault with a dangerous weapon, two charges of being a disorderly person, failing to work a regular shift and calling in sick when the department alleged he was not sick.

Previous to the Selectmen's hearing in March 1978 on the same (Stockbridge alleged) that Selectmen said they wished to get rid of two officers on the force, (Smith and another officer) a month before Smith's hearing before Selectmen.

Matulewicz maintains the Selectmen's punishment (Smith's firing) was predetermined in the matter.

Lt. Stockbridge, Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark, State Rep. and former Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray and Selectman Henry Ainslie had been subpoenaed to the court last Friday, but none testified.

Attorney George Ford acted as special counsel for the town of Cohasset.

Matulewicz said it is his client's feeling that Civil Service was predisposed against the hearing of the new evidence.

Judge Pino said: "Civil Service is famous for its denial of justice."

Both Attorneys Ford and Matulewicz were asked to submit briefs on the same, after which Judge Pino will decide whether to order additional testimony to be heard by Civil Service or take any other action.

Matulewicz said Monday he feels if Civil Service hears new testimony on the matter, it might also reconsider the penalty imposed (Smith's firing). He said it was not clear to him whether Civil Service's denial of Smith's appeal also denied including the new evidence as part of the record or not.

"Hopefully, Civil Service will have an opportunity to reexamine the case, and do something less."

"If the judge sends it back to Civil Service, a hearing would take place at Civil Service. If after examining the evidence Civil Service stands by its penalty, my client would appeal back to the same court (Boston Municipal Court).

School officials ponder Prop. 2 1/2

By Karin Bartow

Before Proposition 2½ was passed, the school administration and school committee carefully avoided scare tactics when discussing what effect the tax loss would have on the schools. Now that the voters have spoken against high property taxes, Superintendent Eugene Crowell, Business Manager John Raftery and school committee members are still avoiding scary potential specifics.

"I caution you not to do any voting or mental prioritizing. The numbers are unclear," Crowell said at Monday's school committee meeting. Even though Cohasset, like most cities and towns across the state, voted 60% in favor of 2½ and 39% against, Crowell said, "I would like to feel that the people are not disenchanted with our educational system."

Crowell and Raftery have been researching every nuance of the new tax cutting plan, informing the committee as new developments arise and possible amendments are made known, and are developing as many possible alternatives as they can that would equal the estimated total loss to the school department in the year 1981-1982 of $629,000.

According to town accountant Bill Signorelli, the immediate shortfall to the schools will be the reduction on January 1, 1981 of $83,000 from excise taxes. (The total loss to town revenue would be $153,000.) He told Crowell at a dinner meeting Monday night, that through clever management and because of past conservative techniques, the $83,000 will probably not have to be borne by town departments." It can be made up by the town of Cohasset."

Muggsie

Muggsie—meals-on-paws ambassador

Muggsie is a good deal more than dog. The dog in him is pure Bassett hound and he's a youthful two-and-a-half years old. He came to live in Cohasset last spring by way of the Humane Society because of the McCarthy's on Bayberry Lane. He is the fourth Bassett Pat McCarthy has owned. "They're my kind of dogs," says Pat. He's the people-type that Muggsie emulates. Outgoing, friendly, humorous.

Muggsie loves kids and takes off whenever they're around. He takes off even when they're not. He checks in at the rear door of the high school (the one near the cafeteria) at breakfast time. He might get a scrap or two (refuse that would otherwise go to the cone). He shows up at the Deer Hill School at 11:15 every day and hangs around the cafeteria. He also stops in to see if everyone's working in the offices and classrooms. A stop by the Osgood playground is another must on his route.

"His newest stop is the American Legion," McCarthy says. He parks himself there around 4:30 p.m. and waits for Pat to come in. During the warm weather he would pay the folks at the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank a visit and catch a nap in their air-conditioned lobby.

He loves to visit the Rosano's where they make delicious spaghetti and meatballs. They even let him sit on the furniture!

Muggsie went on the dollhouse tour and crashed a wedding recently on Sohier Street. Mrs. McCarthy says he doesn't eat much at home. "He's well fed on the outside." Pat says they open a can of dogfood a day, but it usually goes to other visiting dogs.

This summer Muggsie had an interesting experience one afternoon at the Music Circus. A lady who loves animals was so attracted to him she tried to persuade the McCarthy's to let her take him home. Pat hung up on her two phone calls because he thought she was just another call at dinner time to get him to buy something. Brendon Mulcahy and Muggsie took her to the McCarthy home (after one false start down 3A), but Pat wouldn't hear of it!

TM star article may be withdrawn

The adjourned session of the Oct. 28 Special TM will be held Thursday, Nov. 13 this week — but it appears Selectmen may withdraw an article asking the Town to purchase the Schramm property on 3A — the main article for which the meeting was called.

Prop. 2½ is the culprit. How or if legislators will amend it is the question. In the meantime, the Advisory Committee last week withdrew its previously recommended support for the article, adding that it would also recommend against a petition article asking for study funds to build a new fire station on Beechwood Street or rennovate the old station.

Advisory Committee Member Jim Lagrotteria said cuts in the fire department as a result of Prop. 2½ may preclude manning any of the satellite fire stations in town.

It also voted unanimously to not recommend a petition article asking that the Board of Selectmen be increased from 3-5 members. Reportedly, Town Counsel Blak Thaxter has determined the article to be a legal one.

However, the Advisory Committee stood by a previous recommendation in favor of Special TM reducing the School Committee from six members to five.

Special TM will commence at 7:30 p.m. at the CHS auditorium to deliberate on a 12-article warrant.

Cohasset's week

Fuel assistance

The Quincy Community Action Energy Program has finalized the locations, dates and times for taking appointments and applications for the 1980-81 Fuel Assistance Program.

In Cohasset, applications will be taken on Monday, Nov. 10 and Wednesday, Nov. 12, from 9-3:30 at the Cohasset Community Center.

Appointments MUST be made beforehand. Appointments will be scheduled on Thursday, Nov. 6 and Friday, Nov. 7. Persons wishing to apply can call 383-0088 from 9-3:30 on Thursday and Friday only.

No application will be taken without acceptable income verification. Employed applicants must bring 13 current consecutive pay stubs or a notorized letter from their employer.

Self-employed persons need a notorized copy of last year's 1040 tax return form, 1040 ES declaration voucher, or Schedule C 1040. Persons on Social Security and or SSI must bring a letter from Social Security, a copy of their check(s), a letter from SSI, or a letter from their bank showing monthly deposits of the total amount of the check.

Persons on Unemployment Compensation or Worker's Compensation must bring a copy of their award letter. Persons on Welfare must bring a form letter from Welfare. Persons receiving a pension must bring a pension award letter. Persons receiving rental income must bring a notorized rent receipt(s) from their tenant(s).

Home visits will be made by priority for permanent shut-ins and handicapped persons only. These people must have the necessary verification during the time of the home visit or no application will be taken. Handicapped and permanent shut-ins must call 471-4027 for an appointment.

Chapter 426

Norfolk County Dog Officer, Harold Robbins, stated today, "There is a new Massachusetts law, Chapter 426, effective as of June, 1980 requiring that the operator of a motor vehicle that strikes and injures or kills a dog or cat must report such an accident to the owner or to a police officer in the town where the accident occurred. A violation of this law is punishable by a fine of $50."

According to Robbins, "Most people stop and report these accidents but that small minority who leave an animal injured or dying on the highway must now face up to their responsibility or pay."

Private ways

Residents living on private ways should act soon to give permission to the Town Highway Department to trim branches on trees on their streets.

Selectmen voted last week to send letters to all residents on private ways, regarding the ensuing problem with snow plowing on streets such as Cedar Lane, Mendell Road, Haystack Lane and Jerusalem Road if trimming is not permitted.

Harold Litchfield, superintendent of the Highway Department, told Selectmen that Town workers had been ordered off the private ways by residents. However, if trimming is not permitted, snow plows may not be able to maneuver the narrow lanes.

"We've lost mirrors, lights, and Town vehicles have been damaged." Litchfield said.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said if trimming occurred without permission, there was the possibility of lawsuits against the Town.

No parking

Starting Saturday, Nov. 15 no public parking will be permitted on streets from the hours of 1:00 a.m. to 5 a.m., in order that snow plowing may be more easily accomplished.

Prop. 2½ meeting

The Advisory Committee will meet Saturday, Nov. 15 at 9:30 a.m. to discuss the passage of Prop. 2½'s impact on Town Department budgets. The meeting will be held at Town Hall.

License increases

Effective January 1, 1981, the following increases in licenses will be effective: All-alcoholic common victuallers' license to $750 from $500; inn-holder's license to $750 from $500; retail package store license to $750 from $500; common victualler's license to $10 from $5; Sunday food license to $15 from $10.

Car dealers' license to $25 from $15; Class II used cars license to $35 from $25. A $2 fee is presently chargd for a one-day entertainment license — Selectmen are looking into increasing the fee to a higher figure.

Leaves position

Selectmen reluctantly accepted the resignation of Peter Laugelle from the position of South Shore Mosquito Control representative in the Town.

Music Circus license

The South Shore Music Circus has applied for a week-day entertainment license, without prejudice, for the 1981 season. However, Selectmen said last week they wish to check their minutes regarding times and schedules voted last year.

In addition, Selectmen said they presently charge the Circus $2 for a weekly entertainment license running from mid June until mid September. Selectman Henry Ainslie said he feels the Town should charge the Circus a slightly higher rate than is presently charged.

Double tie on knotty problem

The school committee rendered a tie vote on whether or not they favor reducing the committee from six members to five. (The Mariner's private survey was correct!) At the request of the advisory Committee, chairman Frank England asked for the committees' opinions on the special town meeting article calling for the reduction.

Diana Kornet: "I am in favor it. I feel there will be more efficiency with five (versus seven). People will be more specific about what they think." She noted how difficult it is to find people to volunteer time for local committees; an increase to seven might therefore lead to unopposed seats which is not "healthy".

Try a Mariner Oyster ad

Jack Langmaid: Favors reduction. He said five would require the same number of people to pass a motion as to defeat one. "The voters have taken power away from the school committee anyway," he lamented.

Irene Brown: "I don't like tie votes; they waste time; I'm in favor of it."

Patricia Walsh: "One gentlemen who's astute about town affairs suggested that when it comes to tie votes, they reflect the feelings of the town. The school committee has operated for at least 40 years with six members. I don't feel any compulsion to go to five."

Martha Gjesteby: "I'm in favor of the odd number, but I'd rather go to seven than to five. We have a lot of work; there are many subcommittees." She voted against five.

Frank England: "I'm not for it. We have to get four votes to pass; it makes (the committee) more conservative; we have to come to a consensus." He wouldn't mind going to seven members.

England conceded, "I will report to the advisory committee that we are 3-3."

'Once he even chased the moon'

Fire Captain George Casey missed the Blizzard of '78 — he was out on disability.

During his 34 years on the Cohasset Fire Department he never took the Town to court, never got involved in Town politics, never had a big fight on Town Meeting floor with anybody, never got suspended from the department for any reason.

Nor does he remember having ever been a hero. But you just take one look at him through wife Dorthea's eyes. . .no mistake about it. That's a hero you're looking at.

During his some 40 years in Cohasset, he and Dorthea raised two fine children, who may or may not have smashed some Halloween pumpkins along the way. . .climbed on the Deer Hill School roof. But having talked extensively with "Cap" Casey, we rather think they wouldn't have done something like that.

"Cap" George Casey

Debora is a legal assistant in the litigation department of a Boston law firm. A BU graduate, she attended Suffolk Law School for two years.

George E., Jr. and his wife, Linda, have provided the Caseys with one and three quarters grandchildren so far. George, Jr. is a project manager for a real estate development company in Pennsylvania.

But all of this is getting far, far ahead of our story. . .and how George, as a young man out of the Navy, married the daughter of Cohasset Fire Chief Joseph L. Olvier, who served as Fire Chief in the Town from 1942-1954.

When George's father-in-law greeted him on his first day as a firefighter in 1950 he told George he would be treated like everybody else. "Except if you mess up, you will get double punishment."

In 1950, when "Cap" Casey became a firefighter, there were 12 permanent firemen and 20-25 call firefighters. Ed Fitzpatrick and Jim Happenny, who owned a blacksmith shop in North Cohasset, were the call firemen responsible for the two-engine department in North Cohasset.

"The fire department was run through politics in those days," George said. He remembers his father-in-law being chief one year, deputy chief the next. . .and so on. "It depended on the powers at the time." After the Fire Chief was put under Civil Service. . .things became a little more stable.

In 1950 a firefighter was on duty 84 hours a week at the station. "At 8 a.m. we were either coming on duty or going off duty." Today, firefighters, as do other professionals, work a 42 hour week.

In 1957, George was promoted to the rank of Captain, through a Civil Service examination. Throughout his career he remembers only having experienced two important fires. . .the Cox Estate Fire (an interior fire) which caused much damage because firefighters couldn't get the slate roof off. And in the early 70's the old Kimball's restaurant went up in flames. And he never delivered a baby.

After he became an officer in the Fire Department he didn't get too involved in line duty anymore.

Ten or 15 years ago he remembers getting a call from a Hill Street resident regarding a dog trapped in a big hole. . .and while the Fire Department used to rescue cats trapped in high places everywhere. . . firefighters stopped doing so years ago.

"You never saw the skeleton of a cat in a tree, did you?" George asked, alluding to the fact that sooner or later the cat will come down.

One time a dog was trapped in a sewer on King and Pond Streets. . ."I thought the call was a joke. But when I looked into the hole, sure enough, a dog was crying. We got the dog out easily enough, but couldn't figure out how he had gotten there. Herman Maynard eventually explained it. He said a pipe went from that sewer to Lily Pond and the dog must have walked through the pipe at the Pond end and then fallen into the run-off drainage pipe."

During his 34 years Casey chased fires, dogs, cats, ambulances. . .and once he even chased the moon. "I got a call one night from a man on Hull Street. . .he said there was a big forest fire behind his house. When I got there I couldn't see any fire. . .I finally stopped looking. Then I looked through the trees and saw the moon coming up, a big, orange moon. When the leaves rustled it gave the appearance of a raging fire. It looked like a woods fire.

"I called the man to the door and needless to say he was mortified. He was a call fireman."

Dorthea Casey said George's retirement will be a kind of end-of-the-line for her. As a daughter and as a wife she lived in a firefighter's house. Her only son did not follow in his father's steps. But George's brother, Robert Casey, is a Lieutenant on the Melrose Fire Department.

Tribute

Margie

I can think of few other people who have made me smile more...maybe Betty Jackson when she woke me up one morning by doing a tap dance on top of her car on South Main Street...in front of a parade of Dr. Seadale's patients.

...certainly Karin Bartow when she played Santa Claus at the Log last Christmas. She really did look more like an Easter Bunny.

Where others tend to bear their troubles ponderously, you bore yours as lightly as a feather pillow.

You were very good at finding nearer rainbows when the further ones faded.

You gave yourself small goals: to live for a birthday. To live long enough to see Abby White give out the Cohasset Swim Team awards. And then, after the summer...

...you wanted December. But that was stretching too far.

Remember the night I called you with absolutely nothing to say? I warned you many of us might do that...say idle, foolish, chattering things because we cared.

You said you knew.

Sunday's Memorial Service helped to keep the cold out. Ed said lovely things. You may not have, however, approved his saying you enjoyed hearing tidbits of gossip. I smiled when he said that. I could hear your absolute denial.

While we were standing in line for coffee at the meeting house, Colin played tag with Tofer and Willie. I knew you'd like that. Once inside, Ian peeked around a door and gave us a great grin.

Love was everywhere.

The war doesn't go on forever. There's a time when the trumpets are mingled with the harp...the bagpipes.

But you knew that worlds ago.

Tanna

Ted Ford offers thanks to supporters

To the Editor:

I would like to thank all of the people who worked so hard to support me in the race for the Third Plymouth State Representative seat. I would also like to extend my sincere congratulations to Mary Jeanette Murray. She waged a strong campaign and has my best wishes.

For my part, I felt it was a healthy race, hard fought, focused on the issues, and everyone involved did an excellent job in bringing those important issues before the electorate. We are extremely proud of our role in the campaign.

Because the campaign was expensive and is deeply in debt ($8,000) I am asking that friends and supporters please consider donating to help us out. Any contribution you can provide will be deeply appreciated.

Sincerely,
Theodore Ford

We're almost there

Contributions to Cohasset's 1980 United Way campaign are approaching 75 percent of the goal of $8,800, but a strong effort will be needed over the next two weeks if the objective is to be reached.

That is the current report of Cohasset United Way Campaign Chairman Robert P. Magner, Vice President of Cohasset Savings Bank, who heads up the once-a-year, one-gift-for-drive in this community.

"Cohasset has a great record and potential for generous giving and I'm sure we'll make our goal if everyone we've contacted keeps in mind the great need of the many social agencies and services the United Way helps to support," Magner said. "We're trying to get over the message of the need

Rep. Murray to talk with Hingham Selectmen on gambling

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R) Third Plymouth District informed the Hingham Board of Selectmen she would attend a meeting with them regarding Casino Gambling.

The Town of Hull, in 1977, voted 2-1 on a non-binding referendum calling for Casino Gambling in that town.

Massachusetts has the "Right of Free Petition" which means that a legislator must file a bill at the request of any constituent.

"In addition to the above law," Mary Jeanette said, "I feel a State Legislator has the obligation to support any mandate of the people."

At the Hingham League of Women Voters' Candidates night, Representative Murray explained her position on this issue. She said, "Because of the 2-1 vote in Hull, I will place an amendment on the gambling bill to allow Hull to have Casino-Gambling; however, I will vote against the Casino Gambling bill when the main question is before the legislature.

"The Proponents of Casino Gambling know my stand on this issue, they have requested the action which I have stated I will take," Rep. Murray said.

Cohasset crypt

There is a cryptogram war going on...between solvers. All four solvers: Kurt and Glen Hochkeppel (a team), Jan Figueiredo and Andy Trask, have been winners in past weeks.

This week Jan Figueiredo won, with a time-dated entry: November 6 at 1:52 p.m.

As she correctly pointed out to us, she won last week, too. Andy Trask's answer actually came in a few hours after Jan's. So we awarded both Jan and Andy gift certificates from Notes & Quotes.

The Hochkeppel's answer came in Nov. 6 at 4 p.m. Andy's answer was time-dated Nov. 6 at 6:40 p.m.

The answer to last week's cryptogram is:

□"Typos" — wee slips by the writer, typist, proof-reader — are forgiveable, even understandable, but never acceptable when in a name:

Joan Kenney — the Continental tennis playing solider; Peter and Jane Goedecke have a new daughter; Jay Gaston, is really John, known as "J" among his friends; Beryl Sullivan is President of the American Legion Auxiliary; and Paul Narkiewicz is head of the Foreign Language Department at Cohasset High School.

□November 4 was election day at the high school. Juniors and seniors voted for two delegates to participate in the Student Government Exchange which will take place in April at the Capitol on Beacon Hill.

Steve D'Onofrio, a junior, won the election and will be Cohasset High School's official delegate for a day of real "mock" governing.

Holly Grant, also a junior, was elected as an alternate to the Exchange. All elected high school students across the state will have their names drawn before April to determine who will be governor, the legislators, members of the court, attorney general, lt. governor. The delegates will participate in a full working day of government when they take over in April.

□Government is on everyone's mind and the third grade creative writers in Marie Price's classroom share a lot of the concerns that must weigh on President-elect Reagan's mind.

If they were President they would tackle inflation, lower prices and free the hostages in Iran. The Presidency would be both a fun and a difficult job and they are decidedly in favor of more children's rights!

Here is a sampling of "If I Were President". . . .I would try to make everyone happy. But, I don't want to be president. . . .I would let the horses go free. I would not allow the people to kill animals. . . .I would make gas prices go down. . . .I would ask a scientist to make a machine that would clean up. . . .It would be a hard and complicated job. . . .I would go to alot of meetings and try to get lots of sleep. . . .I would not like Osgood to close down because if that happened it would stop art, gym and music (and) it would stop children's education. . . .

"I would give free food to the Cambodian people. . . .I would not let 2½ pass. I would not let the Osgood School close. . . .I would try to find oil. . . .I would pick Nicole for the vice president because she is my best friend. . . .I would solve hard problems and make good laws. . . .If I were president would you vote for me? If you do I will give you some money, good things and the gas price will go down to 19 cents again. . . .I would ride in a fancy car and go places in it too and make alot of money. . . .I'd be honest and tell the truth. . . .I wouldn't be stubborn. . . .I would be the first woman to be president. . . .If I was President of the U.S.A. I would rule the world. . . .I would make people stop paying so much in Massachusetts. . . .I could boss alot of people around. . . .I'd go get a dog and keep him at the White House to guard it when I'm sleeping. . . .I would tell people that if you vote for me I will give you $10,000. . . .I would have a very important and complicated job. . . .I would be careful of goofing up the typewriter. . . .

"I'd make Friday girls day and I'd make Sunday boys day. All the other days are girls and boys days but on Tuesday it is food day. I'd make kids go to school every two weeks."

Illustrators studio to make Deer Hill presentation

The Communications Council of the Deer Hill School will sponsor a presentation of commercial art and publishing on Tuesday, Nov. 18 at the school. The program will be presented by The Illustrators Studio of Cohasset, a newly formed group of local designers and illustrators.

Students, faculty and interested guests will be shown a variety of art forms and techniques including book, magazine and fashion illustration, cartooning and commercial photography. The program will be repeated three times over a two hour period beginning at 9 a.m.

Works by each of the following members of The Studio will be presented with individual demonstrations given by Chris Conley, Irena Roman, James Tringale and Pat Collins.

Chris Conley of Cohasset is the founder and director of The Illustrators Studio. She is a former assistant professor and department chairperson of the Graphic Arts Department of Bunker Hill Community College and has done fashion illustration, audio-visual work and promotional work for many major advertising clients in Boston.

Irena Roman is a free-lance illustrator from Scituate whose illustrations have received awards of excellence from the Boston Society of Illustrators and the Duxbury Art Complex.

James Tringale of Scituate is a commercial photographer who has worked for the Yale University Photographic Services and Bachrach Studios.

Pat Collins has illustrated four children's books and has done design and illustration work for the Boston Museum of Science, Weight Watchers International and Seventeen Magazine.

Joan Drescher of Hingham, has 20 years of experience in the children's book field. She has illustrated 18 books, three of which she wrote herself, and has received awards from The New York Academy of Arts and Sciences and The Children's Book Council.

John Roman of Scituate is the creator of the Nationally syndicated and soon to be released comic strip "Gunther." He has been working as a cartoonist, illustrator and designer in the Boston area and has done commercial promotional work.

Ron Williams of Weymouth is an advertising layout artist for the Patriot Ledger in Quincy. He has been a first place regional award winner in the annual RKO Illustration Competition and a second place award winner for the best ad campaign of '79 from the New England Newspaper Advertising Executive Association.

Dawna Redwan is a technical illustrator presently exhibiting at the Annual Boston Society of Illustrators Show. She has done medical and architectural renderings for legal presentations, greeting card and stationery illustration.

Around town

The open space classroom at Osgood (second and third grades) learned which precinct in town they live in and voted accordingly: The students had alot of good discussion and when the votes were counted, Reagan won with 36; Anderson was second with 13; and Carter trailed with 12.

Election results at Deer Hill were in the same order for President, although Reagan received the same landslide that he did across the country: the total votes from the 4th, 5th and 6th grades were: Reagan 212; Anderson 65; and Carter 32. Clark received one vote and there were two write-ins for Kennedy.

You don't know what you're missing!!

. . . but one thing is for sure!! It's costing you alot of dough on shoes for the family.

This is no phoney claim, ask around, or better yet, let me tell you why!

1. We're a 3-day shoe store, that means we save 50% on heat, light and help, etc.

2. We pay our venders on the spot! And we get a discount (you know what money costs are!).

3. We accept NO charge cards, that means we don't pay 3% to 7% to the charge card companies and that's another savings.

4. Our store is small (but full), neat & clean, but nothing fancy, no big opening or fixture expense to amortize over a number of years.

What does it all mean? It means you save 35% to 60% everyday, and that's no bull!!

We save and you save.

So what are you waiting for?

Obituaries

Several hundred attend Memorial Service for Marjorie (Frew) Knox

James Drysdale played the bagpipes on the Common after the Memorial Service, Sunday, for Marjorie (Frew) Knox, 40, who died Nov. 6 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after a long bout with leukemia.

Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish Unitarian Church conducted the service. Friends served as ushers. And a coffee was held at the Parish Meeting House after the service.

Rev. Atkinson noted the gravity of Margie's illness, saying "Somehow we thought she'd see it through. Whenever a man prays he prays for a miracle — Great God, grant that twice two be not four." Rev. Atkinson said.

"We pray through prayers — we pray through sending a marvelous bunch of balloons to the hospital, by offering rides, child care. And many, many times did we we pray for Margie...that twice two would not be four."

Quoting from Scottish poet Robert Burns' best known poem, that of a plowman unearthing a nest of mice...Rev. Atkinson likened Burns' ploughman to God. "He did not intend misfortune on the mouse. There are times we have to accept that which can not be changed. It hurts — but we must let go."

Quoting from a poem by Robert Frost, he noted that the dark is what brings out the star's bright beauty. "Certainly, Margie responded to her faith with a certain height, but most of all with good humor. She didn't let go gently into that night. But we should also know death can be a welcomed friend.

"She leaves a multitude of memories...a hearty laugh, humorous poems she wrote to all of us. Her photography, her pinata business, her interest in swimming, sailing, finding a good yard sale buy. She liked to read the travel section of the New York Times and do a little dreaming. She worked in the community and took a tremendous pride in her family. She raised her children to be free, proud, independent...and those are the qualities which will see them through."

Margie is a past treasurer of Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, a member of the Cohasset Garden Club, membership chairman of the Swimming Center in Cohasset. She and a friend, Marilyn Adams, were partners in a Pinata business, and during holiday seasons had a cart at the Boston Market. They also attended various fairs, where they marketed their angels, Santa Claus', Spidermen and Supermen and Halloween pinatas.

Born and educated in Lake Forest, Ill., she was a graduate of Douglas College in New Jersey. She had live in Cohasset for 13 years.

She leaves her husband, Robert James Knox; her parents, George and Agnes (Young) Frew of Lake Forest, Ill.; three sons, D. Campbell Knox, Ian H. Knox and Colin H. Knox; a daugher, Alexandria E. Knox, all of the home address.

Also, a brother, Cmdr. Ian Frew of Fairfax, Va., and a sister, Dorothy Frew, of Portland, Oregon.

Donations in her memory may be made to Leukemia Society of America, Greater Boston Chapter, 31 St. James Ave., Boxton.

Thomas Myers

Thomas J. Myers, 82, a retired sales manager for the Gold Seal Rubber Co. in Boston, died Nov. 3 at his home. He lived in Cohasset for 19 years.

Born in Boston, he was a graduate of Boston English High School and attended Northeastern University. Before retiring in 1968 he worked for many years in the rubber footwear business.

He was employed by the Hood Rubber Company in Boston as a sales manager before serving as president of the LaCrosse Rubber Co. of Wisconsin.

He was a former member of the University Club of Boston, the Hatherly Country Club in Scituate and the 210 Associates, a footwear organization.

He also served with the Merchant Marines in World War I.

He leaves his wife, Leone (Cunningham) Myers; a son, Thomas J. Myers, Jr. of Cohasset; two daughters, Priscilla Nagle and Suzanne Birdsall of Winchester; a brother, James Myers of South Yarmouth and six grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Thursday at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford.

Mariner scoreboard — By Rob Tis

Skippers eek a 1-point win over Green Wave

In what had to be their most exciting game of the season, Cohasset Skippers eeked out a 14-13 win over the Green Wave of Abington.

Skippers took the opening kickoff and marched 70 yards to a touchdown engineered beautifully by Kevin Dooley, as he scrambled his plays well and used all his backs, until finally Bob Donahue scored from the second.

Cohasset defense was dominated by Bob Fessler and Mike Jones, who never let Abington past their 40 yard line as the half ended 7-0.

Cohasset's rooters were treated to the finest half-time show of the year as the 200 members of the champion Abington band lived up to its excellent reputation.

The Skippers led by to outstanding runs by Joe Becker, who pulled to a 14-0 lead with eight minutes left in the game.

Abington's passing game came alive and Kevin Burke scored on a 15 yard pass from Tom Boothby. Following a Cohasset punt, Boothbay hit Brian Woods on a screen pass for a 70 yard touchdown, making it 14-13, with 1:41 remaining.

Going for two points and a possible win, Boothby rolled right and was forced out of bounds just short of the goal by Jimmy Kelleher.

Still, the game wasn't over as the Green Wave recovered their on-side kick and the referees called a few questionable penalties. But the Skippers were not to be denied and Joe Becker intercepted a pass on his 25 and Cohasset was finally able to run out the clock.

MJM to move Hull project

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, (R) Third Plymouth District has reported that the Metropolitan District has negotiated a consultant contract for the new Pemberton Pier.

The consultant company is Fay, Spoffard and Thorndike who will prepare the plans and specifications for a new pier at Pemberton.

The M.D.C. hopes to have the documents prepared for bidding in approximately eight to 12 months, and to have construction completed in another year.

Mary Jeanette said, "I will do everything necessary to try and reduce the length of time for the completion of this proposed project.

"In any event, they have the money for the pier and are starting to move on this project."

Rep. Murray concluded, "My interest in pushing forward on both Nantasket and Pemberton Piers is to provide for safety factors which have not been present for many years. The other facet for rebuilding the piers is to provide for more commuter boat service from our area."

Consultants for the Nantasket Pier project should be signed within the next several weeks.

Editorial — Is 2 1/2 Panic Called For?

Before Proposition 2½ was passed by a majority of Massachusetts voters, its opponents foretold disaster.

Now that Prop. 2½ is law, it's possible negative effects are being amplified by cuts that are often made in a seemingly arbitrary manner.

In a recent action the administration deferred judgment on school-sponsored field trips. The effect of this judgment was to halt the trips in question.

This action was premature. The cut in property taxes should not have a great impact on Cohasset High School until after the new budget has been drafted in April.

Furthermore, the reduction in funds caused by the decrease in the excise tax will not be felt by the school until Jan. 1, 1981 or perhaps even later.

Unfortunately, this is not an isolated instance. Some teachers have, in all seriousness, informed students that there will be no spring sports this year or AP courses next year.

Naturally some cuts will eventually have to be made, but we wonder if these cuts and threatened cuts, made at the administrative level, are really justified.

A less harmful method of adjusting the budget would be for the administration to inform the teachers that cuts in programs are necessary.

The teachers would then be able to adjust their programs based on their knowledge of the students' educational needs.

(Editor's note: This is one point of view. We welcome letters from anyone with an opposing opinion.)

CHS Menu To Include Salad Bar

By Gwen Smith

Every day in the CHS cafeteria the school sells several hundred breakfasts and lunches, and even more half-pint milk cartons. For dessert, many students splurge and buy a soft ice-cream cone.

Breakfast usually consists of dry cereal and some sort of bread, with coffee and juice. Most often lunch is a choice of sandwiches, soups, or hot casseroles.

But are there any alternatives to this menu?

The cafeteria provides breakfast as well as lunch for many students. According to federal law, if there are 40 or more low income families sending their children to a certain school, the school must serve breakfast.

CHS, however, said Mr. Streeter, started serving breakfast prior to this law. With some of the buses coming in very early, 20 or 25 minutes before school starts, some kids don't have time to eat breakfast at home. This means they have no energy for school, and might even become sick during the day.

To get the students off to a better start, the school started serving breakfast several years ago.

The lunch menu, like the breakfast menu, is dictated to a large extent by the federal government, but is also influenced by student taste. To meet federal standards, the meal must contain one-third of the minimum daily requirements for nutrition. This includes such foods as fruits, vegetables, and protein-containing edibles.

The government also regulates the size milk carton, and the types of milk served — both regular and low fat must be offered. If the school serves a class A meal, one meeting all government standards, the federal government provides each school system with government surplus food at reduced rates.

The student body at CHS also helps control the type of food served (and in other ways besides pea-shooters!). Soups and juices are served, but not in great quantities because generally they are not liked by the students. According to Mrs. Wunschel, the cafeteria director, the Cohasset students need to learn to eat more fruits and vegetables because of the need for vitamins A, B and C. Meat, fish and bread, however, are very popular, along with the sandwiches that are served every day.

Students like variety in their food, so the food is served on a four-week cycle, except hamburgers and hot dogs, which are served more often.

A few years ago, at the request of the student body, soft ice-cream was made available after the main lunch line. Not only is the ice cream nutritious and easy to serve, the students like it; and it is a money-maker for the cafeteria.

Go Get 'em Pam!

Not all attempts to sell desserts to the school have been successful, though. Regardless of the many active medical and dental lobbyists and the state regulations concerning vending machines, there was a coke machine at CHS in the early 70's.

Vandalism made the running of the machine not economically feasible. Cohasset had had its chance with a vending machine.

Soon CHS will experiment with an addition to the lunch menu — a salad bar. Though it will need some kind of protein supplement to fulfill government regulations, the salad bar will be a regular 50 cent lunch, another alternative to add to the choice of two available lunches now. The salad bar should be operable by Christmas.

Started by the senior class, the machine was in the lower Sullivan lobby. Even though it was not allowed to operate during school lunch hours, soon coke was on the walls, the ceiling, and the floor.

Salad bars are becoming increasingly popular in restaurants all over the Boston area, from Harvard Square to Quincy Market. We welcome this fashionable addition to the high school cafeteria.

An Iranian Student's Views On Iran

By Connie Grant

Mahmoud Tehranian, a junior at CHS, is an Iranian citizen who can give a new perspective on Iran and her problems.

The Shah's regime was full of terror. Mahmoud revealed that the Shah had any non-loyal subjects killed instantly. Spies of the Shah were everywhere. Most people were afraid to speak their true political beliefs. As a result of these conditions, demonstrations were launched against the Shah. Fifteen year old Mahmoud participated in a small, peaceful march. (Peaceful, that is, until soldiers of the Shah tried to disperse the crowd with haphazard gunfire.)

A friend standing next to Mahmoud was shot and killed. If Mahmoud had not thrown himself on the ground, he too would have died. Certainly, life in Iran was proving impossible with escalating problems to which the Shah would not address himself.

However, despite the problems with the Shah, Mahmoud's family wished to stay in Iran. The only problem was a lack of high calibre higher education. For this reason, in 1978 the young Tehranian came to the United States of America so that Mahmoud could study chemical engineering. After the Tehranians left Iran, events in Iran reached a climax. The Shah was overthrown and the Ayatollah Khomeni rose to power. Soon after this, a group of American Embassy personnel were taken captive.

When asked how he felt about the situation in his faraway homeland, Mahmoud answered, "I hear a lot of things from everybody but I have to see it and hear it to be sure. I can't justify the truth. I have to see it." The CHS junior went on with an admittance that he was not for or against Khomeni or the hostages. Mahmoud explained that the Ayatollah is in some ways good and in some ways bad. Mahmoud reported that our countrymen are receiving humane treatment; they are able to both eat and exercise freely. However, if the U.S.A. attacked Iran, then the Americans would be killed.

"Iran doesn't bluff. They will kill the hostages if given a reason."

One wonders why Mahmoud is living in the U.S.A. at such a tense political time. Would not another country be a more neutral placed to study?

Mahmoud feels that the U.S.A. offers the best education, so he is willing to face prejudice. Mahmoud wishes to study here and then return to Iran to help his country by being "a real man with knowledge." Many men help by using their strength. Mahmoud feels his greatest contribution will be his knowledge from an American university.

To obtain the best education, this young man has surmounted many barriers. These include distance, customs, languages and politics. And still Mahmoud has one goal in mind.

"I want to be back in Iran helping them out. I know I can't help now. When I become a good teacher I will go back. I will go back to Iran." After having met and talked to this ambitious young man, it is easy to believe that this is exactly what Mahmoud will do.

Obituaries

Gunhild Gammons

Gunhild F. (Ahlstrom) Gammons, wife of the late Edgar B. Lundin and Everett W. Gammons, died Nov. 6.

She leaves daughters Joan L. Lane of Hingham and Doris L. Kirk of Rochester, N.H. and a sister, Clifton Ahlstrom of Arizona.

She also leaves five grandchildren. Memorial services were held Tuesday at the First Parish Church. Donations may be made in her memory to the Flower Fund of the First Parish Church in Cohasset.

Elizabeth Walsh

Mrs. Elizabeth (Cadigan) Walsh, 70, died Nov. 2 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

She was born in Medford and had lived in Cohasset for 27 years. She was a graduate of the Sisters of Notre Dame School in Malden.

She was a member of the Cohasset Women's Club and the Women's Sodality of St. Anthony's Church. She leaves her husband, Richard J. Walsh and several nieces and nephews. A funeral Mass was celebrated Thursday at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery. Remembrances may be made to the Lahey Clinic Foundation in Care of Development Office, 605 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston 02215.

Town churches plan great bazaar Dec. 6!!

The 40th annual Cohasset Village Fair, now sponsored by the four churches of Cohasset Village, will be held on Saturday, December 6, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., when once again the historic Common and the public buildings around it will be turned into a giant benefit bazaar.

One of the very few instances of joint fund-raising cooperation among four religious denominations, the Village Fair has traditionally signalled the opening of the holiday season in this South Shore town.

Ever since Labor Day ... and in some instances earlier ... increasing numbers of parishioners of the First Parish Unitarian, St. Anthony's Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal and Second Congregational churches, have been enlisted in preparations for the Fair.

They have been making gift articles, arranging special events and planning the intricate logistics for the event. By Village Fair day, several hundred persons will have been involved in the work of the Fair.

The Fair took on new dimensions last year with St. Anthony's Church joining the three churches of the Common in staging the Fair and sharing in its proceeds.

The larger Fair will follow a form familiar for the past 40 years, focusing on the sale of Christmas and holiday gifts and the staging of special attractions with a holiday motif. Sale items will include holiday decorations, boutique gifts, wreaths and swags, corsages, plants, gift aprons, home-cooked food, candy, children's articles and a raffle of valuable donated prizes.

The special events will again feature activities particularly appealing to children, with an appearance by Santa Claus in a sleigh on the Common, and a Children's Midway in the Community Center. The day will close with the Village Fair dinner in St. Stephen's church.

Under the rotating system of responsibility for putting on the Fair, the First Parish Unitarian Church has the lead this year, with Mrs. Stuart Weier and Mrs. Richard Tonneson serving as Co-Chairmen of the Central Committee that oversees the total operation of the Fair.

Serving on the Central Committee as representatives of the participating churches this year are the following: Catholic, Mrs. John Bradley and Mrs. John Riley; Congregational, Mrs. Gordon Goodwin and Mrs. Paul Walton; Episcopal, Mrs. Richard Avery and Mrs. Peter Bishop; and Unitarian, Mrs. Richard Redfield and Mrs. James Shumaker. The secretary of the Central Committee is Mrs. S.W. Chittick, and the treasurer is Mrs. Hubert Vanderlugt.

The following year, at the present assessed property tax valuation of $184 million, the loss in revenue to the school department, including excise tax, would be $629,000; and in the second year $95,000. Those figures represent a 55.2% cut of the revenue pie. The advisory committee has indicated that schools should absorb their current share in tax revenue loss in the same ratio they currently do.

The total reduction for the town, accordingly, is $1,138,000 in the first year and $171,000 in the second which represents the 19% Cohasset has to go to reach 2½% of present fair cash value of property.

Town assessor Warren Pratt sent a message to the school committee from Superintendent Crowell. "We are working toward the January 1st deadline to get town property assessed at full valuation."

Crowell said that if the total value of property were to increase from the present $184,700,000 to between $225 million to $275 million, Pratt estimates that Cohasset would lose no money under 2½. That is an increase of between $41 and $91 million and there's no saying whether the Massachusetts Tax Commission will accept our valuation even if it is completed by January 1. Even the deadline of January 1 is questionable. Proposition 2½ says that calculations will be made on the value of property on the date of enactment, or 30 days from the date of the referendum — Dec. 4. Cohasset is going with January 1st deadline.

Crowell reported to the committee that Representative Gerald Cohen, Chairman of the House Committee on Taxation, who addressed a meeting of 60 school superintendents last Wednesday, feels the Legislature will do nothing. Cohen said that if the House doesn't reconvene before January, he questioned whether any amendments or adjustments to Proposition 2½ could be made before summer.

Crowell mentioned three problems he sees in dealing with this mammoth problem: what we will give up in the marketplace to inflation (running at 12% a year); the cost of unemployment compensation for personnel who would most likely have to be laid off (for every 20, another 10 would need to be released to pay for unemployment benefits); and the effects of all this on children.

"The committee will be considering educational services that directly relate to the children's basic education," Crowell reminded the committee.

While the Osgood School represents a savings of $219,000 (if closed), Crowell stressed that there could be alternatives, as indeed there will be, before any final decisions are made or votes taken. "For example," he said, "We could make the hot lunch program self sufficient. Bus service could be eliminated or curtailed. Athletics will be carefully looked at. Interscholastic activities could be curtailed."

He underscored that the administration is trying to find ways to least hurt the education of children in order to meet the real possibility of a sizeable revenue loss to the schools. Lists of alternatives will keep coming to the school committee.

School committee chairman Frank England read portions of a letter the committee sent to the advisory committee in response to their request for a preliminary list of reductions that echoed Crowell's caution. "We emphasized to them that we were providing general information, that the lists were preliminary, items have not been voted."

"Fiscal autonomy is a thing of the past," Crowell said. "We will be preparing a budget as a recommending body." Jack Langmaid added, "No other department can shift line items. There's our fiscal autonomy!" Crowell expressed concern that groups within town will turn against one another for funds.

The school committee asked Crowell to research the laws that might govern the elimination of bus service and to be looking for alternative employment possibilities for staff. Crowell indicated that non-tenured teachers would be in jeopardy, but no personnel cuts will be made this year. He would strive for early notification when those cuts become more of a reality for the next school year.

The school committee meets again on Monday, November 17 at 8 p.m. in the Choral Room of the Jr. Sr. high school.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. III, no. 7 | thursday, november 20, 1980 | 25 cents

20% cuts may be asked

Prop. 2½ = unanswered questions

In another week or so, the Department of Revenue is expected to send the Town guidelines regarding its latest determinations regarding Prop. 2½...and Cohasset officials are waiting with baited breath.

Saturday, the Advisory Committee met on the subject (2½) for approximately four hours...noting that 95 per cent of Town Department budgets are in, complete with suggested 15 per cent deductions.

Unfortunately, proposed budget cuts up to 20 per cent may be required, as a result of the Town Accountant's office having obtained more detailed information.

Town Accountant William Signorelli, backed up by Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, has maintained from the onset of the Prop. 2½ question that the Town, under the Prop. 2½ mandate, can not increase taxes by more than 2½ per cent of the total taxes imposed for the preceding year.

However, at last week's Special TM several voters and Assessor Warren Pratt took issue with Signorelli's figures. Attorney John Ridge said he had attended a Mass. Assessors' Annual Meeting in Hyannis recently during which Deputy State Commissioner Ed Collins said the state would recognize the 1981 reevaluation figures of any Town preparing to go to 100 per cent valuation by Jan. 1.

Pratt said he could not understand the state's mandating under Prop. 2½ that Towns use valuation figures which were established in 1978 and 1979, when the Assessors' office, monthly, sends sales and assessment figures to the state.

"If valuation continues to increase yearly, I cannot understand why we have to keep pegged to '80 statistics," Pratt added.

The Advisory Committee said Saturday, until it hears differently, it will stay with Signorelli's figures on the matter. However, Signorelli noted if 1981

Voters complete Special TM warrant

There will be one less member of the School Committee come Annual Elections...Annual Town Meeting will begin at 1 p.m. on the first Saturday in April of 1981 instead of 10 a.m....the Selectmen will not require any more Selectmen chairs in their meeting room...the 3A purchase of the former Cohasset Motors property was defeated and the Beechwood Coalition got its $3,000 for a study to construct a new fire station on the site of the old Beechwood Fire Station.

The adjourned session of the Oct. 28 Special TM got underway at 7:45 p.m. last week — a quorum having been reached. During the evening over 450 voters were present at one time or another...the quorum staying until the 11th hour...finishing all the Town's business.

An article asking for $12,000 to pay veterans' medical benefits passed 342 to 1 on a hand count. When Moderator David Place asked voters standing along the wall of the CHS auditorium to be seated, they refused.

Starting now, the Town will not be required to go out to bid on any project costing less than $4,000. And Grethe and Robert Fesler received an easement for maintaining existing water pipes, drains and cesspool located under Town property.

On a voice vote, TM agreed to install old Police Department vehicles in Town vehicles at the cost of $1,330.

See related Special TM articles throughout this issue.

Route 3A purchase defeated Beechwood fire station study voted

Special TM voters overwhelmingly defeated Selectmen's article asking the Town to purchase the former Cohasset Motors property on 3A, which would have serviced the Town has a two-stall fire station and a Highway and Wire Department garage. Cost: $450,000 plus $50,000 in renovation costs.

The vote was 142 in favor, 303 against.

Similarly, voters gave Beechwood $3,000 in study funds to prepare designs for the building and/or renovation of a new Beechwood Fire Station. The vote was 193 in favor, 128 against the study funds.

Selectmen and the Fire Station Study Committee were the only two groups of officials who recommended in favor of the 3A purchase, Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark pointing out the need for the garaging of some 52 Town vehicles.

Clark said he felt Prop. 2½ would be amended in short order, "The state must relieve towns of fixed costs, pensions. Why turn down this opportunity?"

Speaking for the Advisory Committee, Ozzie Ingram said his committee recommended against the 3A purchase because of Prop. 2½, and because it would add another $58,000 to the Town's debt service.

Open or closed — the dump will cost plenty

On a voice vote, last week's Special TM voted $10,900 for a hydrological study to be done by E.J. Flynn Co. at the sanitary land fill.

The engineering services are required by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Sewer Commissioners are also interested in the results of the study, as the Town needs an acceptable place to dump sludge from the new sewerage treatment plant in order that it can meet stipulations of the consent decree the Town made with the state.

However, whether the study allows the Town to use the dump for another five to seven years or recommends that the dump be closed, it will all cost approximately the same amount.

The Flynn Co. will require three months to complete its hydrology study. If the dump has more years, funding for a design would be requested at Annual TM 1981 (approximately $20,000). If the dump had to be capped, capping designs would cost $5,000.

In either event, construction costs for capping or rehabilitation of the dump would cost in the neighborhood of $75,000.

Place pulls WATD's plug at Special TM

By Tanna Kasperowicz

WATD Reporter Terry Murray was sitting in the front row at the Nov. 13 Special TM. Shortly after the session opened, she pulled out a mike, occasionaly directing it toward speakers at the microphone in front of the hall.

Within minutes of the meeting's commencement, Moderator David Place called a a 20 second recess, during which he pulled Reporter Murray aside and told her she did not have his permission to tape the meeting's proceedings.

She agreed to not use any of the taping she had made thus far, adding that she would not tape any additional parts of the meeting.

John Mooney, WATD News Anchor, said in a phone interview Monday that the Moderator's action at the Nov. 13 Special TM left a scar for WATD in Cohasset.

Mooney noted that Reporter Murray had been on the job only four days, adding "If we were obnoxious or irresponsible, he may have had a reason for stopping the taping of the meeting. But WATD's trend in Cohasset has been complete cooperation from Selectmen on down."

According to Mooney, WATD will write a letter to Place telling him it respects his decision, "But WATD would appreciate better cooperation in the future."

Mooney said WATD edits all tapes to 30-40 second cuts. "We make an attempt to make people sound articulate through editing cuts, much as a print

Cohasset's Week

Pope sale contested

Ernest Sofis, treasurer of the South Shore Hellenic Church Association of Cohasset, said Sunday a trial date has been set at Dedham Court this week to hear testimony regarding the conditions of sale of the Pope Memorial Church.

According to Sofis, four heirs of Albert Pope, the individual who built the Jerusalem Road Church in memory of his son who died in an accident, are contesting conditions of the sale. Sofis said he was not able to elaborate on the heirs' reasons for being against the sale, but said he had spoken and/or written to all four individuals.

Trustees of the Pope Memorial Church wish to sell the church to the Hellenic Church for financial reasons.

Gambling meeting

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R - Cohasset, Hingham, Hull) will meet with Hingham and Cohasset Selectmen regarding the proposed gambling casino in Hull and any legislation regarding the same at 8 p.m., Nov. 25 at the Hingham Town Hall.

Cohasset Selectmen have registered their disapproval of gambling in Hull, saying traffic problems and extra police would be required.

At the Nov. 13 Special TM a non-binding resolution offered by Selectmen against gambling passed on an aye voice vote, but as Town Moderator David Place said: "The ayes have it, but it is not unanimous."

The resolution asked voters to oppose legalized casino gambling in the Town of Hull, direct the elected Senator and Representative to oppose and vote against any legislation legalizing gambling in the Town of Hull and to file and support a bill to prohibit legalized casino gambling in the Commonwealth.

Medicomps, Inc.

Selectmen said last week they will schedule a meeting with Medicomps, Inc. in the near future regarding that company's taking over collection of fees for ambulance service in the town. Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark noted that the Town of Marshfield had recently turned its billing over to the company. "Medicomps says it can guarantee an 80 per cent return rate."

Henry Ainslie said: "We abate a lot now, I'm not sure what we collect."

Medicomps will be asked to review the Town's ambulance collection system and submit a proposal.

Christmas tree

If the Town or merchants wish it, they can have at no charge a 20-foot high nicely-shaped pine tree for the Common. Evelyn Prescott of Old Pasture Road made the offer. Selectmen said they would check with merchants and Peter Laugelle, Tree & Park Department, before accepting the offer.

Appointment made

Fire Captain Roger Lincoln was appointed the Town's representative to the State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) meeting on hazardous waste.

More fees raised

At last week's meeting, Selectmen raised the following license fees accordingly: The all-alcoholic Club license went from $375 to $500; Seasonal All-Alcoholic License from $375 to $500; Wine & Malt Retail Year-Round License from $150 to $250.

Wine & Malt Common victuallers' License from $150 to $250; Drúggist All-Alcoholic License from $200-$300; Junk Collectors from $20 to $35; Amusement Licenses (per machine) from $20 to $25.

Weekday Entertainment License at $2 a week day was not changed. Selectmen saying they needed more information.

Raftery selected

School Business Manager John Raftery was recently selected by the State Department of Education to serve on the State Advisory Council regarding the nutritional education and training program through Sept. 1983.

Will receive scores

During a routine discussion of meeting minutes, the School Committee discussed whether it should receive achievement scores with names blanked out for advanced placement courses.

Committeewoman Patricia Walsh said she had received many complaints from parents who said their children are not being adequately prepared for achievement exams, and argued if the Committee doesn't know what the scores are, it can't act.

A motion by Irene Brown for the Committee to not receive the scores was defeated. Both Vice Chairman Jack Langmaid and Mrs. Brown voted in favor of the motion.

Newspaper costs

Philip Dormitzer and Cathy O'Brien, co-editors of The Cohasset Lamplight met with the School Committee recently regarding funding of the student-produced newspaper.

The committee voted 6-0 to appropriate an additional $332 to cover expenses to the end of the school year. School Committeewoman Diana Kornet noted: "The $1,692 (total estimated budget) is well spent when it involves the same number of kids as football."

Irene Brown said: "It's a great undertaking, we're proud of you."

The Lamplight has published one independent edition, and plans an additional three eight-page editions. In addition, a Lamplight page runs on a bi-weekly basis in the Mariner.

Missing Cohasset man ordered to stop businesss

Police are continuing their search for 40 year-old Robert Cochems of Jerusalem Road, who was reported missing by his wife last Wednesday.

Cochems disappeared two days before he had been ordered to appear before the securities division of the secretary of state's office as part of a civil inquiry seeking to determine whether Cochems, who was associated with the McCaffrey Investment Co. of Cohasset, and/or his company had violated state laws regulating the sale of securities and commodity options.

Late last week, the state ordered him to stop operating his commodities option business. The order contends that Cochems and co-worker Lance Johnson may have violated state securities laws because they failed to register with the state as individuals or as a firm before selling sugar options.

The Cohasset office used by McCaffery Investment Co. is now vacant except for some office furniture.

Prior to working for McCaffery Investment Co., Cochems was the office manager for a Dedham firm that was also investigated by the state for allegedly illegally selling commodity options. American Gold and Silver Exchange and American Petroleum and Oil Exchange Ltd. was ordered to stop from selling commodity options.

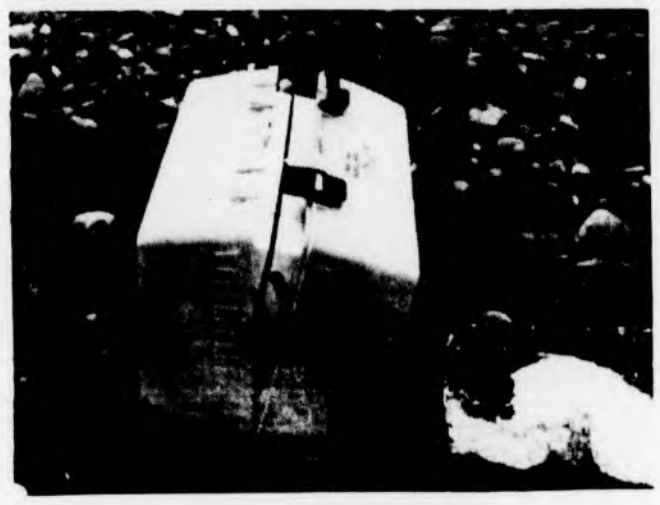
Earlier this year Cochems operated First American Investment Co. in Braintree and then moved his business to Rhode Island after the state Securities Division investigators visited the firm's office.

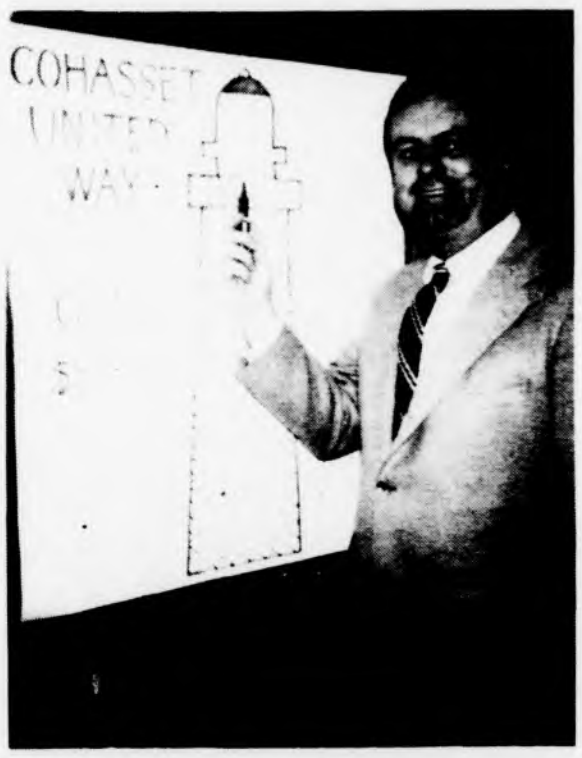
Cohasset Police Chief John DeBassio said his department has no firm evidence suggesting foul play or confirming that Cochems may have drowned. Cochems had sold one of his family's two cars the day before he disappeared and had at least $800 in cash with him when he went fishing on Black Rock Beach last Tuesday.

Last week the Coast Guard at Allerton and Quincy police scuba divers assisted Cohasset police in searching the beach area where a tackle box identified as Cochems' was found. An orange jacket was discovered in the area, but it was not identified as belonging to Cochems.

According to Cochem's wife, he had gone surf fishing at Black Rock Beach at 9 p.m. Tuesday night. She did not report Cochems as missing until 4:30 a.m. Wednesday morning.

In 1946 the McCaffrey firm was listed as a local jewelry business. Over the years, the company became involved in wholesale catalogs, The National List Co., and McCaffrey Investment Co.





Robert P. Magner, Cohasset United Way Drive Chairman, indicates that Cohasset still needs contributions if it is to reach its $8,800 goal.

School Committee to lose one member

It was yes, on a loud voice, to reduce the School Committee by one member (six to five members) beginning at 1981 Annual Elections.

Proponents and opponents of the reduction spoke eloquently on the matter — but it appeared voters came to the polls prepared to put a stop to time-consuming 3-3 (no action) votes of this Committee. The voice vote was loud and firm.

All recommending boards and committees were in favor of the reduction, excepting the School Committee itself, which was split 3-3 on the issue.

Petitioner James Leonard said when there are organizational problems within a committee, it is appropriate to decrease the deliberating members on the committee...not increase them.

"The School Committee shows too little regard for reaching consensus," Leonard said, adding that he found individual members of the Committee to be dedicated, nonetheless.

School Committee Chairman Frank England and Dan Cotton spoke against reduction. England said the six-member committee required a two thirds vote to pass anything, eliminating quick, spur-of-the-moment decisions. And as a result of the passage of Prop. 2½, England said greater workloads would be forced onto all Committeemen and women.

"Discussion and argument are part and parcel of the Democratic process," Cotton said. "Democracy isn't efficient. The tie vote problem can be resolved within the Committee. I believe it can be if the Committee is so inclined to do so."

Jacqueline Dormitzer also spoke against reduction, while Nancy Clapp spoke in favor, as did former school committee member and chairman Doris Golden. "People on the School Committee were elected to make a decision. A 3-3 vote is a stagnant vote, it goes nowhere. If three Selectmen can serve 8,000 people, five School Committee members can serve 1,500 students," Golden said.

re-evaluation figures could be used, the Town of Cohasset would have to reduce its budget by $110,000 in excise tax money only.

"I still feel we'll have to use the State Tax Commission figure of $184 million," Signorelli said, "unless we can show by documentation that the figure set by the State Tax Commission is incorrect.

According to Signorelli, budgetary reductions in fiscal 1982, under Prop. 2½, will on average be 17.4 per cent of the current year's level of spending.

The Advisory Committee voted to advise the Water Department that it is expected to be self-sufficient, and its revenues and expenses should be kept in balance. Water Commissioners will be asked to plan to repay the Town the $206,000 it borrowed in Jan. '76.

The next meeting of the Advisory Committee will be Thursday, Dec. 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Gambling would have local controls

To the Editor:

As spokesman for the resort development issue in Hull, I would like to respond to articles in the local press over the past week.

Certainly, Hull Officials have tried in the past to be respectful of abutting communities in regard to this issue. We have held various public forums during which both the pros and cons of resort development were discussed.

The casino issue in Hull is not a new issue. It has been discussed in Hull for well over a three-year period.

I would like to respond to the non-binding resolution voted at the Cohasset Town Meeting of Nov. 13, and to both Cohasset and Hingham Board of Selectmen's fears that traffic will be increased in their towns should a resort development with a casino be instituted in Hull.

The only valid concern raised by either Hingham or Hull officials is the question of increased traffic through their communities.

Both Route 228 and 3A are state roads. They are maintained by the Commonwealth. They are there for the use of the people in the Commonwealth.

Although the specifics regarding resort development and how it would be regulated in the Town of Hull, should legislation pass, are well-known to Hull residents, it appears that is not the case outside the Town.

Any casino would operate under the 24-hour rule restriction. Hull would retain ultimate controls on the casino through its zoning process. The Hull Estate is presently zoned for one-acre single family house lots.

MGM-Grand Hotel bought the land knowing full well what the zoning is. Before Hull re-zones the property for a resort development, MGM must perform to the Town's satisfaction. Re-zoning would require a two third's vote.

In addition to a re-zoning of the property, legislation would require a binding referendum on the matter. A majority of those voting would have to vote in favor of the legislation.

All licensing of the casino would be through local officials. Licensing could be revoked at will by the Hull Selectmen. In addition, the referendum would have to be repeated every two years.

While we are not insensitive to the possible ramifications of casino gambling to Hingham and Cohasset, it was insulting to me to see the officials of both towns react in the Rip Van Winkle syndrome.

Town officials or citizens wishing to hear more information regarding this issue, should call me at 727-2415 or 925-4771. We would be glad to educate you on the matter.

Sincerely,
Robert S. Burns
Chairman
Hull Planning Board

Notes & comments

....Town Moderator David Place certainly did pull the plug on WATD's tape recorder at last week's Special TM.

But as far as we know, the Moderator has the exclusive right to ban either the taping or filming of any session, if he determines it would interfere in any way with discussion or debate of an issue.

Certainly WATD has taped Cohasset Town Meetings over the past several years. . .apparently without the Moderator's permission or knowledge.

In the future, WATD should play by the rules and ask the Moderator's permission to tape. It could be a simple solution.

...Noel Ripley received a "timely" reward and a standing ovation at Special TM last week for his work on the Town Clock on the Unitarian Church on the Common. His gift...a beautiful original painting by Lisa Bemis.

Moderator David Place noted that Noel has also seen to the ringing of church bells for the American hostages in Iran for the past 374 days. "Thank you for our Town," Place said. We echo those thoughts.

...Discussion of Prop. 2½ is just as entertaining and exciting as we knew it would be. Strange that the Advisory Committee's meeting on the same last Saturday wasn't mobbed with residents. Just a couple of old reporters attended.

...Most of the 450 plus voters who attended Special TM last week agreed that it was a good, old-fashioned TM...packed with good speakers and good debate.

But even an imploring invocation by Rev. Ed Atkinson, asking voters to keep their wits about them in spite of the heavy issues, failed to keep the darts from flying through the air.

Sometime during the meeting, Ed got a note from an anonymous voter which stated simply: "Your prayer didn't work."

...With the advent of Prop. 2½, there will probably not be enough funds to man the North Cohasset and (proposed) Beechwood Fire Stations, Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said at Special TM last week. Cohasset and Beechwood equipment will have to be operated by call men."

Unfortunately, Clark told voters the same only after the defeat of the 3A purchase article, which would have provided for a two-stall fire garage and highway and wire department facilities at the former Cohasset Motors property.

...Retiring Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt received a standing ovation at Special TM for his years of service at the plant. See article on his testimonial elsewhere in this newspaper.

Runner McGillivray collects $10,000

To the Editor:

On Friday, Nov. 7, 1980, at the Lantana, 350 guests paid tribute to Dave McGillivray for his extraordinary feat of the recent 120; 24 hour "Run for Our Dreams" Marathon.

Ned Martin "voice of the Red Sox" was M.C. Ken Coleman, Jim Nance and several sports personalities honored Dave with their presence.

After a very emotional movie of Dave's Marathon — his entrance into Schaeffer Stadium at half-time of the Miami - N.E. Patriots football game on Oct. 12, 1980, and the reception of love and brotherhood at the Wrentham State School. Dave presented a check totaling more than $10,000 to Francis Kelly, the Superintendent of the Wrentham State School.

As chairperson of Cohasset (one of the 30 cities and towns en route) I want to thank you — the Mariner — and all the supporters of this most worthy cause — especially those who joined the runners at 2:20 Sunday morning on rain-soaked route 3A.

I sincerely appreciate your support!

Very truly yours,
Maria A. Plante

P.S. An interesting footnote:

Fr. James Coffey (Chaplain at Wrentham State) told me that Tony Pisa, the organizer for the Marathon is serving a life sentence at Walpole State Prison. I met Tony Pisa Friday night — he was out on furlough to pay tribute to Dave. Fr. Coffey has been involved with work programs for inmates at Walpole to work with the residents at Wrentham.

Feels town's on right track

To the Editor:

United we stand, divided we fall.

Looking back at the Special Town Meeting last week, and the rejection of the 3A purchase, one thing changed. Study funds for a fire station in Beechwood were approved. The need for additional fire protection was not rejected outright, as it has been over past years.

Acceptance of a town garage and combination fire station was close to being a reality. The VOTE was there and if not for Prop. 2½ and a special interest group it may well have been a reality today.

To me, this proves that the town committees and officials are on the right track. For years the Cohasset voters have rejected another fire station, a combination facility may be the answer; and I hope this avenue will continue to be explored in April.

Chester Magee
Beechwood Street

P.S. To those that feel I have an interest in buying the old fire station, it can't be done! May I suggest a tennis court with the $4,000 in escrow!

Cohasset Advisory Committee will be putting in some long nights and days over Proposition 2½ this year. (Derr photo)

Edwin H. Pratt — 'Rex Morgan, M.D. to us all'

Citations, plaques, gifts and applause were in order last Friday at Hugo's when a large gathering of friends, Town officials and the Pratt family gathered to honor Edwin H. Pratt on his retirement, Dec. 1, as Water Superintendent after 13 years of service, 22 years as an employee of the department.

Later in the evening, Ed Pratt turned the tables on everybody by giving out gold pins to members of the Water Department who had served the Town faithfully and well...noting there had been little and no turnover in that department for years and years.

Ed received citations from the Governor, the House of Representatives, the Selectmen, and Senator Ted Kennedy. He received a bevy of both strange and wonderous gifts from co-workers and SEA Consultants.

Master of Ceremonies Jack Conway referred to Ed as "a man who worries about waterborne diseases... a Rex Morgan, M.D. to all of us."

Burt Pratt, famed local historian and Ed's brother, pulled a James Mitchner on the captive audience, by tracing Ed's and 350 years of Pratt families history beginning with their arrival on The Sparrow, which arrived sometime after the Mayflower.

"Ed Pratt was one of eight kids...as low man he had to be strong just to survive," Burt Pratt said, confessing how he (Burt) had almost put an end to Ed when Ed, as an infant, swallowed a trigger off Burt's cap gun.

In 1941 Ed graduated from CHS, and a few months later the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor... and Ed went off to war. In 1946 he married Eileen Andrews of Cohasset.

Paul Ross of SEA Engineers, said he looked upon Ed as both a client and a friend. He presented Ed with slides of the water treatment plant from conception to completion and a projector to show them on.

New England Waterworks Association President, Walter Amory, presented a plaque to Ed, and Water Department co-workers Bill McCullough and Ben Curley presented Ed with a clock in the shape of a water meter. Curley recalled how Ed had first shown Curley how to install a water meter at the Pratt house. "He blew it apart, saying — now that isn't how you do it."

Co-workers also presented Ed with a left-handed golf club with a beer can soldered on it, and a ball glued on the end.

Ed officially retires Dec. 1. He and his wife will move to Florida in January.

Soon to be retired Water Superintendent Ed Pratt and his wife, Eileen, reflect on some fond memories at Pratt's testimonial at Hugo's last week. (Derr photo)

☐ Randy Feola has gone to his favorite winter retreat in Florida and we wonder if he'll have as much fun down there knowing he doesn't have to come back?!

☐ The "Weekend retreating" is great for the over-worked, over-taxed, over-parented person(s) or couple. The best advice one local couple has to offer to would-be retreaters is: get farther away than the town you live in. A trip to Kimball's, when home is a short walk away, isn't to townies what it is to out-of-townies. Anything can happen. A husband could even go home for something he forgot and fall asleep on the couch leaving the wife slumbering alone in a double overlooking Cohasset harbor!

Relief from Logan air noise on horizon

By Nancy Burns

A new airplane route over Scituate, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull which will lessen noise appears to be on the horizon due to the efforts of a coalition from those four towns.

The refinement of Alternative Six, the much disputed new departure route which has increased noise levels over the South Shore, features homing devices on one of the Brewster Islands to guide departures and another homing device on land to guide arrivals.

The specifics aren't available yet, said former Scituate Selectman Patsy Proctor, Monday. Mrs. Proctor, who is one of Scituate's two representatives on the coalition, indicated that the group, particularly two pilots, had spent many hours working on an alternative which wouldn't have an adverse impact on other communites.

"In order to illustrate that the refinement won't have any impact on their towns the coalition is going to Winthrop, East Boston, Brookline, and Sqantum this Saturday to discuss the plan," she said.

Reaction from federal and MassPort officials has been good, said Mrs. Proctor. The group has worked closely with Cong. Gerry Studds, who has been instrumental in getting the FAA to listen and take the plan seriously.

MassPort Director Dave Davis feels the proposal will relieve many problems and reduce the workload of the control tower, she said.

Initially the reaction from FAA Regional Director Whittington was that this is just another group, according to Mrs. Proctor. After Cong. Studds pointed out the group had done some constructive work Whittington was agreeable to evaluating the proposal. A month was given for an FAA team to review the refinement.

The coalition pilots are slated to meet with Whittington Nov. 24 to discuss the FAA's evaluation, and the coalition is hopeful of a positive result.

Sen. Paul Tsongas hasn't made any comment on the proposal yet. His staff is still evaluating it, noted Mrs. Proctor.

Coalition members include Mrs. Proctor and Charles Angevine, Scituate; Debbie Cook, Cohasset; Caroline Stouffer, Hingham and Pam Wolfe and Bob Mandel, Hull.

More Selectmen chairs not needed

The Advisory Committee didn't recommend it. The Town Government Structure Committee said no. Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark added, "All I can say is we don't recommend it either," it being a petitioners' article to increase the Board of Selectmen from 3-5 members.

Petitioner Frederick Huntwork offered a motion for the increase without precincts, saying he felt a five-member board could do a better job.

Joseph Barresi said "Changes should be made for solid reasons — it would be foolish to go from 3-5 members to expand the Democratic process." A voice vote defeated the motion in the 11th hour of Special TM.

New water supt. to be chosen shortly

Water Commission Chairman William Montouri said Monday his board has received 15 resumes in response to its advertisement for Water Department Superintendent, at a salary of $19 - $23,000.

As of Monday, Commissioners had interviewed a total of three individuals for the job, which is being vacated as a result of the retirement of Edwin H. Pratt.

Montouri said applications are still being received, but said Commissioners hope to make their decision within the next few weeks.

Cohasset Lamplight seeks financial independence

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Cohasset Lamplight student co-editors, Seniors Cathy O'Brien and Philip Dormitzer, have all the same problems editors of weekly and daily newspapers have, and then some.

With one four-page "independent" issue and two Lamplight pages in the Mariner (the Lamplight appears here on a biweekly basis) under their belts, their goal now is to achieve financial independence for their newspaper by the end of the year.

And that's a large undertaking for two busy seniors, who are both "into" music and senior activities.

When I suggested that being editors of the Lamplight was not unlike being the editor of a newspaper in a Communist-controlled country, Cathy and Philip broke into wide grins.

They both want (and have) to take stands, unpopular or not. They want controversial letters and commentaries from their readers and writers. They think the Lamplight can help to change things.

"The whole school is going through this thing — they think they can't change anything," Cathy said.

Achieving financial independence may also free up Lamplighter editorially, Philip thinks. But he later reflected that Lamplight's teacher advisor would still be held accountable for anything they said. "We'll all be gone in six months — he'll still be here. We did plan to have students rate their teachers at the end of this year, except we both have younger brothers and sisters" (coming through the system).

The goal for this year is to "Try to get it (Lamplight) out of the hobby stage," Cathy said.

"We also want to make it more attractive for students, make it more utilitarian," Philip added.

Comments from students so far have been that the first independent issue focused too much on teachers. "They want to see their names in the paper."

Precisely because the newspaper must get out of the hobby stage, future issues will all be sold. And the co-editors are looking into the possibility of student subscriptions after their eight-page Christmas issue. They are planning to sell student classified ads, trades, swaps. And they definitely want to work on their writing, through workshops.

"There are six or seven writers...of whom four or five are exceptional. But basically, no one's trained. We have to re-orient our way of writing. All writing at CHS is essay-geared, or gimmicky, i.e. pyramid-style poetry. We want creative writing, too, but we don't want to steal the thunder away from the literary magazine," Philip said.

They are also impressed with the responsibility of publishing.

"We were told at a recent Boston Globe conference of student editors about libel. First Cathy and I get sued, then the writer, then Mr. Kite (Bill Kite is the advisor) and on down the line. We were also told at the Globe conference that to be independent, we must be totally outside the school, and that the school would have the right to bar the selling of the paper," Philip said.

In the future, Lamplight fund-raisers such as bake sales and car washes will help to raise this year's budget. But Cathy and Philip hope by the end of the year, by utilizing sound business practices, they can leave a financially solvent Lamplight to their successors, and get Lamplight out of the bake-sale era.

Cathy and Philip have recently worked out an agreement whereby they trade off on editorial stands. "But you should hear us on the phone the night before a deadline," Cathy said.

And they've already taken some "flak" over editorials and other articles. "After my editorial on Prop. 2½ one teacher said, "Enjoy AP (advanced placement program) while you have it, Phil."

Capital plans for CHS

At the request of the capital budget committee, the School Committee recently reviewed and rated capital spending plans for the next five years. The committee evaluated the items on a scale of 1 (high) to five (low) with the full and uncertain impact of Proposition 2½ keenly in mind:

Item	Est. Cost	Rating
Back-up hot water system for high school	$10-12,000	#1
Second phase of unit ventilating blowers at high school	$ 8,500	#1
In-depth analysis of of playing field needs for community	unknown	#3
Renovation of CHS auditorium	$30,000	#3
Drainage improvement and	$ 5,000	#2

Cohasset ambulance for emergency only

Ida and Andrew Fortier have lived in Cohasset for years. And over the years they saw the Town switch the ambulance service to the Fire Department; they voted in favor of the Town's entering into an agreement with several Towns to purchase a back-up ambulance.

In all the years the Fortiers have lived in Cohasset, they have been fortunate, until recently, in having never needed ambulance service.

And then when Ida called for service recently, she was denied that service.

A fireman told Ida when she called, Thursday, Nov. 6 that the ambulance service was for emergencies only.

Ida said she explained that on Thursday afternoon Andrew's condition was deteriorating rapidly, and that his doctor told her to admit him to South Shore Hospital the following morning.

"He wasn't lucid, he couldn't get out of bed. I scanned the yellow pages for a private ambulance but couldn't find any. The Fire Department gave me the name of Shore Ambulance Co., which came the following day, at the cost of $200 plus so much every four miles. But I haven't been billed yet, and I don't know what portion of that bill, if any, Blue Cross/Blue Shield will pay."

Acting Fire Chief Tom Hernan said Monday that there are so many requests for ambulance service that the Town has had to create a policy whereby the ambulance is on call for emergencies only.

Hernan said if Andrew Fortier had been ordered to the hospital immediately, and not the next day, the Fire Department would have responded. He added if the Fortier's doctor had called in the request, the Fire Department would probably have also responded.

Essentially, Hernan said his department can not consider emergencies by appointment, adding that the ambulance must be free for the emergency accident on 3A, the heart attack victim, the person whose condition requires immediate attention.

Center plans trip & workshop

The Cohasset Community Center is sponsoring a bus trip to see the ballet "The Nutcracker Suite." The bus will leave the Center Sunday, Dec. 14 at 1 p.m. and return by 5 p.m. The trip was sold out last year so make your reservation now. This is a lovely ballet and a wonderful way to start the Holiday Season.

GINGERBREAD HOUSE WORKSHOP

Wednesday, Dec. 3, from 9:30 to 11:30 Martha Hurtig will instruct the group in making Gingerbread Houses. These delicious and delightful holiday treats were popular last year with the whole family. A new addition to Gingerbread making this year will be the Gingerbread Sleigh Workshop on Tuesday, Dec. 9 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Two Christmas ornament workshops will also be held. Mary Struzziero of Scituate will show Patchwork ornaments (no sewing involved) as well as holiday placemats. This workshop will be Thursday, Dec. 4, 9:30 to 11:30. This is a great way to use up those scraps of calico or Christmas fabric. Donna Grafton will have an egg decorating workshop on Thursday, Dec. 11, from 9:30 to 11:30. Two finished ornaments will be made, one a decoupage design and one a panorama design. These will truly add charm to your Christmas tree.

Call the Center daily from 9 a.m. to noon to register for any of these programs, 383-0088.

Cohasset churches unite to delight residents!

Home-cooked delicacies for gourmet tastes will share the spotlight with fast-food offerings for gulpers at the 40 th annual Cohasset Village Fair to be staged in buildings around Cohasset Common on Saturday, December 6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Village Fair is the once-a-year joint fund-raising project of the four churches of Cohasset Village and traditionally rings in the holiday season in the town. The churches sharing in the work and proceeds are St. Stephen's Episcopal, First Parish Unitarian, St.Anthony's Catholic and Second Congregational.

The home-cooked food table will hold a featured spot in the Town Hall, offering a bounteous supply of breads, cakes, cookies and other specialities of the town's most talented culinary artists. Mrs. Merle Brown heads up the group that will solicit and sell the delicacies.

Church representatives assisting will include Mrs. James Donohue, St. Anthony's; Mrs. Frederick Howe, St. Stephen's; and Mrs. John Langmaid, Unitarian.

Sharing attention in the Town Hall will be a candy table, where a committee headed by Mrs. Colin Studds, will be selling a wide variety of special sweets appealing to the tastes of children of all ages. Mrs. John Spencer will assist in gathering the goodies.

Once again, specially-selected Vermont cheese will be put on sale at the Fair by Hamilton Tewksbury, whose cheese selection and offering have become an institution at the event.

The quick-lunchers will be served at the Town Hall by the Snack Bar presided over by Philip Shockman and a group of men from the four churches.

This familiar stand-by of the Fair will again be serving hot dogs, doughnuts and soft drinks. In the snack department, as well will be the popcorn machine of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Hobson, and the Tacos bar to be operated by a group of young people of the Congregational church under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Nedrow.

Across the Common in the Unitarian Parish House will be the traditional Chowder Bar of the Fair, offering clam chowder, plus a limited menu of sandwiches and desserts. This is a favorite luncheon spot. Mrs. Kevin Leary heads an energetic group that will staff this busy activity.

The final food features of the Fair will be the annual Village Fair dinner on Saturday evening, December 6, in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Episcopal church.

A catered baked ham dinner has been arranged and will be served by a group headed by Mrs. Frank Libby. The dinner in recent years has established itself as a delightful dining occasion. Tickets, limited to the capacity of the hall, are on sale by representatives of each of the churches.

Mrs. Stuart Weier is General Chairman of this year's Fair, which is the responsibility of the Unitarian Church under the rotating system of leadership.

She is assisted by Mrs. Richard Tonneson as Assistant Chairman. Church representatives are Mrs. John Bradley and Mrs. John Riley, St. Anthony's; Mrs. Gordon Goodwin and Mrs. Paul Walton, Congregational; Mrs. Richard Redfield and Mrs. James Shumaker, Unitarian; and Mrs. Richard Avery and Mrs. Peter Bishop, Episcopal.

L-R — Mrs. Gordon Goodwin and Mrs. Dennis Mulligan discuss plans for Cohasset's Village Fair, to be held Saturday, Dec. 6. Mrs. Goodwin is chairman of the Central Committee. Mrs. Mulligan is chairman of the popular "Grabs" feature.

Commentary

A team . . . not a few big monsters

The Skipper's record is now 5-4. Yes, 5 wins, a winning season.

If you are like me you say to yourself, how can this year's team, relatively small, compare to much bigger teams who played for CHS in the last three years of non productive seasons, be winning?

How can this year's team excel when monsters like Barry Buckley, Ian McCormick, Paul Farren, Tom Ballerino, Chris Keating, Matt Brown, Dave Turner, Scott Sandblom, John Durkin and countless others failed to do so?

There are two reasons. One, they are a team, not a few big monsters; they are a team and they play like a team, act like a team and look like a team.

Two, they have a good coach, John Leone, the man who made them a team.

The Bruins had Don Cherry, Notre Dame had Knute Rockne, the Green Bay Packers had Vince Lombardi and the Skippers have John Leone.

Look for a Tough Skipper Team (with a capital T) walk right over Duxbury this Thanksgiving.

CHS quartet to sing for senior citizens

The Cohasset High School Barber Shop Quartet, under the direction of Mr. Brian Marks, will entertain at the Ripley Rd. Nursing Home on Wednesday, Nov. 19.

The monthly birthday party will honor presidents Mrs. Helen Heapes, Florence Ewell and Julia Donovan.

Men in blue romp on Bulls with 15-0 score

The pigskinners had a perfect day for football on Saturday and they justified this by playing perfect football. They faced Holbrook, an underrated team with an extremely tough defense, but not too tough for the men in blue.

Backs Joe Beckes, Bob Donahue, and Jack McNiel ran steadily through it all afternoon on the way to a 15-0 romp.

The scoring started in the first quarter when the Skippers forced the Bulldogs to punt. They deflected the old pelota and managed to gain control deep into Holbrook territory.

The Skippers inched closer and closer to the end zone until quarterback Kevin Dooley found Mark Froio in the end zone to put the Skippers ahead by six.

Holbrook then took over and when they tried to go to the air the Skippers proved to be just too strong.

On third down when Holbrook's quarterback faded back to pass the Skipper defensive line led by Paul Buckley charged right in.

The Holbrook Q.B. got the ball off, a bullet, right into the hands of big blue number 54, Paul Buckley, who grabbed it and ran.

Unfortunately the Skippers couldn't score on this drive but it dimmed the light on any Bulldog hopes.

The Skipper defense was still going strong as the third quarter began. Mike Jones led the linebackers and Bob Fessier the line.

The teams continued to waffle in the midfield area until the Skippers penetrated deeply into Bulldog territory, but were again denied and Holbrook took over.

Tim Libby, returning from a broken wrist and only able to play defense, just could not accept this. He pulled down a Holbrook pass and crashed nine yards to the touchdown.

The Skippers added a 37 yard field goal in the waning minutes by Paul Buckley to put the icing on the cake.

The halftime show consisted of a salute to the hostages by the CHS marching band.

Also it was the big day for the big bird as the junior class raffled off a 20 pound turkey to winner Tom Churchill of Border Street.

Obituaries

Timothy Horigan

Timothy Leo Horigan Sr., 85, of Towson, Md., formerly of Cohasset and a retired vice president of the former Sheridan's store in Quincy, died in Towson Sunday.

He was born in Elmira, N.Y., where he was a graduate of Elmira High School, and had lived in Towson since 1968.

One of the first professional football players, he was the all-American fullback on the New York University team and was a 1921 graduate of the university. He also played fullback for the Canton Bull Dogs of Canton, N.J., the first professional football team.

While at New York University he was a member of the Zeta-Psi fraternity and was a former member of the Quincy Rotary, Hatherly Country Club of Scituate, the Maryland and Baltimore country clubs, and the New York Athletic Club.

Mr. Horigan was a Navy veteran of World War I.

Husband of the late Alice K. (Hanna) Horigan, he leaves two sons, Timothy Leo Horigan Jr. of Scituate and Richard Thomas Horigan of Amsterdam, N.Y.; two daughters, Mary Catherine Frank of Baltimore and Alice P. Caires of Honolulu, Hawaii; and 21 grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 10 a.m. Wednesday in St. Anthony's Church. Burial will be in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Anna Strobel

Anna Bertha Helen Strobel died Nov. 9. She leaves one niece, Eileen Smith of East Hampton, Long Island and several cousins. Memorial services were held at The Vedanta Center Chapel last Thursday.

No money

The Advisory Committee said Saturday it would like the Water Department to think about paying back a Town loan of approximately $200,000. But Commissioners said Monday they presently have no money to pay back.

Protective service staffing sought

Sen. Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth, met recently with members of the Protective Services Coalition, Rep. Philip Johnston and an aide to Sen. Backman, chairman of the Committee on Human Services, to discuss the continuing problems of uncovered protective service cases in the Department of Social Services' South Shore (Quincy) and Coastal (Weymouth) area offices.

The Department of Social Services offices provide help and protection for abused and neglected children.

The Protective Service advocates outlined the current levels of reported and uncovered protective service cases, the staffing levels necessary to adequately handle the increasing number of cases and financial requirements for the upcoming fiscal year.

Area office numbers of uncovered cases remain high, in spite of new, temporary staff assigned to the area offices, because of the high ratio of new, incoming cases to closed cases.

Sen. McKinnon said, "This is a serious problem that becomes even more critical in light of the anticipated fiscal year 1982 budget constraints."

Sen. McKinnon, Rep. Johnston and Sen. Backman will meet with Dr. Mary Jane England, Commissioner of the Dept. of Social Services and DSS Regional Director, John York, to seek support for increased permanent staffing for protective services for the South Shore and Coastal Area Offices and to discuss Dept. of Social Services budget requests.

Christmas shuttle

The Christmas shopping bus to South Shore Plaza, Braintree, has been scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 4.

The bus will be at 60 Elm St. until 9:15 a.m. and will then go to the Town Hall to pick up other passengers and leave by 9:30 a.m.

For those unable to get transportation to either 60 Elm St. or the Town Hall, the shuttle bus will be available for pick up.

Call the Cohasset Social Service League not later than Wednesday noon, Dec. 3 for reservations.

Shopping bus will leave Braintree at 1:00 p.m. and return to Town Hall by 1:30 p.m. The shuttle bus will be available then also for return to your homes.

SHUTTLE BUS

In an effort to reduce mileage and therefore gasoline consumption, the Shuttle Bus will make one trip to the 3A Shopping Centers at 9:30 a.m. and one trip at 1 p.m daily. Please cooperate in this in making other appointments, i.e. doctors, banking, hair dressers, etc. that are also in this area at these same times.

EMERGENCY INFORMATION NOTICES

The Social Service League has in the past made available to anyone, a card to be filled out with information who to call if you are involved in an emergency situation, plus other pertinent information.

It is suggested that this card be completed and placed in your refrigerator so that an ambulance attendant or others answering an emergency will know where to look and who to call.

These cards are available at the League, 60 Elm St., and at the 60 plus luncheons. If you haven't done so, get a card and fill it out today.

CHS United Way campaign underway

John Rafftery, business manager of the Cohasset schools, and Shirely Tewksbury, teacher at the Joseph Osgood School, are Co-Chairperons for this year's United Way School Campaign in Cohasset.

They will manage fund-raising efforts among teachers, administrators, and staff of the town's schools.

This year's drive, which benefits 167 human care agencies in 86 cities and towns, is endorsed by the Massachusetts Teachers Association.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for Youth Street Hockey this Saturday at the Town Hall from 8 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Late registrations will be accepted on a space available basis only.

The program is open to girls and boys age 6 (by December 1, 1980) to age 12 (no older than age 12 by Dec. 1, 1980). The fee is $5 per person and a 50 per cent discount will be offered to second and subsequent children from the same family. The program will be held Saturday mornings, beginning in December. There will be an additional small fee of $2.50 or so, at a later date, for team T-shirts.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26

MONTHLY KEEP-WELL CLINIC from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at Harborview. Sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2

DEER HILL COMMUNICATIONS COUNCIL MEETING in the school library at 9:30 a.m. Richard Jagoutz, physical education teacher at Deer Hill, will be guest speaker.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct a seminar at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Hall auditorium on modern diet and nutrition. Mark Mincolla will discuss updated looks at foods we purchase and eat every day, specific nutritional contents of foods and their possible harmful effects, and take a consumers' look at how to stretch your purchasing power in the supermarket.

If enough interest is generated in the seminar, a 6-8 week course will be conducted on the subject.

OSGOOD SCHOOL COMMUNICATIONS COUNCIL MEETING WITH JOHN O'BRIEN, psychologist and director of family and children's services at South Shore Counseling, who will discuss holiday stress and how it affects the family and children and will answer questions. Kids art at Paul Pratt

A display of children's art has been hung in the Children's Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Record covers and poetry are inspirations for some of the art done in various media.

Pen and ink drawings of animals were contributed by Tom Lucas' Cohasset High School students. Water color scenes of Cohasset were selected from Jane O'Malley's Deer Hill art classes.

The show was arranged by Carolyn Horn, exhibits chairman for the Friends of the Library.

Capital Budget recommended defeat of the article, saying it felt a centrally located garage facility would be beneficial to the Town.

William Kelley, chairman of Capital Budget, said he had received word from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering that a highway garage could be built at the town-owned Gravel Pit property if the structure were not within 250 feet of wells in the area.

Joseph Barresi, chairman of the Committee for Garaging Town Vehicles, said the purchase of Cohasset Motors would allow the consolidation of various departments, but he added "This is not an endorsement of the article."

After Capital Budget recommended an alternative site for a Highway Department garage, Selectman Clark said he felt Capital Budget was over-reaching its jurisdiction.

Eric Pearson, coming to the defense of Capital Budget, said he would match the abilities of the individuals serving on Capital Budget against anyone serving as Selectman.

In answer to a question, Town Accountant William Signorelli said the entire project cost (including bonding and interest) of the 3A purchase would cost the Town a total of $835,000.

Charles Zimmerman, noting that it was the fourth meeting he had spoken against the purchase of any fire station, stressed that fire prevention was the solution to fire protection in the Town.

"Until fire safety is implemented, we still need a fire truck," Lot Bates, Chairman of the Fire Station Study Committee, said. "I feel fire prevention will take some selling."

Developer Glen Pratt spoke in favor of the 3A purchase. Charles deSantos said it would not be an efficient use of money. "It would be ill advised with or without Prop. 2½."

Cryptogram contest ends Christmas contest starts

Last week's answer: A straw vote only shows which way the hot air blows. — O. Henry. Janet Figueiredo and Andy Trask both answered correctly, but Andy Trask time-dated his entry 11/12 at 7:30 p.m. Which means he ran down to Curtis Compact, probably, grabbed a newspaper, and began figuring.

Your prize will be in the mail this week, Andy!

The cryptogram contests will recess as of this week until January 1981 in order that the Mariner may gather its wits and prize-money together in order to prepare for its Christmas poetry contest.

Details will be announced in next week's Mariner, but there's nothing to stop anyone from K-however old from beginning to write Christmas poetry now!

Basically, poetry should be no more than 16 lines. And it can be humorous, serious, reflective...and doesn't have to rhyme...Some prizes will be cash, others will be merchandise. That will depend upon who wins.

For instance, we would not award any Star Wars figures to senior citizen winners, nor would we award a lovely bouquet of flowers to a Grade 1 boy.

We guarantee you that all winners will be Cohasset winners! And the critical judges (Bartow and Kasperowicz, with perhaps one other citizen representative) will base their awards on quality of poems submitted.

If the judges happen to like five poems submitted by five Third Graders, those five poems will receive first prizes, etc.

If the 6th Grade submits 400 poems (only one poem per person) but all those poems are rotten, no 6th Graders will win.

Perhaps Senior Citizens will capture all the prizes. Who knows?

Winning poets will have their submissions published in the Mariner Christmas edition.

Get writing — but hold your poem until we tell you when and how to submit it and on what size paper.

Cohasset/Scituate water tie complete

A tie-in for water between Cohasset and Scituate has been completed at Country Way and South Main Street.

Negotiations between the two water departments were completed recently. Cohasset's pipe levels are at a higher elevation than Scituate's which could cause the water to back up but calculations have been made to control the water flow and prevent that.

Cohasset had plenty of water during the recent drought and offered to aid Scituate should the need arise. Cost for selling water to Scituate hasn't been determined yet; Cohasset Water Commissioners would have to determine that and Selectmen would have to approve it.

Scituate provided Cohasset water four years ago when its standpipe was being painted.

"When Place disallowed the taping, we were unable to offer our listeners familiar voices."

He added he felt Place should have asked TM its feeling regarding the taping issue.

"We, as media, are continually threatened. You saw Globe Writer Mike Barnicle in court, recently. He was held legally accountable in court for not offering the name of a source. The press has less and less rights, which is unfortunate, because most of us do a darn good job."

A new voice of experience

By Lois Martin

He came home on business. The same youth (22) whom we abandoned at Logan Airport In June to find his way out west, returned resplendent. In four months he has apparently not only gained a place in California, he may be in charge of it.

Amazing, isn't it? Last spring he bore the uncertainty of someone who couldn't settle on a toothbrush brand. He was anxious about dealing with life's frustrations, like insurance, car repair, income taxes. But he has survived it all. Without his Mother.

Perhaps somewhere over Missouri the uncertainty evaporated. Because in place of the apprehensive young man sent to apply his best in the west, we got back, for a visit of course, a person who reads "Money" magazine. I'm still into Family Circle, Ladies Home Journal. And I felt avant garde when I got a subscription to Boston magazine.

PATCHES

His father and I, we picked up his discarded reading material, advancing ourselves with his "Esquire" and trying to understand the money market. Strange, when we were his age we had no need to understand it because we didn't have it to market. Friends have a new-in-the-work-world daughter who buys Fortune. They got themselves a subscription. We learn where we can, and usually from our children.

He brought home brochures of his homeland. He loves his job, his tours, his apartment. It has a fireplace, he said, and he co-rents furniture with a roommate, and he charcoals a lot for company.

Wasn't there a gap there, a period of dependency out of which I've been gypped? No queries came for advice on what stew beef is the best buy, no tips needed on bath towels, no wondering if Mother might help with picking out ties.

The son of a gun has made it all by himself. He never had it so good, he notes. And that really tees me off.

Wouldn't you think a youngster could have the grace to founder, to quake, to be unsettled, or feign it until I can get out there to visit him?

But I'm told by a wiser parent that's what we raised him toward, self sufficiency, out of the nest with one's own wings flapping. And that's true. Thank goodness. His independence is also mine.

He made hotel arrangements for his stay "Intown," during which he'd be at a seminar thing at MIT. He asked us out to lunch immediately. We were impressed till we paid. But the truth is we'll meet him anytime anywhere.

He handed out Halloween candy on behalf of the family during his visit. He lectured a college brother about getting good grades and applied the same voice of experience to another one in high school.

In the making was a new transition, learning how to have an offspring home as a guest, not as someone who needs to be reminded to tuck in his shirt, though that wouldn't hurt. But we're getting the hang of it. Someone whom I admire passed along a definition of happiness as being a consciousness of the growth process. In that light, we are indeed happy for the glow of California sunshine which lights his life at the moment. Eat your heart out in the White House, Ronnie Reagan. California doesn't need you any more. They've got my Son/sun. And he'll be fine, at least until I get there after Christmas.

By Joan Pinkham

The year is drawing to a close, bringing with it our traditional day of Thanksgiving, a time for family reunions and feasting. The original feast lasted three days, (more than most of us could take) and sharing it was Massasoit and 90 of his Indian tribe, all of whom dined on venison, wild geese, ducks and wild turkey. Lobsters, eels, clams, oysters and fish from the nearby harbor were roasted over coals, or simmered in soup. Dried wild fruits such as gooseberries, strawberries, plums and cherries were served with the meat and cranberries were dried or made into a tart sauce flavored with a bit of honey. This year's cranberries at the Garretson bog in Marshfield are harvested and here is one way Ellen uses her share of the berries.

CRANAPPLE SPICE BARS

1 c. flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 c. margarine, melted
1/2 c. firmly packed light brown sugar
1/2 c. granulated sugar
1 egg
1 tsp. vanilla
1/4 c. sour cream
1/2 c. each of coarsely chopped cranberries, apples and nuts

Topping: 1 T granulated sugar, mixed with 1/2 tsp. cinnamon.

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon onto piece of waxed paper. Beat margarine, sugars and egg in medium sized bowl until well mixed. Add vanilla and sour cream. Stir in sifted dry ingredients, fruit and nuts. Bake in 350 oven for approximately 30 min. in an 8x8x2" pan. Sprinkle with topping.

If that old jingle "Over the river and through the woods to grandmother's house we go," isn't for you this year, there are still football games to be cheered, beaches to explore in search of an appetite and, if you are a venturesome 20th century Pilgrim, what better place to be than nearby Plimoth Plantation. It's a holiday tradition for many New England families, as are favorite dishes such as these

ONIONS IN SHERRIED CREAM SAUCE

2 cans [1 lb. each] onions
1/3 c. sherry
1 c. cream
1/2 tsp. salt

1/8 tsp. pepper
3 T butter
1/3 c. grated Cheddar cheese

Drain onions and arrange in shallow baking dish. Combine sherry, cream, salt and pepper. Pour over onions and dot with butter. Sprinkle with cheese. Cover. Bake in 350 degree oven 20 min. Serves six to eight.

We'd hardly recognize the pies that Pilgrim women baked in their beehive ovens, for they were usually made of dried fruits wrapped in dough — much like our apple dumplings. Pumpkin wasn't on the menu, although the Indians grew them and so they never knew the delights of Bea Jackson's very special

BAKED STUFFED PUMPKIN

1 small pumpkin, 7" diameter
2 c. peeled, chopped apples
1 c. raisins
1 c. chopped pecans or walnuts
1/3 c. sugar
1 tsp. lemon juice
1/4 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. nutmeg

Wash and dry pumpkin. Slice off top for a lid. Scrape out seeds. Fill pumpkin with apples, raisins, nuts, etc., mixed well. Return lid to pumpkin and place on cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees. (Bea says "I pop mine in about two hours before turkey is done.") Bake until apples are tender. Begin checking "done-ness" after 40 min. Serve from shell, spooning some pumpkin with each portion. Top with soured cream if desired.

Legalities settled...

South Shore Hellenic group buys Pope Church

After seven months of legal tie-ups, Dedham Judge Edmund Keville, probate court, ruled last week that the South Shore Hellenic Association can purchase the Pope Memorial Church on North Jerusalem Road...and Wednesday morning the Hellenic Association did just that.

Papers were scheduled to be signed at the Cohasset Savings Bank Wednesday, after which a ribbon-cutting ceremony took place at the Church site.

"We're glad to be in the community," Ernest Sofis, treasurer of the Hellenic Association, said in a phone interview Sunday, further noting that late last week the Association had signed a $13,000 contract to repair the outside of the building.

Earlier this month several heirs of the late Albert Pope, founder of the church, had registered objections to conditions of sale to the Hellenic Association, by the Trustees of the Pope Memorial Church.

But late last week, all contests to the sale had been withdrawn, with one heir exclaiming: "I think that it's wonderful they will have the church. They have promised to maintain it and give it care and concern."

Early last sumer, Trustees of the Pope Memorial Church found themselves in court over a charge from the Nazarenes, former tenants of the church, alleging that Albert Pope had decreed that the church should be used by nonsectarian worshipers only.

However, the court dismissed the charge by the Nazarenes early on.

Sofis said this week that the Hellenic Association will hold its first formal service on Christmas Day, at 10 a.m. to which it will invite all members of the Cohasset Community.

Initially, at least, the Hellenic Association will utilize visiting priests in its worship service; and chairs for all future services are on order, as the Trustees of the Pope Memorial Church sold the pews to the Nazarenes last summer.

Sofis said his group is particularly impressed with the church organ. "Which is very unique." Residents of Cohasset and the area are invited to an organ concert to be held Sunday, December 14 at 3:30 p.m. at the Pope Memorial Church. Thomas Bunting of Marshfield will give the concert. Pope Family heirs have also been invited.

Senior Jim Yeomans makes All-Eastern!

He made Districts. He made State. Then he made All-State.

And this year he was one of 425 singers selected from eleven states and the District of Columbia to participate in the 1981 All-Eastern Festival Chorus.

It is thought that Senior James Yeomans, a bass, is the only Cohasset music student (vocal or instrumental) to have ever been chosen for this honor.

Chorus Director Brian Marks presented Yeomans to the School Committee this week, saying: "He has been consistently involved in the vocal music department in his four years at CHS," adding that only 33 students in the Commonwealth were selected for the All-Eastern Chorus.

Yeomans said: "I'm tremendously honored that I've achieved this," saying he looked forward to participating in the festival, which will be held in the Catskills of New York, March 29 - April 1.

Parker Ave. claims centenarian

Saturday, Nov. 22, Mrs. Margaret (Farrell) Cadose of Parker Avenue turned 100 years old. A grand party had been planned — with sister Dora O'Hara (82) having made the trip from England... baby brother Edward Farrell (73) of Quincy in attendance...and a sister, Theresa Gill (93) from South Boston present.

Cousin Marie Gallagher of Boston, granddaughter Jeanne Bjorkgren of Cohasset, daughter Margaret Djordren of Cohasset and a daughter Dorthea were the party planners. Unfortunately, the party girl had been temporarily put up at South Shore Hospital for some minor ailments and couldn't be present for the celebration. But it is certain she had many, many visitors during her stay.

Mrs. Cadose was born in 1880 in Longford, Ireland. Her father arrived in America before the Civil War...the second of 13 children, she arrived in America in 1900 — along with several sisters.

In 1910 (approximately) Mrs. Cadose married Foster Cadose, a Cohasset boat builder. And up until just a year ago, she baked her own bread weekly and served her own tea.

The Cadoses had four children...Mrs. Cadose survives her husband and two of her children.

Happy Birthday!

Administrators sign 3-year pact

Six School Administrators signed a three-year contact with the School Committee Monday which takes them out of the Teachers' Bargaining Unit as of July 1, 1980.

Administrators involved in the new bargaining unit are: High School Principal Richard Streeter, Assistant High School Principal Gino DiGirolamo, Assistant to the School Supt. Stephen Hart, Elementary School Principals John Creamer and Kenneth Ekberg, and Director of Guidance John Leary.

Retroactive to July 1, 1980, base salary for the Administrators' group will be $20,000, with an additional $2,000 for a Masters, an additional $3,000 for a Masters plus 30 and an additional $4,000 over base for a Doctorate.

Effective July 1, 1981 base salary will be adjusted to $22,250. And in the third year of the contract base salary will be $24,500.

Administrators will be placed in the stipend range at the discretion of the Superintendent and School Committee. Present administrative staff will be place at the top of the stipend range.

Other terms of the contract provide for a no strike clause, a grievance procedure, an accumulation of unused sick leave up to a total of 150 days, for personal illness only, and 25 vacation days a year.

Town Common flag stolen

Last week the question was — who shot J.R.?

The question for this week is who stole the new Town Common Flag, which was a gift from the citizens of the Town to the Town from all of you (who bought Clark Chatterton hats, as a fundraiser for the purchase).

Police Sgt. Richard Barrow said the flag was definitely flying at 2 a.m. Sunday morning, when he made his rounds through the Common area. Because the flag is kept hanging 24 hours a day, it is lighted, and hard to miss when you're coming down North Main Street into Town, Barrow said.

However, at 6 a.m. someone reported it missing from the Common flagpole, bolt cutters and a hacksaw having been used to cut the lock.

Clark Chatterton said Sunday he was very sad to learn of the theft. While Cohasset Historical Society President Connie Parker said she was "shocked. It's unbelievable that anyone would do such a thing."

This Thursday, during halftime of the Cohasset/Duxbury home football game, the Laugelle Family of Cohasset planned to make a donation of both a 50-ft. flagpole and a flag to the Town. Chatterton said the Laugelles had been working on the flagpole all week, having poured the cement for the pole a week ago.

It was hoped that the State, Town and Bicentennial flag can be flown along with the new "Laugelle" flag at ceremonies this week.

Students ask for fund-raising gudies

At its worst, Proposition 2½ could turn students in the Commonwealth into suitcase salesmen. . .selling their wares to the public in order to support various school activities.

The CHS Student Advisory Council met with the School Committee this week inorder to get a better perspective of what it wanted with regard to scheduling and guidelines on activities.

Cemetery space

Robert Davenport, chairman of the Cemetery Study Committee, told Selectmen last week that one of the recommendations of his committee, which recently finished a study of cemetery expansion, is that a permanent cemetery commissison be set up to manage the cemetery.

Unless the Committee receives an allowance for an engineering study, Davenport said there was no way his committee could further determine whether Woodside Cemetery can be expanded by filling or whether the various Town Board approvals required, could be obtained.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested that Selectmen go directly to the Conservation Commission and Zoning Board of Appeals and ask for their opinion on the filling of Woodside.

However, Davenport said his committee said both boards said they could not give their answers until they saw specifications.

"Certainly, we would need engineers," Selectman Ainslie said.

Town Hall openings

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested last week that with the advent of Prop. 2½ it might be incumbent upon Selectmen to open Town Hall only one or two nights a week.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said groups renting the Town Hall auditorium would have to be considered in the matter.

In a related matter, Laugelle said he would hope that laying people off in Town government would be the last thing Town officials would consider in making cuts. "I feel we should look into other areas, there just isn't that much work around."

Ainslie said the county was going through the same symnastics regarding personnel cuts. "And we're (the Town) is a self insurer. We've got to pay $6,000 or $7,000 for each person we lay off."

Famous Clark quote

In response to a statement by Eric Pearson regarding the State Fire Marshal's willingness to get involved in the closing of the Beechwood Fire Station, Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said:

"I've heard those politicians talk before — they don't amount to much."

"Well, you should know," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

Are you guilty?

Registrar Richard McLaughlin announced recently the Registry's crackdown on phony out-of-state registrations. The Registry has, in the past 21 months, brought in some 65,000 conversions, with an excise tax value to the 351 cities and towns of more than $10 million.

New England state conversions are quickly approaching the 15,000 level, McLaughlin said.

"As we are well into the second year of Operation Unregistered, it becomes even more apparent a large number of residents were evading the responsibility of paying their way, even though their neighbors were doing so," McLaughlin said.

McLaughlin urged local tax collectors to take a more active role in tracking down tax dodgers in their communities, since the on-going drive depends on local information and cooperation.

Bill Filed

The State Ethics Commission announced recently it will file legislation to establish disclosure requirements for officials and employees in cities, towns and special districts of the Commonwealth.

If enacted, the legislation would require key elected and appointed officials in municipal government to make public the following information:

Associations with businesses and non-profit organizations; gifts, honoraria and reimbursements received from those who do business with the Town; interests in real estate; and debts owed to or forgiven by those doing business with the Town. Officials would not be required to disclose personal financial information such as income and securities held.

Sawchuck on first

The Board of Appeals was slated to meet Tuesday (Nov. 25) to discuss Developer Wayne Sawchuk's request for special permits to build multi-unit housing in a flood plain zone, on Pleasant Street.

The Planning Board was also slated to meet Tuesday to take a final vote on the Sawchuk development, having last week given conditional approval for the eight unit condominium project.

Heap

The Quincy Community Action Energy Program announces that they will not be servicing state assisted public housing residents of Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Milton and Weymouth this year. These housing developments include units under Chapter 200 and Chapter 705. Local housing authorities will be authorized to administer the 1980-81 Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP) for public housing residents. Eligible persons are advised to contact their local housing authority for more information.

Filene's exhibit!

Many Townspeople probably haven't seen the exciting Gown Museum right here in Cohasset on S. Main St. If you want a preview of what's inside, check out Filene's in Boston during Christmas shopping this year.

Historical Society President Connie Parker hadn't seen the exhibit, located on the corner window of Washington Street, as of last week. But she said "They took a million gowns!" Martha Fisher, a Hull resident, is in charge of the Filene's display.

60 Plus Christmas events

The Cohasset 60 Plus Club is planning a bus trip to La Salette, in North Attleboro, to view Christmas lights Tuesday, Dec. 9. The bus will leave from the Town Hall promptly at 4 p.m.

A stop will be made at Valle's for dinner. Call Mrs. Moree for reservations.

The Club's Christmas party will be held at Hugo's, Thursday, Dec. 11 at 12 noon. Entertainment will be by Donna Fay and her orchestra.

Selectmen to investigate Beechwood plan

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark told members of the Beechwood Coalition last week he would be in touch with Health Inspector Kevin O'Brien and Acting Fire Chief Tom Hernon, shortly, to discuss the possibility of instituting volunteer emergency medical protection measures in the area.

Early this fall, the area was left without fire or medical protection as a result of the Fire Chief's closing of the station — and a manpower shortage.

At the Nov. Special TM voters opted in favor of a $3,000 study which could conceivably lead to the building of a one or a two-bay station in the area, but if Prop. 2½ has the financial clout predicted, the station even if built might not be able to be manned by the Cohasset Fire Department.

Members of the Beechwood Coalition brought up the subject at last week's meeting. "What can you do to help us right now?" Eric Pearson asked.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested the possibility of manning the station at night, from 6 p.m. to 8 a.m. Robert Mackie said the large use of wood and coal stoves in the area worried him, with regard to having no fire protection.

Selectman Arthur Clark noted that in many other towns it takes an ambulance 25 minutes to get to an area.

While Roy Fitzsimmons said he would like Selectmen to look into the possibility of utilizing women nurses and call firemen in Beechwood as backup protection.

In related action, Selectmen appointed Selectman Henry Ainslie along with Beechwood residents Roy Fitzsimmons and Robert Mackie to work on study plans for a new Beechwood fire station.

Selectmen said they were still doubtful that the cost of a new structure could be as low as formerly estimated by the Beechwood Coalition, saying municipal contracts require handicapped toilets, sub bidders, etc.

In addition, Selectmen said they felt there would be a problem with the septic system and leeching field in the area.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle questioned whether there couldn't be waivers in various instances.

Ainslie said he estimated that the building alone would cost $100,000, as opposed to the $65,000 maximum cost estimated by the Beechwood Coalition.

Guides asked

the Committee that while the Council keeps a good check on activities, many other fundraising activities slip by them.

The Committee urged CHS Principal Richard Streeter and School Supt. Eugene Crowell to help the Council with scheduling activities, in order that the schedules don't stack up.

Supt. Crowell advised the Committee that when Prop. 2½ hit California, a county fund-raising group was established to raise money for school activities such as sports, music and extra-curricular activities.

"Perhaps we will have to think in terms of the same kind of group," Crowell said. "These youngsters are in competition with some large fundraising groups."

Other members of the Student Council group present at Monday's meeting were Senior Katie Smalzel, Junior Holly Grant, Sophomore Paul Johnson and Jerry White. Council President, Council member Scott O'Toole was absent from the session.

WHAT IS AN ALLERGY?
Allergy is a sensitivity to a specific substance (known as an allergen) which in similar amounts is harmless to most people. Once a person becomes sensitive, there may be an unfavorable reaction on reexposure.
Any body organ may be involved in allergic reactions. The breathing system is often affected, resulting in swelling of the nasal membranes, called hay fever, and spasms in the bronchial tubes, called asthma. Various rashes including hives and eczema appear on the skin of some people.

Editorial

Cohasset on the air

We received several phone calls in response to our editorial (notes and comments) last week in which we suggested that in the future WATD ask the Town Moderator for permission to tape Town Meetings.

The present law, the Open Meeting law and Town Meeting Time, a handbook of parliamentary law which our Cohasset Town Meeting follows, both require that permission be granted before taping can commence.

We didn't go into great detail in our discussion of the issue last week. Rightfully, the broadcasting media best knows the laws under which it can legally operate.

Nevertheless, a further explanation appears to be necessary.

We knew two things when we wrote the editorial in question. From all indications, it appeared WATD erred in having not notified Moderator David Place of its intent to broadcast. Secondly, because WATD had not asked for permission to broadcast in the past does not necessarily mean that it had achieved commonlaw rights in the matter.

The next time — ask, we urged WATD, saying it could be a simple solution to a testy problem.

But certainly, it would be foolish for any of us to not worry about the rights of either the printed or broadcasting media — because in essence they tell us most of what we know and what we'd rather not know.

Certainly, Moderator Place will have to seriously ponder the question of whether a radio, sitting in the front row of the hall, interferes with our ability to debate, consider or vote any particular issue at hand.

We feel WATD has done a respectable job in the Town. It has been thorough, fair and reasonable in its reporting of and recording of the issues of the land.

Perhaps Moderator Place, after reflecting on the matter, will feel likewise...particularly when he becomes enlightened of the fact that in many towns high school radio stations, completely manned by students, broadcast Town Meetings and Selectmen's meetings!

However, if WATD feels it should have complete freedom to broadcast any public meetings, then it may have to try the matter in the courts.

And perhaps it's about time someone did.

Owner of pin found

Good news. Scituate police believe they've located the owner of the 18kt gold pin pictured last week in the Mariner. An unidentified woman called the station to say it looked like one stolen from her late mother almost five years ago. She's in the process of checking with relatives to make certain.

Inverted 'Cohasset'-style glory

Commentary

What's this? — another column on football? What possibly could be left to say! Hasn't football been analyzed and discussed ad nauseum by both serious and not-so-serious sports writers ever since St. Francis kicked the head of the last Roman Consul over Hadrians Wall and started the game in AD 374?

Not so, there's plenty left to say. After all, it's Thanksgiving and anyone who has already proved himself an expert on the energy crisis, sewer politics and bridge jumping should be able to come up with an original gridiron thought or two. For example, ponder the following:

While rummaging through old yearbooks and newspaper articles looking for a story idea on Cohasset football, I discovered, much to my surprise, that over the years Cohasset has in fact lost most of its games. This of course applies only to the modern era, 1952 through 1979.

Now I have attended CHS home games regularly since 1964 but I had never really paid much attention to the score. I go primarily to purchase Gridiron Club raffle tickets, listen to the band, and partake of the comaraderie and fellowship that exists at the games, especially in the upper stands where the fathers of the players congregate.

In analyzing the yearbook statistics more closely, there began to emerge an apparent correlation between games lost and the success of the players after graduation. That is, the more games lost in one's senior year the more successful the future life participant. After all, figures don't lie, suffering pays off!

For example, in the years 1973 through 1979, Cohasset had three head coaches, several assorted principals and superintendents and a won-lost record of 14 and 43. All of which resulted in sending ten senior players to further gridiron glory at Middlebury, Colby, Bowdoin, BU, URI, U. Maine, and Mass. Maritime. All are honors students.

That's a record to be proud of. Just think what might have resulted if they lost all their games. They all would have gotten into Harvard easily!

If my theory appears to be far out, consider the Boston area Class I schools that are always football powerhouses; Framingham, Woburn and Weymouth North win practically all of their games all of the time. Can anyone think of anyone famous from those schools? Of course not! Obscurity is their lot and deservedly so.

From 1962 through 1972 the record was a mediocre 36 and 38, not really a good solid losing record but close enough to produce a U. Maine, a U. Mass, a couple of BC's and one Notre Dame. Long hair, rock music, and mini-skirts were probably the cause of the demise.

The real clincher came when I looked at the late fifties won-lost record. Prior to 1957, the team had had six consecutive years of an enthusiastic, hard working coach whose knowledge of the game was unsurpassed.

Coincidently, as 1956 passed into history, there emerged at the High School a group of potential triple threats whose raw talent was maturing into a cohesive, high spirited football team. The team of 1957 was ordained to lay flat the rest of the South Shore League.

There was just no way to stop the disaster that occurred. The team was too strong. From 1957 to 1961, Cohasset High School won 26 and lost 8, a record the town has been trying to live down for years.

I tried to find people around town who could think of anyone who played football during that time who had become successful. Not one came to mind, a lost generation.

This Thursday, when Cohasset meets Duxbury in what is affectionately referred to as the Turkey Bowl, I hope everyone present will keep in mind the single, overwhelming lesson of our football past: May the Best Team Lose!

(ED.'S NOTE: The former is a reprint of Columnist Chet Ellis' article which ran in last year's Thanksgiving Day issue of the Mariner. You may have tried to read it then, but you couldn't, because a copy pixie mixed up all the paragraphs. So, we thought we'd try it again this year.)

Letters

Casino gambling in Hull? No dice!

To the Editor:

The recent spate of letters, authored by Hull's leading gambling advocate, which have appeared in local newspapers — strains the credulity of anyone knowledgeable about the recent history of the American gaming industry.

Pro-gambling forces in our local area have taken their cues from national gaming interests as they begin to orchestrate a political public relations effort to legalize casino gambling in the Commonwealth.

Casino spokesmen have couched their arguments in the cynical language of rich vs. poor. All voices raised against casino legalization are branded as elitist, belonging to those who somehow won't give Hull an even break.

This is the same cynical public relations game played by gambling interests as they financed the multi-million dollar campaign to legalize gambling in Atlantic City in the 1970s.

Casino gambling, functioning under rigorous controls, was held out to the people of Atlantic City as an economic miracle which would create jobs, decrease property taxes, and fund assistance programs for the elderly.

Today, the people of Atlantic City continue to watch and wait for the miracle to happen.

Unemployment in the city is now higher than in 1978 when gambling began. The elderly and poor who were promised casino financed state assistance are now unable to survive as casino generated inflation ravages the local economy.

Middle class home owners who were promised property tax relief have seen taxes raised as land values rise in boom-bust land speculation and as the City struggles to fund new municiple services.

The idea that casino gambling in Hull is a "local" issue which, outside of increased traffic problems, is of no concern to other governmental agencies is the height of naivete.

Gambling corporations would like nothing better than to have "...All licensing of the casino...be through local officials..." as has been proposed in recent articles.

Local officials? The combined resources of the U.S. Department of Justice, state gaming control commissions, state police forces, and local police have not been able to keep organized crime out of gambling in Nevada or New Jersey.

Can we really expect part time municipal officials in Hull to succeed where sophisticated investigative agencies have failed?

Town officials and citizens in Cohasset and Hingham certainly have the right to voice their opposition to casinos in Hull. It is not an exageration to say that the prevention of legalized casino gambling in Hull is the single most important issue on the public agenda of our towns.

We must demand the full force of State and Federal agencies be brought to bear on this problem.

Corporate gambling interests already have a foothold in this area. Even if the recent tragedy at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas strains MGM's capital supply, preventing it from the rapid development of the Hall Estate, other gambling consortiums will continue to eye Hull.

Another tract of land in Hull is at present being evaluated by a gambling corporation headquartered in Las Vegas which draws on a larger capital supply than that of MGM and its (Tracinda Inc.) holding corporation.

If casino gambling is legalized in Massachusetts, it will come first to Hull.

Hull is the only town in the state to have approved casinos via local option.

Hull is the only town in the state in which gaming interests have actually secured property.

Hull is where some of the largest gaming corporations in the world have chosen to place their bets. They don't like to lose.

Casino literature is biased

To the Editor:

Robert Burns writes from Hull to defend the position of the Town Planning Board with regard to a proposed gambling casino and offers to "educate you on the matter." I suggest his education smacks more of biased propaganda than true education.

Since my position, strongly opposed to a casino, could equally well be characterized as propaganda, I would suggest that education might come from a third, less local source, the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs. They have produced an 80-page document outlining the impact of casino gambling on Atlantic City and, equally pertinent, its outlying areas to a distance of 40 miles. The report, "Review of the Probable Impact of Atlantic City Casino Development," is produced by a division of the state government which has been very favorable towards casino development. As a result of their own study, that position will probably change.

To quote just a couple items from the report indicates how important this issue is for not just Hull but Hingham, Cohasset and the surrounding areas. Instead of reducing unemployment, Atlantic City unemployment has risen from 8.4 per cent to over 10 per cent. With only two casinos open, they expect

Casino gambling in Hull . . . let it roll

To the Editor:

I am in favor of legalized gambling. The question of legality here, in my opinion, is moot. Things exist regardless of the concept of a system of law and order. History records the existence of pornography, for example, throughout the ages though "Banned in Boston" is a phrase fading from common usage.

Therefore, the question within the practical realm that the decisive man must ponder is the structure of the regulatory powers as they relate to federal, state, county and town jurisdiction and to the implied concept that the individual citizen should be led to a series of decisions not based upon artificial controls. Life involves risk, and gambling involves the taking of chances. Rather than inhibition, let us seek creative direction. The lottery is as good an example as any to substantiate my point that the projected fears surrounding the issue of legalized gambling can be exorcised by a perceptive analysis of the Massachusetts state lottery system. The state has not degenerated into a decadent Berlin in the thirtie's style den of iniquity as a result of "legalized gambling," as many "doom prophets" had preached.

Instead, I suppose a sort of residual puritanism has prevailed and the record shows our state to be an example of good government in regards to the lottery if nothing else. Pointed remarks aside, I question, then, Confucius when he speaks, "The ☐Mrs. John Larkin Thompson, Mrs. Byron Tosi, Mrs. William Cox, Mrs. Donald Evans and Mrs. Robert Jordan have been selected by the Metropolitan Center to serve on the "Premiere" committee which is planning a two-day celebration to re-open the theatre.

Over one hundred Boston area residents are working on the inaugural gala and fund-raising benefit. The celebration begins on December 4 with a fashion show and luncheon in the Grand Lobby of the theater. Fashions will be shown by Coty Award winner, Michaele Vollbracht, courtesy of Saks Fifth Avenue.

☐Seventeen stunning photographs representing the winners of the 1980 Boston Globe Color Photography Contest will be on display in the John Hancock Observatory, Copley Square, Boston, from Dec. 9 to Jan. 4 from 9 to 11 p.m.

Amy Patric Cain of Cohasset is an award winner whose work will be on display.

The winning photographs, chosen from entries of some 3500 New England photographers, depict subjects ranging from smiling Cambodian refugee children and a rainbow over Boton to a dramatic shot of the inside of a hot-air balloon.

☐Congratulations to Marie and Richard Caristi who have a new son, Mark Alan, born on November 9 weighing 7 pounds 13 ounces. Marie and Alan are home and doing fine! They are also the parents of twins, Julie Ann and Kenneth Michael, age 9. Francis and Marie Flaherty of Boston and Charles Caristi of Scituate are grandparents.

☐Diana and John Kornet are brand new parents of a daughter, Abigail Davis, who arrived at 6:13 a.m. at South Shore Hospital on November 23. Abigail weighs 8 pounds 7 ounces and has "Lots of dark hair and tiny ears that are flat against her head," according to her sister Diana, 9. Diana, John, 12, and Allison, 8, had their first look at their new sister on Sunday morning.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. David Davis of Harwichport and Mr. and Mrs. John Kornet of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kornet, also of Bethlehem, are great grandparents.

(Diana plans to continue in her position on the School Committee. She'll just try to schedule the baby around Monday night meetings.)

☐Other November birthdays were celebrated by Nancy Clapp (November 23), MaryLou Slotnik (November 13) and Brenda Tehranian adds a year on Thanksgiving Day. Brenda was treated to a very relaxing lunch at Hugo's by the "Birthday Match" group, organized, reorganized and well executed by president, Joan Bravo.

We heard that Dick Brown, whose birthday actually took place in September, recently received a mermaid in honor of that occasion.

None of these Powder Puff Cheerleaders will ever make the Harvard squad.

☐Rumors of a fifth newspaper in Cohasset had us a bit concerned until we found that it was a publication from the Deer Hill School. We welcome, and hereby encourage, the efforts of the sixth grade members of the enrichment class with the first edition of the Deer Hill Chronicle.

Dona Tehranian, Lisa Low, Nicole Gamst and Scott Fitzsimmons are listed as editors under the direction of enrichment teacher, Melissa Haught. "Stories, cartoons-ideas, etc." are solicited by the staff from student and staff members of the school for future issues (to be published once a month).

The Chronicle presents an interesting survey on what we presume is an important topic among students, food in the cafeteria! They polled five students from each classroom on how well they like the cafeteria's food and the scores show that school cuisine is not the students' favorite: 28 thought lunches were fair; 32 felt they were bad; and only one 4th grader answered that they were good!

Another article on food may shed some light on why kids at Deer Hill find the cafeteria food so lacking. "Boston's Cuisine" is knowledgeably reviewed by one writer who says the price of dinners in Boston restaurants is justified by the quality. Can kids who dine at Anthony's Pier 4, the No Name and the Hilltop Steak House be happy with hamburgers and macaroni and cheese from the CHS kitchen?

The writing in the Chronicle is good, although we wish writers had been identified with their stories (even if there were several who worked on a piece). We wish them success and look forward in future issues to reading more articles about themselves, fellow students and teachers and more stories about the Deer Hill School. (You'll be meeting the staff here in the Mariner in two weeks.)

☐As we've said here before, your news is earnestly solicited, just as long as it's not gossip! Sometimes we hear from the same people and it may appear that we're partial to them and their news. Not so. Some people are awfully good to us by phoning or writing whenever they've got news.

There is so much happening throughout town, especially in the schools! TEACHERS — be news hounds! Call whenever something is about to happen or after it's taken place. We'll make every effort to come to school and talk with you and your students. If we know enough in advance, we'll try to get our photographer to come. We'd love to print more art work and we can reduce pictures down in size.

Please don't cluck when you read someone else's news in the paper when you can give us a call and have yours in too!

☐Three Cohasset women are among the freshman class at Lasell Junior College in Newton. Kristin Cahill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cahill, Jr., will major in the Open Studies Program; Elizabeth Crowley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Crowley, in the Medical Assistant Program; and Lori Jean Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wright, Jr., in Art.

Around town

□Tom Wigmore was treated to a surprise birthday party on November 15 in honor of his 17th birthday. Clark and SallyAnn Chatterton and Izzie Salvador planned the fun at Tom's home with 50 friends of all ages. Mary Brennock baked him a football helmet cake with "Patriots" written on it. Tom is an indispensable right-hand assistant to Clark Chatterton at the high school and plays in the school band.

Caleb Lothrop has come home. . .

It was a nice gesture...one of those things that when it happens around Thanksgiving, everybody warms to.

Last week Historical Society president Connie Parker received a painting of Caleb Lothrop, who it is suspected was the last Lothrop to live on the Summer Street Lothrop House currently being renovated by the Cohasset Historical Society.

The painting arrived in Town courtesy of Carey Lothrop, the second wife of Caleb.

The son of John Quincy Adams Lothrop, and a descent of the Rev. John Lothrop who came from London England to Scituate in 1624, Caleb Lothrop was an insurance agent in Town, treasurer of the Cohasset Savings Bank, and a former member of the Cohasset School Committee.

The Society plans to exhibit the picture at it's Lothrop House Christmas party Sunday, Dec. 7 from 5-7 p.m. Tickets can be obtained through any Society member at the cost of $5 per person.

S.S. Art Center schedule changes

Several changes in class scheduling for the mid-winter term have been announced by the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

Figure painting will be included in the class on Portrait Painting to be taught by Clement Micarelli on Tuesday evenings. Students will be instructed in rendering form, light and shadow, preferably in oils.

Painting with David Tandy, taught on Thursday evenings as a course credited through Mass. College of Art Continuing Education, will take new enrollments for eight weeks. Students will work both with still life and the clothed model, emphasis will be on technique and color. The class is geared to beginners.

Watercolor with Mary Ann Patrick will not begin until January 7, although previously scheduled for December.

All mid-winter classes will have eight sessions and will meet the first three weeks of Dec. and begin again after New Years for five weeks. Enrollment must be made in advance. For information call 383-9548 between 12 and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Community Center exercise program

The Cohasset Community Center is pleased to announce that Joanne Sheppard's exercise program "Exercise for Fitness and Fun has been a great success. Joanne is currently studying under Channel 2's instructor "Maggie the Beautiful Machine," and teaches self designed fitness at M.I.T. in Cambridge.

New classes are beginning now and anyone is welcome to join. The class is daily from 9 to 10 a.m. You may choose from a two or three day program with all five days available for your convenience.

There is an aerobic workout to increase the cardiovascular system and a complete exercise program given aimed at trimming and slimming. Call the Center daily from 9 a.m. to noon for information 383-0088.

Obituary

Luella Bailey

Mrs. Luella (Rogers) Bailey, 84, of Cohasset, a former school teacher in Cohasset schools, died Nov. 18 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

She was born in Westville, N.Y. and had lived in Cohasset since 1919.

She was a member of the Cohasset Senior Citizens, Cohasset Women's Club, and was a communicant of St. Anthony's Church.

Wife of the late Louis C. Bailey, Sr., she leaves a son, Louis C. Bailey, Jr. and a daughter, Mrs. Robert J. (Alice B.) Hall, both of Cohasset; 13 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 10 a.m. Friday in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Attention Richard Bunstein

Cohasset is a respected name in football

By Rob Tis

Do you remember the last time the Skipper football team ended up with a winning record? Don't feel bad, not many people do.

In 1977 the Skippers had a .500 season, 5 wins, 5 losses. That team fielded such grid stars as Tom Ballerino, Ian McCormick, Scott Fone, Steve Keating, Scott Sandblom, Jim Farren and Thane Norris.

Remember them? They were pretty big guys — all around 250 pounds.

This year the Skippers have one, maybe two players within 30 pounds of that. Their average weight is around 180.

This doesn't matter one iota to Mike Jones, Bob Fessler, Joe Becker, Sandy Ayer, Paul Buckley, Jack McNeil or any other Skippers.

Because this week, if they beat (I should say when they beat) Duxbury, they will end up with a six and four record. This is a truly great accomplishment for a football team from the small town of Cohasset.

What's their secret? As it has been said before, they are a team and this team really wants to win.

What I mean when I say they really want to win is they have a deadly determination. Joe Becker, the leading Skipper rusher, is 160 pounds and 5 feet 9 inches tall.

Week after week he is crunched by 250 pound half man, half walking piece of steel, linebackers.

This doesn't stop Joe.

Kevin Dooley, replaced Tim Libby as quarterback after three games and now the 5' 10" 150-pound junior is throwing the ball like a veteran.

The story goes on.

This is a new decade and this year's team is making sure that Cohasset is a respected name in football. No more 0-10, 1-9 seasons like we knew in the 1970's.

This is a big game for the Skippers. Not only will it mean a winning record but it will clinch third place for them in the South Shore League, as well as tie up the series at four with Duxbury.

Make the journey up to Milliken Field on Thanksgiving morning to cheer on a real team that really wants to win.

Support the Skippers!!!

Before a large crowd at Milliken Field on Sunday the seniors pulled off an amazing upset to beat the juniors 12-0. The two senior touchdowns were scored by Heidi Brown. The offense was engineered by Ellen Digirolamo.

Although the junior class put up a gallant effort, the senior defense held them scoreless. All luck seniors!

Cohasset's 40th Village Fair, December 6th

Two exciting new attractions for children will be introduced this year at Cohasset's 40th Village Fair to be held on and around Cohasset Common Saturday, Dec. 6.

The attractions will be features of the Children's Midway, to be staged as usual in the Community Centre and are designed to appeal to different age groups.

For the older children, seven of the popular modern electronic games will be put in operation, and are expected to draw large crowds to try their hand at beating the flashing lights and beeps. These games have been loaned to the Fair for the day.

For the benefit of younger children there will be two showings of three Walt Disney films totaling about 25 minutes. The showings will be at 10:30 and 11:30 and admission will be 25 cents.

Arrangements for the Children's Midway are being made by Robert Ciciotte and Peter O'Loughlin, Jr. There will be responsible teenagers overseeing the movies so that mothers can leave their small children there with confidence.

As usual a high point of the Fair from the standpoint of youngsters will be the arrival of Santa Claus on the Common. Barring unforeseen delays the jolly, red-clad gentleman is expected to arrive about 11 a.m. to begin taking requests from children, who come to his sleigh in its bower on the Common. Mrs. Donald Steele is once again in charge of arrangements for Santa's visit.

Lending a festive air to the entire Village Fair Scene, both inside the buildings and around the Common, will be balloon vendors working under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bishop.

Competing with the outdoor attractions for children will be the Bargain Bazaar in the vestry of the Second Congregational Church. While their elders pore over the books accumulated by a committee headed by Mrs. Edward Bursk, or try out used appliances and furnishings, the youngsters will be concentrating on used toys, games and a multitude of sports equipment.

Mrs. Gordon Stevenson and Mrs. Paul Desmond have been presiding over the collection of these treasures which again have been assembled from the attics and cellars of the town.

In the Town Hall, mothers and grandmothers will find gifts at the Children's Table, where dolls, toys, novelties and children's clothing will be on sale. These have been crafted and assembled by a group headed by Mrs. Francis Johnston.

Young appetites will be satisfied by at least three popular features of the Fair: the Snack Bar, where Philip Shockman and staff of assistants will be dealing in hot dogs and soft drinks; the popcorn machine operated by Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Hobson; and the Tacos Bar where teenagers of the Congregational Church, under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Nedrow will be serving this Mexican delicacy.

Attracting the interest of young and old alike will be the drawing for prizes in the raffle, headed by a television set and including donated dinners at local restaurants and articles contributed by local merchants.

John Mullet heads the raffle organization and has been assisted in the ticket selling by representatives in the individual churches, including Mrs. James McNeill in St. Anthony's and Mrs. David Terry in the Unitarian. It is planned that the drawing take place shortly before the 3 p.m. closing time.

Let it roll . . .

goverment which governs best is the government which governs least.''

A scientifically oriented regulatory system involving computers can serve only to enhance the mutual legal experience of our population if justice itself is not a gamble, wager or investment.

The MGM Grand Hotel fire in Las Vegas is an example of how lax building codes placed its guests on a sort of spinning roulette wheel merry-go-round if lightning struck, and strike it did! Again, I stress regulatory deftness and equity, not the outlawing of human reflex.

For it is in the spirit of eternity how futile such repressive techniques appear. Therefore, I am in favor of legalized gambling, coupled with a nation-leading system of regulatory laws in respect to building codes, proper transferral of funds, protection of the individual citizen, etc. . . .

See you at the baccarat table! For gambling is defined in many ways. For to gamble, to risk with all of one's heart and soul, be it in the casino or out in the world, is to strive towards those fleeting moments in life worthy of the laurel!

Prepare for emergency

To the Editor:

Fall is a time of preparation. Have you put on the storm windows? Have you got in a supply of firewood? Is your burner checked for efficiency and safety? Good! Now, how about your food supply?

Now is a good time to take stock of your pantry shelves. Do you have an adequate supply of basics such as flour (white as well as unmilled whole wheat), shortening, salt, powdered milk, and honey or sugar? And a supply of canned goods?

How about stored water? And a good supply of foods in the freezer? Not to be over looked are the whole range of freeze-dried and mini-moisture foods.

In these days of uncertainty we need to prepare more than ever before for possible emergencies and shortages. A few extra dollars spent in the area of 'food storage' now could make all the difference to you and your family in the months ahead!

Students want a jab at Prop. 2½

As soon as local and state officials figure out exactly how Prop. 2½ is supposed to work (Dec. 4 is the date Prop. 2½ is supposed to go into effect) — students will be invited to make their recommendations to the School Committee through the Student Council regarding school budget cuts.

The Student Council initiated the above invitation at a School Committee meeting this week, through Council member Holly Grant, a junior.

Until the Town receives officials guidelines on the subject, it will not know whether the School's portion will be $150,000 or $635,000. Up until recently, it was thought the Town would have to use 1980 valuation figures.

If the Town can comply with Prop. 2½ by using 1981 revaluation figures, school budget cuts would be in the range of $150,000, School Committee Chairman Frank England said.

The Advisory Committee and the School Committee have both agreed that the School's share of Prop. 2½ will be 55.3 per cent. But Town Meeting could divide ''The pile'' in any manner it wished, School Supt. Crowell stated.

Biased

3.7 million visitors during 1980 — just imagine Rte. 3A. Water and sewerage facilities are strained to capacity. All other industry is being driven out of the area owing to the dominance of the casino.

Hingham and other towns do have a vital role in the future development of Hull. Do not be swayed by the promises of those who wish to make us ''just a little bit pregnant.''

Busy day, busy year..., busy, busy, busy life

By Tanna Kasperowica

If I have any personal complaints, it is that many of us come too late to appreciate the importance of the substance of the work a woman actually does each day.

All women are managers of one kind of another, and thus manipulate people. And there is no such thing as management apart from the situation it tries to manage.

What does work, Diana O'Loughlin agrees, is being alert to the possibility of directing flow. Or — pay attention!

Do you know what you were doing yesterday at 3:45 p.m.? Diana does. Not only does she know what she was doing yesterday at 3:45 p.m., she knows what she was doing 20 years ago on this date at 3:45 p.m.

She is both witness and star. Her own centrality is explicit and never lost. One might call it the autobiographical method applied to the lives of others and herself.

There are simply no missing pieces in Diana's life.

What kind of mother would stage a fire drill at 2:15 a.m. in the morning, hiding behind a corner to see if Peter (her husband) and Linda (her daughter) had remembered her instructions? Diana would — and did.

Fire warning systems had recently been installed in her home, and she wanted to see if both they and the family worked.

"Peter almost ran me over on the stairs. I caught Linda just before she knocked (as per instruction) everything off her chest of drawers to go out the window."

As for Peter — "Peter and I could have ended up with broken legs — we collided. The were both bull at first, afterwards, they agreed it was a good test."

Diana met Peter on the telephone at 3 a.m. in the morning over New Year's weekend 1962-63. Eight months later the Irish-Italian marriage took place, after it was decided who was the tiger and who was the tamer.

Because Diana moves so quickly through life, she enjoys various extra curricular activities, a part-time job, and finds time to volunteer time to the less advantaged.

An average week to Diana is not like anybody else's average week. If you go past her home at 3 a.m. you might see all the lights on and Diana doing housework, doing some laundry.

She spends one day a week in Newport helping her boss, Perry Harris of Cohasset, furnish a condominium. In the middle of one recent week she dropped everything and went to Ginny and Paul Johnson's family reunion in Las Vegas.

During Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's campaign for re-election, certainly Diana had time to help out. Two hours here, three hours there...back again. Inbetween time doctors and dentists appointments to make.

Diana O'Loughlin

Tired? Diana isn't. Play a little Bingo Monday night at the Sons of Italy in Hingham. "I'm very lucky." At 11 p.m. the "standard" company (Skinny Laugelle) arrives for tea and danish. Skinny's Diana's Bingo partner every Monday night.

Do wash at 1:05 a.m. Read the mail. Get up early the next morning, do some shopping, some bookkeeping for boss Perry Harris, after all, he pays for her time. Off to Newport for a couple of hours.

She loved it when the A&P used to be open all night...it was a perfect time for her. Now she has to rush to Curtis Compact for last-minute shopping. "I love sweets, I burn it all off."

Friday nights it's bridge...Linda dances at Town Hall. Peter's in a men's round robin, and various plays throughout the year.

When the O'Loughlins recently went to Ireland, Skinny (good friend) tried to sell the house before they got back.

"It's like a merry-go-round at our house...you never know who's getting off and who's getting on.

"The phone never stops ringing...sometimes I pick up the phone to make a call and somebody's on it. Luckily, Linda doesn't get that many calls yet, she's just going into her teen years." Yes, very lucky.

And recently, Diana started taking piano lessons, because "I've never had a music lesson in my life."

That's not all...Selectmen take note. She's in favor of gambling in Hull.

☐November birthdays were also marked by Nancy Sladen, Nancy Anderson and Rita Durkin early in the month at their birthday group party — happy belated!

☐A marvelous turnout of 150 people at the Annual Gridiron Club Scholarship Dance pushed the Club's fund raising efforts closer to their annual goal of $2,500 which is given each year in scholarships to graduating students.

The catered dinner dance was held at the Sons of Italy Hall and president Bob Walls said everyone had a good time.

The fifteen member Gridiron Club supports the football team at the high school.

☐John Leone, football and wrestling coach at the high school, and his wife Nancy, have waited a long time for a little one in their family. On Halloween day they got the biggest treat of their lives — a beautiful baby daughter! Amanda Smith, who will be four months old on November 27, arrived at her new home in North Carver on October 31st.

Three days later, Coach Leone introduced her to the football team and he notes with pride, "We haven't lost a game since we've had her!" The team erupted from a practice huddle shouting AMANDA and they have put a new, secret Amanda play in their game.

Mariner readers urge Hull to rethink casino plans - Mariner poll

By Tanna Kasperowicz

First of all it should be pointed out that Cohasset and Hingham residents are going to have precious little and perhaps nothing to say about whether Hull gets its gambling casino.

But gambling is certainly an issue which everyone seems to have an opinion about, its having produced at least as many letters to the editor over the past two weeks as the fire station articles on a recent Special TM warrant.

However, what Cohasset residents are saying and feeling about casino gambling is important, nonetheless, as residents of the state are surely having similar feelings. And all of us, in some manner, influence our State Senator and State Representative in kind.

In the Mariner poll, 24 residents said they were against having a gambling casino on the Hall Estate in Hull (near the West Corner) and 14 said they were in favor of casino gambling.

Interestingly, residents polled in the Post Office area of Town were overwhelmingly against having a gambling casino in the area. However, late in the week, when some of those same residents were repolled — at Hugo's and other dining establishments, they were now in favor of a gambling casino. And so, where and what time of the day or night residents are polled seems to influence their thinking.

Businessmen seemed more interested in a gambling casino in Hull than non businessmen. Those in the 35 and under age group seemed more likely to be in favor of gambling in Hull than those in the 35 and over category. Although to be sure, there were exceptions down the line.

Residents didn't just sharply yes or no, both groups offered advice, suggestions...discussing, sometimes in detail, problems in Hull and its high tax rate — the highest tax rate in the state (for a Town).

None of the residents interviewed appeared to have much experience with gambling.

"I used to go to Foxboro once in awhile...but I'm not a confirmed gambler."

"Yes to horses and dogs, but I don't play the lottery. The lottery has become too complicated. I wouldn't know how to play it."

"I'm lucky in love and win all elections. I buy tickets only for good causes...I won a free hair cut and a turkey once...I won an old Packard touring car years ago...50 cents at a Monte Carlo night...a bag of groceries...$25 silver dollars in Las Vegas...a portable color TV set."

Appeal to DEQE made

In a letter dated Oct. 20, 1980, William St. Hilaire, regional environmental engineer for the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) said in his opinion the Cohasset Conservation Commission exceeded its jurisdiction by ordering Developer Robert Hawker to comply with Title V regulations in regard to a sewage disposal system.

Pope Church ribbon-cutting

Bishop Anthimos of the Boston Diocese conducted ribbon-cutting ceremonies at Pope Memorial Church last Wednesday in honor of The South Shore Hellenic Association's purchase of the church earlier that day.

The Bishop pledged that "This chapel will continue to be used in the service of God." In a lighter moment, the Bishop said he was very happy to see the bankers and the realtors in attendance at

Kay England aids MGM victims

Old Coach Road resident Kay England appears to attract news wherever she goes. Several months ago she served on a sequestered jury that will end up making history in several planned books.

Just two weeks ago Kay was on her way to the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas for a buffet breakfast...and ended up working with the Red Cross for the next two days as a result of a devastating fire which killed over 80 hotel guests.

Kay was visiting her daughter Kathy, who is Deputy City Attorney for Las Vegas, and helping Kathy to close on a condominium, buy a refrigerator. Actually, Kay arrived a week before the November 21 explosion in the MGM Grand Hotel.

"I had just dropped Kathy off at City Hall and was on my way to a buffet breakfast ($1.29) at the MGM when I was hit with sirens, smoke and complete chaos. I never got breakfast that morning," Kay said.

Instead, she returned to City Hall, where she and Kathy volunteered their services to the American Red Cross.

"We had a temporary computer list of the MGM Grand Hotel guests and tried to match names to hotels where people were being removed to. Relatives were calling from all over the country.

"There was an OK list. If the person had gotten

Cohasset's week

Studds here Sunday

Congressman Gerry Studds will be at Town Hall Sunday, Dec. 7 from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Firemen's benefit

The Cohasset Firemen's Benefit Association will raffle off $500 worth of gift certificates at a raffle to be held January 31, 1981. All members of the Cohasset Fire Department are selling tickets for the raffle.

Firemen will also be selling tickets at Stop & Shop.

This is the firemen's major fund-raising activity of the year.

Early release day

Thursday, Dec. 4 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten session, and older students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

CHS, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood, 1 p.m. Lunch will be served in all of the schools. During the release time, staff will continue its work on its self-evaluation program.

The release time at the elementary schools will be devoted to parent conferences.

Earthquake fund

An Italian Earthquake Relief Fund has been established by the Massachusetts Grand Lodge, Order of Sons of Italy, to aid victims of Italy's most devastating quake since 1915.

Guy Arigo, Revere, grand venerable of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge which includes more than 20,000 members in the Bay State, New Hampshire and Maine, made the announcement today.

He said that funds will be raised among members and others in the Italo-American communities and will be channeled to assist the quake victims in Italy.

Upon making the announcement of the fund, the North Adams Sons of Italy Lodge immediately contributed $1,000, Arigo said.

He said that the public may send contributions to: Italian Earthquake Relief Fund, Massachusetts Grand Lodge, Order of Sons of Italy, 126 Cambridge St., Boston, Mass. 02114.

A senior Christmas

Are your children far away? Do you want to spend Christmas dinner with friends? The George H. Mealy Post No. 118 wants you (and any Senior Citizen who wants them).

Reserve your Christmas dinner (no charge) at the Mealy Post by calling 383-9657 any day after 3 p.m.

Please leave your name, home address and telephone number. Dinner reservations close Dec. 15. All requests must be in by that date. If transportation is needed, call the Legion Hall any date before Christmas. Someone will get you there and back again.

Dinner will be served at 12 noon, Christmas Day. The menu is roast turkey, with all the fixings, plus music and friendship. Don't be shy — call 383-9657 today after 3 p.m. to make your reservation! See you there!

Committee members for this event are Chairman George Haley, Jeff Loughran and Bob Duncan.

Class of '71 needed

It's time for your 10-year reunion, Class of 1971. Unfortunately, your Class President, Kathlene England, is off in Las Vegas doing her thing, so her mother is taking charge of things for the moment.

All living survivors of the Class of '71 should call Kay England (383-9811), Kathlene's mother, with ideas, suggestions, etc. Kathlene will be back in New England sometime this spring to start coordinating your festivities. She hasn't forgotten!

Hazard hotline

A toll-free hotline for inquiries about federal hazardous waste regulations has been announced by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Trained professionals assigned to the Industry Assistance Project at EPA Headquarters in Washington are responsible for identifying industry's problems and providing answers to questions regarding hazardous waste management regulations which took effect Nov. 19, 1980.

The hotline number is 800-424-9346, and the service is available from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Cohasset's Week

HE WAS IN HYANNIS

Mariner reporter and editor T. Kasperowicz was in Hyannis over the weekend to review Cohasset residents in Not Now Darling, a British Comedy written by Ray Cooley.

We knew Bill Morgan was sounding more and more British for a reason... that being, he was Harry McMichael in Not Now. The Cohasset Mariner's cryptogram kid's mother, Molly Hochkeppel, was Maude in the production. And Cohasset resident Martha Gaffey was Tippers.

All Cohasset residents were superb ...and as we sat nearby some Cape Codder critics, we know they thought it was superb too.

Things we learned not in relationship to the play...Bill Morgan's wife, Cathy, is now outfitting her horse (the horse which almost killed her) in $46 a set (not pair) orthopedic shoes...as a result of discovering he has a degenerative disease. Bill said Captain (the horse) has Bobby Orr's knees as a result of having raced too young.

If you missed Not Now, you may be able to pick up on it after New Year's, when Dunfey's of Hyannis may reproduce it. Seems the publicity agent of Dunfey's has a small part in the production and she's become hooked on it.

Really, it's fun...and you get dinner, too!

Tony Morgan (Morgan's 7 year-old son) and dog Gunther, thought it was fantastic, also. And really, Dunfey's is quite lenient, or must be, as Gunther ate the drapes in his room.

Organ concert at Pope Church

The South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association will present "Christmas Concert at Cohasset" at The Pope Memorial Church in Cohasset, Sunday, Dec. 14, at 3:30 p.m.

The organist will be Thomas N. Bunting of Duxbury, who will be accompanied by cornet and choral group. It promises to be a memorable afternoon for one and all. Refreshments will be served. Donation is $5, senior citizens, $2.50.

Second annual Jaycee Christmas tree sale

With Christmas right around the corner and Christmas tree buyers busy looking for the best values in premium Christmas trees, the Weymouth Jaycees are pleased to announce their second annual Christmas tree sale.

According to a spokesman for the Weymouth Jaycees, this year's sale should be better than ever. The Jaycees lot at the Harborlight Mall on Route 3A in Weymouth is expected to have over seven different species of Christmas trees and wreaths from 9 inches to 24 inches in width.

Lot manager, Mark Kinchle, said, "There are no fresher balsam fir trees anywhere on the South Shore than at our lot. Our trees have been cut within the first week of December. We have made every effort to see that our customers receive the freshest possible trees."

He continued, "Before our trees were cut we surveyed over a dozen local growers. We tried to select only the best quality tree available. We tagged each tree to guarantee our purchase and we made arrangements for cutting and delivery."

Mark and his brother, Mike, have been selling Christmas trees on the South Shore for over three years. "We have an obligation to our customers to see that they get a safe and fresh tree for the holidays. We know that our efforts are appreciated because we continue to see many of our old customers each year."

In addition to the traditional balsam fir tree available each year, the brothers have also bought some Colorado blue spruce, Douglas fir, Scotch pine and white spruce.

Mark cautioned buyers to check their purchases. "A few simple rules should insure that a fresh tree remains safe throughout the holidays."

Notes & comments

To be sure, Gutenberg was denounced by the elite of his time. His devise would spread dangerous ideas among the God-fearing, obedient masses.

The typewriter was denounced by intellectuals of the more elfin variety ... its clacking would drive away the muses.

The first motion pictures were denounced...they would destroy legitimate theater.

Then sound motion pictures were denounced... they would destroy the true pantomime art film.

Television is destroying everything.

Casino gambling...

...Welcome to the South Shore Hellenic Association, which purchased the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road just a week ago and is already busy with repair projects on the outside of the church.

...Some people are busy putting things up, others take a perverse delight in wrecking sandcastles...i.e. the recent flagnappings which took place on the Town Common and Milliken field.

...A spoonful of sugar is a sure cure for hickups.

...Don't forget to get your poem written and mailed to the Cohasset Mariner by Wednesday, Dec. 15 — 12 noon.

Pilgrim dinner report

Tuesday, Nov. 25, 1980 was a most exciting day for Mr. Shultz's and Mrs. Cisneros's 5/6 grade Open Space. Why? Because that was the day they did their Pilgrim presentation for their parents and also they had a Thanksgiving Feast with a turkey and all the vegetables.

The presentation was made up of nine groups. The groups were medicine, clothing, food, Meeting House, Discovery, Mayflower and two Indian groups. Parents went from booth to booth looking and listening to each report.

Then came the Feast. The greatest part of the day! The parents were asked to leave the room and wait out in the hall.

There were three rows of tables made up of three tables each. The turkeys were carved, the tables set and the food placed on the tables.

One comment that almost every parent made was on the costumes. "They look like real Pilgrims."

Of course, the part of the day everyone loved was "Clean Up." The room was back to normal by the end of the day and we went back to school work.

Letters

Not in favor of Hull gambling

To the Editor:

Why would legalized casino gambling in Hull be bad for Cohasset and Hingham? Because, if a casino opened in Hull, thousands of people interested in gambling would pour into Hull.

Day-to-day, the casino would be responsible for additional traffic on Rte. 3A and 228, and through Cohasset and Hingham.

Besides the additional traffic and litter from these thousands of gamblers, there is a more serious problem: crime. Casinos attract crime, increase crime, and support crime. A Hull casino would cause crime rates in Cohasset, Hingham — and Hull — to skyrocket.

Casinos attract big spenders, the "high rollers," and pickpockets and purse snatchers who want to rob them. Many people walk out of casinos dead broke and with no way to get home; and are likely to rob a house, steal a car, or hold up a store to get some cash fast.

This has already happened in Atlantic City. Law enforcement officials there estimate that the crime rate has doubled since the first casino opened. Despite rigid controls, extra police on the streets, and large casino security forces, the crime rate in Atlantic City has doubled because of casinos.

I am against legalized casino gambling in Hull. The social costs are much greater than the supposed benefits. A casino in Hull would irrevocably change the historic character of this area, and would change it for the worst.

Try-outs for Uncle Vanya

Tryouts for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's February production of Anton Chekhov's UNCLE VANYA, will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Dec. 14 at 2 p.m. and again on Monday, Dec. 15 at 8 p.m.

The director, Judy Holmes, creator of Hingham's highly acclaimed Elizabethan Companie of Wayts and Players, says of the Chekhov classic: "...it is an atmosphere play...silence is almost as important as speech...it is as if one opens the door on people's lives and then watches them...it is a play to make you think — not make you simply depressed..."

She plans to use a new translation of the play by Tyrone Guthrie and Leonide Kitnis, one that brings out its many humorous moments, and one that is closely aligned with Chekhov's intent as a playwright — that is, to treat UNCLE VANYA not as a grim, brooding tragedy, but rather as an expose of the simple folly of Everyman.

Tyrone Guthrie, himself, capsulates the work in an old familiar quotation: WHAT FOOLS WE MORTALS BE...

As always, Chekhov presents a challenge to any theatrical company. Jundy Holmes, in concert with the Cohasset Dramatic Club (celebrating its sixtieth year) is excited at the prospect.

The cast of UNCLE VANYA is a balanced one: of the ten characters (six men and four women) all but three constitute major roles. The following is a brief description of the attributes of each as offered by the director:

SEREBRIAKOV (Male) Retired professor. Must be able to look at least 60. Spoiled, but charming, hypocondriac.

YELENA (Female) Graceful. Softly spoken. Intelligent. Bored and indolent. In her 20's.

SONIS (Female) Age 18-25. Must be able to project a plain appearnace. Must have extraordinary warmth and depth.

VOYNITSKAYA MARIA (Female) Vanya's mother. Over 65 in age. Strong. Somewhat brittle. Intelligent. Elegant.

VANYA (Male) Must be able to look 47 years old. Unremarkable in appearance. Needs emotional depth and sensitivity.

ASTROV (Male) In his young 40's. Attractive. Intelligent. A doctor.

MARINA (Female) 60-80 in age. Comfortable. Warm. Wise. Slow-moving.

TELYGIN (Male) Between the ages of 40 and 60. Undistinguished looking. Hypersensitive. Sentimental. Quaint. (This is a small part).

WORKMAN & NIGHT WATCHMAN (Both male) Both straight-forward, small parts.

UNCLE VANYA will be performed on February 26, 27, 28, 1981 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Playbooks are available now at the Cohasset Public Library.

For further information, contact Alic Duffy, production manager, at 749-5955.

Ski registration

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for student ski lessons on Monday and Tuesday afternoons, December 8 and 9, from 2 to 4 p.m., at the Recreation Office, Town Hall.

Lessons for the programs will be held at the Egon Zimmerman Ski School, Blue Hills, Milton, Mass.

The program will meet on Friday afternoons, beginning Friday, Jan 9. Bus transportation is included in the $32.80 fee, and lessons will be held for five weeks from 4 to 5:45 p.m., (1¾ hours), each week. Buses will leave the Town Hall parking lot at 3:15 p.m. and will return to the Town Hall about 6:40 p.m.

PERMANENT INTERMITTENTS

Selectmen have received from Civil Service a permanent intermittent list for making permanent patrolmen appointments, but Selectmen took no action on the list at last week's meeting.

Paul Rooney was first on the list. With Robert Williams, David Cogill, Daniel Ainslie and Edward Connors placing in that respective order. Only Cogill and Ainslie were listed as veterans.

Selectmen did meet with Police Chief John DeBassio in a brief executive session over personnel matters.

WASTE WATER ADVISORY CO.

Ralph Dormitzer has been elected acting chairman of the newly-named Waste Water Advisory Committee, formerly called the Citizens' Advisory Committee on Sewerage Site.

Other members of the committee are Edward Dillon, Jr., Anne Churchill, James Froio and Robert Garvey.

NEW SCHOOL LIGHTS COMING

Selectmen voted 3-0 to approve the state installation of new pedestrian push-button overhead hanging lights at Sohier Street and Ripley Road. The State will pay for the equipment and the installation.

MAKING IT IN MASS.

Selectmen said last week they would like to Make It In Mass. Gov. King style, but said they were unable to order a $20 slug for their postage machine which would imprint upon all outgoing mail the slogan "Making It In Massachusetts."

Unfortunately, Selectmen don't have a postage machine.

FEE INCREASE DISCUSSION

Permit fee increases were to be the focal discussion of this week's Selectmen's session. Building Inspector James Litchfield recommended Selectmen increase permit fees from $2 for each $1,000 (or a fraction thereof) to $10 for the first $1,000 — and $3 for each additional thousand.

Under the new, proposed figures, a building permit formerly costing $100, could cost $157.

FLAG ACCEPTED

Selectmen accepted a flag from the Freda family in honor of Felix M. Freda who died in Nov. 1980.

MAILING CHECKS NO MORE

A letter to all Town Department heads went out this week stating that in the future paychecks will not be mailed to employees. Selectmen voted to have all Department Heads pick up checks in an effort to save money.

MGM victims

through the convention list, we knew they were ambulatory — somewhere.

"MGM had no emergency number, convention hall had no number...so we coordinated all the names coming through on police and fire lists and convention center lists.

"One woman woke up in the hospital and couldn't find her husband. But it was a good ending...she finally located her husband at another hospital. For two and three days people, relatives...just kept calling and calling. Initially, even the headliners at MGM couldn't be located (Mack Davis and Lonnie Shore)."

Kay said the various hotels in the immediate area really rose to the emergency..."They were taking people in pajamas, night clothes. It was a bureautic nightmare. When we left the First Aid station at 10 a.m. Saturday morning, I drove past the MGM Hotel — sheets were still hanging from the balconies, dozens of TV cameras were everywhere. Insurance men and safety men were trying to deal with the debris. Chairs were in the parking lot. They had been thrown from the rooms. People were standing in line waiting to go up and get their belongings. The elevator cables had melted, elevators had dropped to the basement with their doors open, leaving a long funnel for the smoke to rise.

"Only the casino guests were burned...people on the top floors all died of smoke inhalation.

"A group of Mexicans have a class action suit against MGM...a small Israeli group was also at the hotel. If the hotel had a sprinkler system, smoke detectors would have discovered the fire in the false ceiling of the casino. There were no emergency escape instructions, people didn't know what to do.

"The switchboard operators in the basement floor of the casino got out right away...but the TV's were still working in the rooms. Instructions could have been televised on those TV sets. People could have been told to stuff air conditioning vents with towels...smoke was even coming up throug the bathroom drains.

"Many callers asked about the condition of the MGM Lion...MGM keeps a big lion in a cage, who can be photographed with customers."

As a result of the MGM fire, Kay and Kathy didn't go on several planned trips in the immediate area, but Kay said, "I was glad to have been able to help."

DAR met this week

The Col. Thomas Lothrop Chapter of the DAR met Wednesday at the Caleb Lothrop House on Summer Street. The meeting was under the direction of Mrs. Drexel Gibson, regent. The program was English Cathedral architecture, with background music of Georgian chants. Mrs. John M. Burns of Jerusalem Road was tea hostess. Program director was Mrs. Angus Stewart MacIvor.

Sponsors of the Cohasset Community Center's First Thanksgiving Poster Contest were overwhelmed by the nearly 200 artistic entries from Cohasset school children.

Many of the entries can be seen adding extra holiday charm in the windows of those merchants who so generously donated space to the contestants. Contest judge David Sharpe of The David Sharpe Gallery was especially impressed by the quality of many of the entries.

Winners were delighted with their awards which were gift certificates to the Strawberry Parfait, donated by Parfait owner Carmen.

First place winners were Andrew Kuhn, Tonya Petersen, Jacob Powell, Julianna Chittick, Allison Redfield, Mary Beth McNamara, Kim Hunt, Lauri Doherty and Jane Higgins. Runners-up were Douglas Schultz, Dan DeMichele, Kristin McQuarrie, Kerri Anglin, Brett Cogill and Jason Marsac.

A special award was given to Josh Whitman who completed his entry despite a broken arm.

Rachael Barrett's illustration of Noah's Ark will be on display in the Children's Room of the Boston Public Library along with the other winners of the "Illustrate a Book Contest," now through December 24, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. The contest was sponsored by the Boston Globe and the Boston Public Library for children ages four to 14 in Eastern Massachusetts.

Rachael received a certificate of achievement and a poster at the award ceremony held recently in Boston. She is a 6th grader in the Deer Hill School and the daugher of Mr. and Mrs. David Barret of Lantern Lane.

Happy news from the Waal family: Ellie and Jeff became the parents of a daughter on November 25! Megan weighed 7 lbs. 15 ozs. upon her arrival at Boston Hospital for Women and she and her Mom are home and doing very well. Her brother is Erik Michael, age 6. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence White and Mr. and Mrs. George Waal, all of Norwood, and Mrs. Esther Hill of Stoughton is great grandmother.

Robert and Roger Bergenheim, father and son team of Hobart Lane, will launch a new 24 page business tabloid newspaper in January. With offices on Beacon Street, Boston, the Bergenheim's will direct a staff of three editor-reporters, syndicated columnists and approximately 40 free lance writers in producing the P & L — The Boston Business Journal once a week for the top executives of businesses and banks in the I-95 belt surrounding Boston.

Robert, who is vice president for labor and public relations for Boston University, has considerable experience in the newspaper business. He began as copy boy at the Christian Science Monitor and rose there to the position of editor and general manager. He then became the director of newspaper operations for the McClatchy Corp. in Sacramento, California after which he returned to Boston to the Boston Herald American as publisher. He will be nominally involved in the new enterprise as president while retaining his position at B.U.

Roger will act as general manager of the new paper and he has had experience in advertising at the Los Angeles Herald Examiner and the Boston Phoenix.

Clever Cohasset residents are making gifts to sell

Cohasset shops are filled to the brim with Christmas merchandise with something for everyone on your shopping list. Catalogs stuff the mailmen's bags and some clever people are no doubt making gifts themselves.

Here are a few items that you won't find in the shops that are handmade by some of your neighbors:

Personalized baby items, like quilts, pillows and bibs, are the specialty of Marsha Silvia and partner, Susanna Piers of Scituate. They have a few things on hand and sew and design to order. Call Marsha at 383-9395 for your order.

Donna Cogill (383-9537) and Judy Powell (383-9864) design and make beautiful doll clothes for small, medium and large baby dolls and the Mandy and Jenny dolls. Call them for more information or to place a holiday order.

"Crafts by Ripley" are exquisitely hand-crafted wood toys and gift items by Bob Ripley with assistance from Bill Protulis in the wood-working shop and Betty Ripley in design and decoration.

Bob switched full-time to his hobby of designing something better and custom-tailored for his children in September after 22 years in the school supply business. He and Betty, who also works part-time at The Wee Spinnaker, are bursting with ideas and they will expand their line of toys and household items to furniture — bunk frames, desks and built-ins, and possibly outdoor play equipment. Bob has designed a wooden storm door that is extremely attractive as well as efficient in keeping out the cold.

Some of the many items they sell from their home and through toy parties (which work the same as a tupperware party) are a portable dollhouse, parking garage (scaled for Matchbox size cars), a doll's changing table and bed that is designed to grow with the child into almost anything (it is the size of a small bookcase), crayon caddy, gumball machine, sand bucket, a treasure chest (bureau-size) and wall rack with hooks that comes with one of 15 different heads, from Holly Hobbie to a whale to something new for the older set, a beer mug.

Other items include custom mailboxes, a utility bench for tools, paints or whatever, and a triple sawbuck which is fortified with oak. All of Ripley's crafts are made of solid pine with bronze nails to resist rusting and are finished with either linseed oil, paint, or polyurethane.

The Ripley family gets into the business too — Gaye, 19 and a student at Wheelock College, Scott, 17, Kerry, 8, and Jennifer 2½ — either help in some stage of crafting the items or provide needed marketing expertise! Phone them at 383-9213 for more information.

Super capes, available at The Wee Spinnaker, or by calling creator Joanne Chittick (383-9220), or Penny Redfield (383-9286), are a great gift for little people. Made to fit ages two to six, cloaks for Batman, Superman, Superwoman, Spiderman or any fantasy character, are finely made to look like the real thing.

Ways to keep your tree fresh, fragrant

Each year, about 30 million Americans select and take home an evergreen tree to decorate with ornaments and lights for the Christmas holidays. In order to help you enjoy your tree even more, some tips are listed below to help keep your tree fresh, fragrant and fire resistant.

1. Select a fresh, green tree. Usually a fresh tree has flexible needles which bend. If the weather is very cold, moisture inside each needle may freeze, making the needles brittle. Spruce needles also tend to be more brittle naturally than those of fir or pine.

2. Shake the tree to see if green needles drop out. If many do, the tree may not be fresh. Pine trees shed their inside needles every fall, and sometimes lodge among the branches. This is a normal process and not the sign of an old or dead tree.

2a. Spray the tree with a garden hose to remove road salts and restore hydration.

3. Care for the tree as carefully as you care for cut flowers.

4. Let the tree remain outdoors or on a cool porch or patio until you are ready to decorate. An area that provides protection from the wind will help the tree retain its moisture.

5. If possible, bring the tree to a partially-heated area (the basement or porch) the night before decorating.

6. Make a fresh, straight across cut in the trunk about an inch up from the original cut and plunge the trunk end immediately into fresh water. This opens the tree stem so it can take up water.

If you allow the water level to drop below the trunk, a seal will form just as it does on a cut flower, and a new cut will be necessary. As long as the tree keeps drawing water, it will be fire resistant.

7. Trees are thirsty! They may drink between two pints and a gallon of water per day — so make sure to check daily and supply fresh water as needed.

8. Be sure the tree is well supported in a water-holding stand and is away from fireplaces, radiators, TV sets and other heat sources.

9. Avoid use of combustible decorations. Check all electric lights and connections. Do not use lights with worn or frayed cords — and NEVER use lighted candles.

10. After the holidays, the tree has many uses. It can be placed in the garden or backyard and used as a bird feeder. Orange slices will attract birds.

11. Your tree is biodegradable — its branches may be removed and used as mulch in the garden — the trunk can be used for fuel or chopped for mulch.

12. Remember: a fresh supply of plenty of water is essential to keep the tree fresh.

Your Christmas tree has been intentionally grown for your enjoyment, and is a renewable resource. Each spring, two or three seedlings will replace the tree you enjoyed during the holidays.

And while the tree was growing, it provided shelter for birds and wildlife. An acre of Christmas trees provides enough oxygen for eighteen people. Growing of Christmas trees benefits our ecology.

Scoreboard — By Rob Tis

Cohasset-Duxbury game scoreless

The Thanksgiving game truly lived up to its reputation as the Turkey Day Classic. It was a total defensive struggle that was so tough neither Duxbury nor Cohasset was able to put a point on the board.

The Skippers' defense highlighted by Sandy Ayer, Bob Fessler, Paul Buckley, Mike Jones and Jim Kelleher, allowed the Green Dragons a mere 29 yards rushing and 72 yards total offense to the Skippers' 72 yards rushing, 89 yards total offense.

Both teams though, did have their chances. The Skippers' main chance came in the second quarter when after 30 yards in Duxbury penalties and 20 yards gained in two plays by fullback Bob Donahue, the Skippers wound up on the Green Dragons' 15 yard line.

At fourth down and one to go Coach Leone elected to go for the field goal but Paul Buckley's boot came up only centimeters short.

Meanwhile the Skipper defense had yet to allow Duxbury a first down. Both teams traded punts until the fourth quarter, when on Duxbury's most penetrating drive, the Green Dragons drove inside the Skipper 20.

The Cohasset line held Duxbury for three downs then on fourth and long defensive back Mark Froio batted down a Costello pass and the Skippers took control.

Joe Becker broke loose for a 40 yard run during this possession but it was brought back on a holding call. This makes the Turkey Day rivalry 5-3-1 in Duxbury's favor which, coincidentally was both teams league record this year.

This was truly a remarkable Skipper football team. For the first time in nine years they had a winning record. It was a small team but they played like a tight unit with great enthusiasim.

It will be a long time before the people of Cohasset and the students at CHS will forget the 1980 football team. And most of all graduating players Bob Fessler, Mike Jones, Sandy Ayer, Tim Libby, Jeff Lyons, Mark Froio, Bud Howorth, Dave Chapman, Gary Orminston and Mike Donahue will always be able to look back upon a truly great accomplishment.

Sr. Lineman David Chapman blocks for Bob Donahue. (Lindey Blaisdell photo)

STATEMENTS MADE IN FAVOR OF GAMBLING

"Hull used to be the richest Town in the whole Commonwealth...due to gambling.

"It would help all businesses...if gambling went in, services would be upgraded in Hull and the entire area...Hull has been approached by various developers and hotel chains who couldn't get financing. Believe it or not, the world is changing. King's in...we're going to get gambling in Hull.

"If we have legalized gambling, we should legalize prostitutes as well. You don't see prostitutes being abused in Las Vegas...you can't walk down the street without being husted. Prositution is legal in Vegas.

"People have the wrong impression about gambling...if Hull wants to gamble let them gamble...I don't think we should try to influence anybody else.

"It's ok with me if the customers fly in.

"People are afraid of any changes...I have a lot of friends who gamble and they're very nice.

"In one elementary school in Hull 80 per cent of the school lunches are subsidized. Hull is simply trying to trade off a certain package of problems for another package of problems. Urban renewal hasn't gotten off the ground in over 20 years in Hull and that's government money.

"I know for a fact Welfare encourages people to move to Hull...where they can get more for their money. Hull's sick of taking our tired, poor, Welfare mothers and their children.

"There are 3,000 know rental units in Hull, 1,000 of those are rented by subsidized families. Hull is sick of being funded by government programs...it's desperately reaching out to private enterprise. If that's gambling, and hotels can't get financing to build anything without a main attraction like a casino these days...

Hull should. . .rip down its amusement center. . . build an industrial park. . . put in a first class marina . . .not invite casino gambling in. . .a recent Mariner poll showed. . .

STATEMENTS MADE AGAINST GAMBLING

"My gut feeling is no, but I'm open to hearing all the arguments. I think it would definitely help Main Street businesses, but there would be a tremendous traffic flow. I went to Lake Tahoe once, a smaller resort. I didn't find anything offensive about the way people looked. I did object to little kids standing in the cold, waiting for their parents to come out of the casino. Some people say gambling is a drug. If I lived in Hull, I might have to think about it a little more.

"It would have a negative impact. I think people are voting for it thinking a lot of jobs will go to local people. If Hull really kept it to one casino, the percentage of people employed would be miniscule.

"Hull brought this state of affairs on itself...it should rip down the amusement area, put up condominimums on Paragon Park...put in an industrial park. Hull's geographically unsuitable for most things except tourism.

"When Paragon Park came in to town people with money left.

"I don't want it because there's a terrible TV program called Vegas, I wouldn't want a similar TV program called Hull.

"Itwould improve the class of hoodlum — hoodlums would exchange black leather jackets for black, silk suits.

"My opinion has never affected anything that's happened in this state.

"The issue is hard to get into, because we all come to it with prejudices. I'm against lotteries, too... gambling in any form is exploiting people.

"Hull couldn't stop at one or two casino establishments, it would have to become a Las Vega. Hull is not isolated enough. Gamblers wouldn't get the same atmosphere in Hull...we have winter here. I can conceive of a resort area in Hull without gambling.

"I don't think we'll do anything new or revolutionary here...a handful of people will make a lot of money...a lot more will be losing money. The average resident of Hull won't be better off. Again, I dont know how to turn the place around.

"It's clearly a state-wide issue. The casino has put influence on the state legislature. Once they get in, you can never get them out.

"It seems Republicans are for it and Democrats are against it.

Appeal

According to Hilare, Hawker had requested and received all the (applicable in 1977) permits for a sewage disposal system. In additions, Hilaire noted that the disposal system work was initiated and completed within the allowable time frame permitted.

However, Hawker never constructed a home on the property.

Reportedly, the Conservation Commission is appealing Hilaire's decision through an appellate procedure within DEQE. Neither Town Counsel Blake Thaxter or Conservation Commission Chairman Patricia Buckley were able to be reached for comment before press deadline this week.

the ceremony...along with Noel Ripley, Chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission, who the Bishop said had come to sample some of the fine Greek pastries.

New and old friends gathered at Michael Valis' home on Jerusalem Road after the ribbon-cutting for a champagne party. Valis is president of the Hellenic Association. Other founders of the church are Mrs. Eugenia Syrmopoulos and Ernest Sofis.

The Hellenic Association was founded in April 1980 and has enthusiastically had tavernas, dinners and fleas and things, as well as a major plege drive in order to fund the building purchase.

Plans call for the first services at the church to be held Christmas Day.

First Parish concert to benefit hunger relief through UNICEFF

A superb program of Christmas music will be presented by the Unicorn Singers, under the direction of Margo Euler, and the MIT Brass Ensemble on Sunday, December 14 at 4 p.m. at the First Parish Meeting House on the Common in Cohasset.

The First Parish Church is sponsoring the concert for the benefit of world hunger relief through UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) as well as for music lovers. This will be the only South Shore performance of this highly regarded group's Christmas concert.

The Unicorn Singers consist of 24 individuals from ten communities and of the 14 women in the group, nine also sing with the Broad Cove Chorale, also under Mrs. Euler's direction. Unicorn began two years ago when nine men who joined the Broad Cove for their performance of "The Unicorn, The Gorgon and The Manticore" by Menotti, decided to stay together. The two groups do some joint programs, but each lead separate lives.

The MIT Brass Ensemble will be conducted by Boston Symphony brass trombonist and MIT faculty member, Gordon Hallberg. They will accompany the singers and the audience, and will also perform three carols written in the 40's for the Stan Kenton Orchestra.

Both groups, in addition to a flamboyant and varied program of Christmas songs and carols (eight of which the audience will sing along with), will perform two splendid major concert repertory pieces for brass and chorale: "In Ecclesiis" by Gabriele and "To Saint Cecelia" by Norman Dello Joio.

Seating in the lovely 18th century church will be limited. Tickets may be purchased at the church office (383-1100) or at Cookworks, In Stitches or Noble's Camera Shop at Tedeschi Plaza in Cohasset and at the Hingham Square Book Shop.

Village Fair opens doors this Saturday

All but the finishing touches to hand-crafted articles, the last-minute baking of goodies, and the feverish set-up of tables, booths and drills, remain now before the doors open at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 6, on the 40th annual Cohasset Village Fair that will bring some of the first reminders of the holiday season to this South Shore town.

Cohasset Common and the buildings around it will be radiating the holiday spirit as throngs gather to shop, browse, munch and play at this lively joint benefit of the four churches of the Village: First Parish Unitarian, St. Anthony's Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal and Second Congregational.

As usual, gifts and decorations for the holiday season will be principal attractions, filling the Town Hall especially with the sights and scents of Christmas.

Obituary

Frank W. Wilson

Frank W. Wilson, 48, a former Cohasset resident, died Nov. 22 at Emerson Hospital from injuries sustained when he was struck by a car while jogging.

Born in New York City, he attended the Green Vale School there. He also attended Brooks School in North Andover before graduating from Phillips Exeter Academy in Exeter, N.H., in 1951.

He graduated cum laude from Yale University in 1955.

He lived in Cohasset between 1964 and 1973.

An avid sailor, he had sailed the Atlantic coastal waters for many years and had made a transatlantic crossing.

For the past five years, he had been the general manager of the Identification Division of the Dennison Manufacturing Company in Framingham.

While at Yale, he was a member of the Book and Snake Society, Zeta Psi and Tau Beta Pi.

He was also a former member of the Yale Club of Boston, the board of governors of the Concord Antiquarian Society and the Royal Ocean Racing Club of London, England.

He was former trustee of the Fens School of Concord and a member of the Society of Cincinnati, Maryland Chapter.

He leaves his wife, Elizabeth (Horrock) Wilson, a son, John T. Wilson, and a daughter, Elizabeth J. Wilson, all of Concord; his mother, Mrs. J. Sawyer Wilson of Maryland; and two sisters, Dorothy M. Ashton of Cambridge, N.Y. and Ellen Lukens of Connecticut.

Beechwood Church Holly Fair

The Beechwood Congregational Church of 53 Church St., Cohasset will hold their Holly Fair, Saturday, Dec. 6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

From 11:30 to 1 p.m. you may enjoy a tasty bowl of fish chowder. Luncheon includes chowder, crackers, pickles, cake and ice cream and coffee. For those who do not find fish chowder to their liking sandwiches are available.

On Mondays and Tuesdays the ladies have been making ornaments and fancy work. The smell of peppermint, anise, clove, lemon, lime, spearmint, wintergreen and orange fills the kitchen as once again the beach glass candy is being made.

Judy O'Donovan is in charge of fried bread dough which will be served in the morning. Coffee, tea, cold drinks and donuts will be available throughout the day from Ruth Mitchell.

For the children there is Santa's Chimney filled with grabs; Ruth Wagner in charge. A children's Happy belated birthday to a mother/daughter team — Robbie and Michelle Roycroft. Robbie celebrated her birthday on the 19th and all we can say is she looks lots younger than she is!

Michelle was eight years old on November 25 and in spite of the fact that Robbie sent her to the Osgood open space classroom with sixty-six cupcakes, she still managed to treat Michelle and three friends, Madeline MacDonald, Suzanne deCruz and Pamela Hasse to dinner at the Aloha Restaurant!

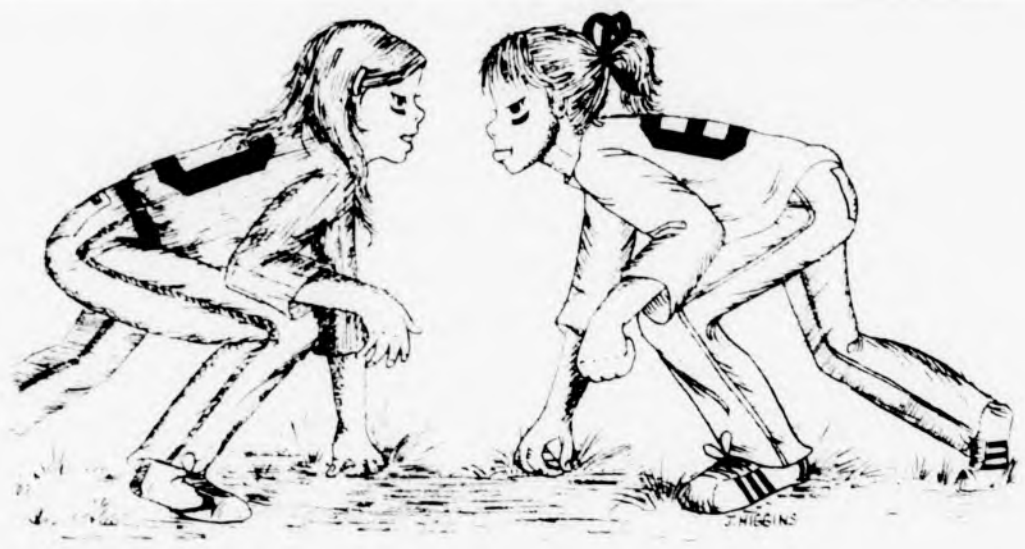
THE COHASSET LAMPLIGHT

Volume IV No. 1 December 1980 Cohasset High School



Behind The Lamplight

The Cohasset Lamplight has now published three issues in the Mariner. In each of these issues the writers have received credit for their work. However, it takes much more than a band of reporters to turn out a newspaper.

It is because of the work of a number of "invisible" people that the Lamplight can publish. Without staff members to handle the financial end of the newspaper business, for example, the paper would be unable to function.

In addition, the students in charge of photography and artwork produce a prodigious amount of material.

And the people who work on the typing and layout staffs have not only attended to their own duties, but they have also responded to a number of last-minute requests.

To give these people the credit they deserve, we are printing here a list of our staff:

Editors
Cathy O'Brien, Philip Dormitzer
Advertising & Distribution Managers
Amy Wittet, Tina Birmann
Layout Editors
James Carey, Bill Henry
Photography Editor
Gail Hobson

Accounting
Elaine Mullen

Reporters
Guissepina Devito, Mike Ellis

Advisor
Mr. William Kite

In addition to these official staff members, there are others who have helped us in many ways. Although Mrs. Bingham no longer works with Mr. Kite as an advisor, she still manages to give us advice and lead us over the rough spots.

Tanna Kasperowicz, editor of the Cohasset Mariner, has not only donated this space in her paper, but she has also given us the benefit of all her expertise. Without her help we would not be able to make the Lamplight an effective student newspaper.

Impressions Of Spain

by Liz Goggin

Last year Miss Cescarini lived in Spain in order to obtain her masters degree.

Obviously there was also an interest on her part to learn more of the language and culture of Spain, and to experience a different life style.

Miss Cesarini visited Madrid and she also enjoyed the various small towns, particularly at festival time. The Spanish people, she discovered, are warm and hospitable, and many times parties took place spontaneously.

These people have been able to revive their love of festivals since the end of Franco's rule. (While Franco was acting leader he would not permit these activities.)

Probably the most important thing to a Spaniard is his family. Miss Cescarini was asked by the natives she met, "Don't you miss your family?"

To a Spaniard, his family is first and foremost. This is evident in a Spaniard's reluctance to leave his family to pursue a better career or job. The Spanish, unlike us, are not a mobile people.

Another difference that Miss Cescarini noted between the Americans and the Spanish is in their concept of time. The Spanish appear to have no schedules, or due dates for any project and there is no rush to get anything done.

This is often exasperating for an American tourist who is used to American efficiency. Even so small a task as mailing a parcel is not accomplished easily.

The pace is not as frantic as that of our country. In the mid-afternoon all of the businesses close-up and the people go home for dinner. Often at times in the evenings a family will go for a walk. In Spain there is evidently a relaxed, easy going atmosphere.

The Spanish view of America is perhaps held by many peoples around the world; they see us as liberated, free-thinking and affluent in relation to our possessions.

For the most part they are interested in getting to know Americans and learning of our different culture. From what Miss Cescarini observed, Americans are respected and generally liked.

Spain certainly appears to be an interesting country. It's attitudes and culture are refreshing although they are different from those of America they may be thoroughly enjoyed. Ole!

Lamplight Editorial

Powder Puff Spirit Renewed

Powder Puff can be a unique opportunity for boys and girls to break stereotypic roles for a day. Girls get a chance to play tight end or wide receiver and learn a little bit about the sport while guys get to cheerlead.

Powder puff also provides opportunities to become better friends with students one does not normally see during the school day or on weekends. Therefore, it can strengthen class unity. Most importantly, it provides a chance for Juniors and Seniors to get to know each other better and compete in a fun game on the football field.

During last year's powder puff season Senior girls barred Junior girls from the traditional senior hosted breakfast and additionally had a dinner for themselves which previously was hosted by the juniors.

The angry Seniors acted this way because the Juniors wished to move the powder puff game forward a few weeks as the traditional dates for game and practices would have interfered with Senior play rehearsal.

The Juniors did not agree to the date because many Junior girls on the team could not play at that time with so late a notification.

Hostility between the two groups arose, as a few Senior girls told Juniors they would "kill them on the field." This eventually came to pass as the superior Senior team wopped the Juniors 30-0.

On the field the Seniors won, but off the field both teams lost. The game promoted bad feelings between the Senior and Junior class. It was intended originally to improve relations within and between the Junior and Senior classes and foster new friendships.

It appeared as though this year's game might follow last year's trend as posters in school halls called on the Juniors to "kill, mutilate and destroy," while the Seniors were "out for blood." However, events proved to the contrary.

After the display of harsh words and overly rough play between last year's classes (which nearly resulted in the halting of the game at half time), it was enjoyable to see some of the old values and intentions restored to powder puff.

The Juniors hosted a breakfast for the Seniors at the Sandblom's house before the game. Although the event could have resulted in a shouting match, the breakfast went smoothly as Juniors and Seniors mingled together, wishing each other luck.

This feeling was reflected in the neutral sign on the Sandblom's garage door "Good Luck Juniors and Seniors."

On the field both teams played fairly, with comparatively less brutality than last year, although there were minor incidents. The seniors won 12-0, and capped off the event with a very noisy car parade around town, complete with a "Chinese fire drill" in Cohasset Village Center.

They dedicated the game in memory of Kathleen Kelly, who played defensive end in last year's game.

The Juniors took the loss very well, and with their talent will have a very promising game next year. Overall, this season's powder puff game seems to have stepped back toward the friendly match it is supposed to be.

News viewers...

By Lois Martin

All television news viewers are divided into three parts, the Channel 4 crowd, Channel 5 regulars and Channel 7's faithfuls.

I'm not sure what this means. But I can make a good guess on who watches what. Each of us seems committed to one news station or another.

Take your John Henning crowd, for example. John's serious about his news. If I remember correctly he used to deliver it from Channel 5. I'm not sure but if I were to listen to his report nightly I'd use my depression as an excuse for not doing the dishes. Bill O'Connell is sort of a cheered up sportscaster, also an alum of Channel 5. But people who watch that station aren't looking for ribaldry in the news. They prefer to do without the anchor people nudging one another in the ribs when they share a joke.

Now look at Channel 4. Jack Williams is rumored to have attracted the eye of West Coast networks. He's captured my attention on occasion because I've admired his hair shade and I'm reluctant to say it runs in his family. Tony Pepper is your run of the mill buddy in newscasting. Always a friend to the listener, Tony can come up with a warm smile at the mere mention of Mt. St. Helens, Iraquian borders or Proposition 2½.

Perhaps this implies a more liberal following with the conservatives headed toward Channel 7.

But I don't think that's accurate. Because Channel 5 of course has a bevy of shorter newsmen. And I'm mindful that must mean something. There's nothing rococo about the 5ers. Natalie's a dear from all outward appearances, willing to give the weather report as part of her introduction of the meteorologist, cute Dick Albert.

One prerequisite for getting on the air is obvious. You've got to have a deep voice. Natalie has one. Men and women with high squeaky voices apparently are viewed as having low credibility. The deeper the voice, the more believable, they figure.

Some say they can't bear the news if Tom Ellis gives it. They've been so stern as to suggest we go back to the old tradition of shooting the bearer of bad news.

But I don't mind Tom. I understand him. He means well and through no fault of his own he likes to appear magnificent even as the Russians plunder Afghanistan.

I watch Channel 5 most. I consider myself a neo-moderate/post conservative pre liberal. Would that it were as possible to draw personality traits from distinctive channel watchers as it is with dogs and owners and cars and drivers.

But after spending a day lolling in bed sneezing, I concluded there's no understanding television at all, let alone why we watch it. Someone from a radio station once told me there's no pain in the neck to equal the one emanated from woman broadcasters. He was a male broadcaster.

But I've found for advertising pain relief, especially those connected with delicate subjects like one's digestive tract from start to end, advertisers prefer men.

All the men who try to sell us Ex-Lax, Pepto Bismol or Metamucil are between the ages of 45 and 55. They wear somber (ultimately tedious) dark gray or blue suits. Apparently women grow flippant when chatting about those products. Only a few big companies allow women to even talk about their soap powders.

Anyway I was struck last week by the similarity between those digestive commercial doers and Ronald Reagan's transition team. I promise you there's no telling them apart if you turn down the sound and blot out the product. And I believe the same number of women will be Ronald's liaisons (of which there are record numbers) as are commissioned to sell Preparation H.

But I go too far, prejudging both future administrations and present television. Still I'll know we've come a long way when a woman with Walter Cronkite's kindly eyes, Chet Huntley's slow smile and Tony Pepper's legs is named as Reagan's press spokeswoman. If the present television Reagan trend continues, she'll only be allowed to talk about what cereal the President Elect prefers.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Where is Milly Carr's favorite place to be? In the kitchen. Now that she no longer works at Norwell Town Hall, her idea of a good time is to get out the pots and pans and with her portable TV to keep her company, try out yet another new recipe. Her husband is her faithful ally and passes judgment on the never-ending variety of dishes she slips his way. Recipes he deems rejects are doctored up and submitted a second time. A "no" and out it goes, but a request for a second helping rates it good enough for company fare. Luckily for us, Milly is always eager to share their favorites and has a steady stream of company to prove it and every once in a while I find a batch in the mail to pass on to our readers. I chose this one in today's column because it's perfect party fare for the holidays ahead.

RUMAKI

1/2 lb. chicken livers
1/2 lb. bacon
1 can water chestnuts, sliced

Cook livers slightly by baking or pan frying, cool and cut into bite-sized pieces. Wrap half a slice of bacon around a piece of liver and one slice of water chestnut. Skewer with round toothpick. Bake at 300 degrees on a broiler pan until bacon is well done. Serve with

SWEET AND SOUR SAUCE

3 T cornstarch
1 c. vinegar
1 c. sugar
Dash of Tabasco
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 T prepared mustard
1/4 to 1/2 c. pineapple juice

Mix cornstarch, vinegar and sugar. Cook until clear. Add rest of ingredients, cooking until desired dipping consistency. Makes 36 rumaki.

Of all our readers who find their kitchen a source of delight, Margaret Ward is perhaps one of the most generous in passing along her favorites. So, it came as no surprise to find that one of the recipes she sent us long ago was featured in the dessert section of the Ledger's 1980 Holiday Cookbook. Margaret's Cranberry Swirl Coffee Cake won honorable mention and by now many of us who have already tried it, know why. Also not too amazing was the news that Vin Gilarde won an honorable mention for his adaptation of a dish from Lilly's which many of us have served since the recipe appeared here last July. For those who have somehow missed it, here is Vin's recipe for

CHICKEN WITH RICOTTA CHEESE

4 boneless chicken breasts
1 lb. ricotta cheese
4 slices ham, sliced thin
1 can artichoke hearts, sliced
1/4 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced thin
Bread crumbs
1 egg
Flour

Pound chicken breasts until thin. Dredge with flour. Layer each breast with a slice of ham. On top of ham spread a generous amount of ricotta. Then spread on a layer of mushrooms and artichoke hearts. Fold breasts and secure with toothpicks. Soak folded breasts in egg and dredge in breadcrumbs. Bake at 350 degrees approx. 30 to 45 min. Serves 4.

Whether in her summer kitchen in Marshfield or her winter quarters, Frances Darling finds time to remember us with a recipe she has found particularly pleasing. All the way from Charleston, So. Carolina comes a friend's recipe for

BENNE SEED WAFERS

1 stick butter, or 3/4 c. cooking oil. Cream and add
2 c. brown sugar
1 egg, beaten, then add
1 c. flour
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt, then add
1 tsp. vanilla
3/4 c. benne seeds [same as sesame seeds], toasted

Drop by tsp. on greased cookie sheets. Bake at 325 degrees for 5 to 8 min. Allow to cool 1 min. before removing from pan. Makes about 80 thin wafers.

Judge orders second look at Smith case

Friday, Dec. 5 Boston Municipal Court Judge John Pino ordered the Civil Service Commission (CS) to hear additional testimony regarding the case of former Cohasset patrolman Douglas Smith.

Judge Pino suggested that CS complete and file within 60 days of the Dec. 5, 1980 order (Feb.-April '81) all additional evidence and supplemental testimony to the courts.

"It is fundamental that justice delayed is justice denied," Judge Pino said in his order.

Earlier this year, CS backed up Selectmen's firing of Smith. Shortly after the CS hearing on the same Atty. Matulewicz appealed to CS to reconsider its penality imposed upon Smith as a result of having obtained new evidence.

CS rejected the appeal. Part of the new evidence concerned an affidavit (June, 1980) obtained from Police Lt. Charles Stockbridge who alleged that during an executive session with Selectmen in Feb. 1978, Selectmen said they wished to get rid of two officers on the force (Smith and another officer) a month before the Selectmen's hearing on the same.

Matulewicz maintains Selectmen's punishment (Smith's firing) was predetermined in the matter.

One charge against Smith was assault with a dangerous weapon, two charges of being a disorderly person, failing to work a regular shift and calling in sick when the department alleged he was not sick.

However, Smith was never charged with a criminal count. Criminal charges against Smith were dismissed in Dedham Court after Smith's lawyer conferred with the District Attorney on the matter.

Reached Monday afternoon, Smith's attorney said he hopes CS, after hearing the new evidence, will deliver new findings on its decision. If not, Matulewicz, who is representing his client at no charge, figures he'll be back in municipal court sometime in Sept. '81.

The peaks & valleys of Christmas

If you can't afford it - Santa can't either

By Karin Bartow

Everyone believes in Santa Claus, don't you? If when you're young, you believe in the magical Santa Claus who arrives mysteriously with your presents, the concept of Santa Claus becomes the spirit of the holiday.

Whether or not we, as children or adults, depend on Santa Claus, or the concept of Santa Claus, as the event that is going to make our lives better and happier, is the basic reason why our holiday may or may not be stressful.

John O'Brien, a psychologist in child and family counseling with South Shore Counseling, spoke with knowledge and humor last week at the Osgood Communications Council meeting about holiday stress.

He told the group that this is a busy time for him and his colleagues because too many people have unrealistic expectations about what the holidays are going to bring.

He received 10 calls on the Sunday after Thanksgiving and said they were "Basically, people who were disappointed in the four days. The expectation that they should be happy and having fun is a letdown along about Sunday when they see that their lives aren't better."

We all believe in Santa Claus and look forward to Christmas and other holidays, so what's wrong with that? Absolutely nothing, O'Brien says, as long as we "Get off the magic and distinguish between a happy, good experience and one that's going to make our lives better."

"The only thing, event or person that can make

Finds friends' successs really depressing

By Laura Doherty

While I'm basically an up person around Christmas Time...there's one stressful happening during this season which causes me not a little anxiety.

It's the usually-xeroxed Christmas "brag" letter ...sent by out-of-state friends who consider it their bound duty to keep me informed of each of their family's many accomplishments during the preceding year.

Always among the first to arrive, this year's mimeographed list of achievements was no exception. It was delivered the day after Thanksgiving — its red envelope and green ink seemingly adding a dash of color and holiday cheer to the morning mail.

I paused before opening it wondering if, this year, there would perhaps just be the usual quick message of pleasant tidings but no, there it was — the annual family report.

I have not seen my friend for 10 years and should, I suppose, enjoy these yearly updatings. I should also, I know, rejoice in the many accomplishments of a seemingly remarkable family.

Instead, I find myself wondering whether I still like my friend or for that matter, if she would still like me. I remember how often, even while growing up, I would wonder that we were friends.

While I tried out 5 times for the high school glee club and never did make it, she refused to join because it took too much time from her other activities.

There was the time we both went out for ice skating, but just weeks after I jumped into a barrier and lost two months of my junior year, she was

State guidelines soften 2 1/2 impact

Just a few weeks ago Proposition 2½ looked like instant devestation for a majority of Mass. cities and towns.

But early this week, the state Department of Revenue released guidelines for dealing with Prop. 2½ which will definitely take some of the bite out of the measure.

The Department of Revenue will allow cities and towns to tack a 13 per cent inflationary figure on to its 1980 assessed valuation figure (Cohasset's is $184 million) — which will pump up that figure to $208 million.

That $208 million figure for assessed valuation will be used, the Department of Revenue said, as cities and towns' 1981 assessed valuation figure, except in communities where an approved revaluation program has or will be completed for fiscal year 1981 or fiscal year 1982.

Town Accountant William Signorelli could not be reached before press time this week, but School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the 13 per cent inflationary allowance on the 1980 valuation figure would have an impact of only $400,000 (including the school's share of auto excise tax loss) on the schools, as opposed to the $709,000 school figure projected before the inflationary allowance.

The above preliminary information, translates into a loss of $709,613 in revenue for Cohasset using the 13 per cent inflationary figure.

How the figures would change if the Town is permitted to use revaluation figures is yet unknown. But some Town Officials feel the impact of Prop. 2½ could be practically negligible, if the Town can use its revaluation figures (the Town is in the process of being reassessed).

Poetry deadline is Wed., Dec. 17

Come on you guys...we told you about this way before Thanksgiving.

So far we have two poems and three Cohasset Mariner Christmas Poetry Judges to judge those two poems. If no one else enters, Andrew Trask and Letitia Linsley will win by default. They will get ALL the prize money and ALL the merchandise.

Poems may be up to 16 lines in length, may rhyme or not. They can be submitted on any size paper. Name, age, grade should be on the back of the poem. And just about anybody who can write can enter — adults, too!

Mail your poem to the Cohasset Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset 02025 or drop it off at the Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy drop box before Wednesday, Dec. 17 at 12 noon! Only one poem per person.

If teachers are having whole classes enter, then kids should make sure teachers get their class entries in before deadline. Last year two Osgood teachers got class entries in a day late — after judging. Check on those teachers, kids.

Winning submissions will be published in the Mariner Christmas edition. Prizes will be awarded Friday, Dec. 19 — either through the mail or at your school.

Cohasset's week

Rules for mailing

Postmaster Gerard Keating reminds customers that for the best mailing service this Christmas season they should use zip codes, return addresses, and proper postage.

Envelopes without postage will be returned to senders, if possible, or delayed by postage-due procedures.

"When the return address is placed on envelopes bearing holiday greetings, it also helps remind friends of one's current address," Keating said. Make certain that you use your P.O. box number if mail is received through a P.O. box.

If the family to whom a holiday message is sent moved more than a year ago, it cannot be forwarded. When return addresses are used, such letters are returned to the sender with a notation that the forwarding order has expired.

Volunteers needed

Local chapters of the American Red Cross have launched a formal appeal for funds to assist the Italian Red Cross with its efforts to aid victims of the recent earthquake.

In its appeal, Red Cross chapters stress that a financial contribution is the most effective and efficient form of assistance for local residents to provide. Items such as food, clothing, tents and medical assistance are being supplied by Red Cross societies in Europe.

Call your local American Red Cross chapter, or Kurt Edgren, director, office of Public Affairs, at the American Red Cross at 262-1234, ext. 244 for more information.

Red Cross volunteers are needed to assist with recovery efforts, i.e. inquiries concerning relatives. Volunteers are most needed during regular working hours. Training and supervision will be provided.

England appointment

Frank England, chairman of the Cohasset School Committee, has been appointed to serve as a member of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletics Association (MIAA) Games Officials Committee.

MASC is an organization which serves school committees throughout the Commonwealth.

Jurors selected

James Hunt of South Main Street was selected as a grand juror for January. The following residents' names were drawn by Selectmen for traverse jurors for the first Monday in January; Jeanne Topper of Old Coach Road and Margaret Muir of Reservoir Road.

Solar panels

Susan McVeigh of Atlantic Avenue was scheduled to go before the Zoning Board of Appeals this week to ask for a special permit to mount three solar panels in ground for domestic hot water. The property is located in the Cohasset Flood Plain Zone.

Bid opening 12/30

Selectmen planned to advertise for bids from architects this week for new Beechwood Fire Station planning specifications. Bids will be opened at the Dec. 30 Selectmen's meeting. A Nov. 30 Special Town Meeting voted $3,000 to draw up plans for a new station.

Wrong size flags

Ever since the recent rash of flagnappings in Cohasset, residents and nonresidents alike have been donating flags to Selectmen. Unfortunately, they're all too small.

A Mrs. Epstein from North Scituate offered a flag last week. Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said yet another individual said he may be able to supply a proper size flag for the Town Common poll. And flag fundraiser Clark Chatterton said he too has gotten some calls.

Monday morning we learned that the Cohasset Village Fair donated an 8x12 ft. flag (from Chairman Betsy Stevenson's White Elephant table) to the Town. It will be given to Selectmen this week.

Flagnappers have been invited to return the stolen flags, no questions asked.

Sportsmen's Club

Selectmen have their suspicions that the Sportsmen Club on 3A is "defunct." In addition, they feel it's being used as a private residence.

"We should find out who's living there, smoke comes out of the chimney every morning," Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said last week.

In 1964 Town Meeting voted to have Selectmen enter into a lease agreement with the Club, which proposed to offer residents/members various sporting opportunities.

The Club is located on 97,087 square feet of town-owned land near Winter Gardens. Selectmen said they are investigating the matter. When asked what their real interest in the land was, they said it would make a nice cemetery.

According to Clark, Selectmen will take the matter up with the Sportsmen's Club early in January.

County bill

James J. Collins, Chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners, announced today the filing of a bill with the legislature authorizing the county to undertake functions currently performed by municipalities.

Collins stated "with the advent of Proposition 2½ it appears that some of the vital functions now performed by towns may be better handled on a regional basis in the future for less cost."

The bill is written as permissive legislation which means that the communities will have approval over which functions, if any, they wish handled by the County.

According to Collins "several towns have shown an interest in this approach and might consider transferring some needed services such as weights and measures, harbormasters, youth coordination, planning responsibilities, some police and fire duties, dog control, library duties and recreational responsibilities, etc. to County management.

There may be jobs combined with some reduced services, but obviously the key to making it work will be to prove to the towns that any new responsibilities given to the County will have to be at reduced cost. Our objective will be to help soften the impact of Proposition 2½ by finding a better method of providing needed services to our 625,000 residents."

Depressing

passing her figure and dance tests with excellent ratings.

From her letters it appears she has continued to skate through life, while I continue to meet my share of barriers.

While in the early years of my marriage I was struggling with my first home and a growing family, she and her husband decided to take a year to do Europe.

While I was learning the basic rules of cooking in Hingham, she was studying how to make a Linzertorte in Austria.

When I was taking my first sewing classes at night school in the Hingham Public Schools, she was scooping up all sorts of "nifty buys" from Rome, Paris and even London in which, according to that year's letter, she spent a good deal of time at the House of Liberty.

Our child bearing years more or less coincided and so, it was a surprise when she reported in one of her Christmas letters that she had decided to go to med school and had returned to college to take the prerequisites, Latin and Chemistry.

Never one to be daunted by two toddlers and an unexpected move to another state, she of course made dean's list.

Eventually she graduated from one of the best medical schools, although she did write, one year, that she found her residency "a bit demanding."

From this year's letter, she and her husband appear to have found the optimum balance between her practice and his work in space research. Their children, too, appear to be slated for nothing less than greatness. Each received numerous school, athletic and community awards.

And of course, they have never lost their love for traveling and each year manage to discover far off exotic places that somehow I have never heard of.

Each year, it becomes increasingly difficult to respond to my friend. But recently, I was relieved to find out that I am not alone in my dilemma. I happened to meet a mutual friend who is also a recipient of the annual newsletter.

"Tell me something," she said, half seriously, "what do you ever write back?"

Editorial

...a former shoplifter

Flubs are funny, except when they're your own and when, as a weekly, you get to hear about them for six days straight.

Five Mariner editors get to share their gaffs and goofs on Mondays and Tuesdays of every week, when they gather to make sense of their newspapers on the drawing boards.

The Scituate editor remembered a police report incident in which a fradulent check was taken to the hospital...the time a vial of life program sponsored by the Scituate Council on Aging was headlined Vile of Life. There was the time the Scituate Mariner had a story about residents going into Boston to see the Pope under a police report headline...

On another occasion, in the Marshfield Around Town column, the columnist had a couple returning from a holiday weekend on the Vineyard, except she wasn't the right she and the right she was furious, not to mention the right he who was apologetic about being wrong and seeing it in print.

We also had a hunter bagging six geese when the limit was two. Later he half factiously wrote us a letter from Puerto Rico saying he had no choice but to get out of the country.

Last week the publisher of the Hingham Mariner was told for the zillionth time that his dumbo editor had spelled the word Maryknoll wrong every chance he got. Maryknoll (Seminary) has no e, yet dumbo editor gave it an e at least five time in last week's front page story, a decision of the South Shore Hospital to not buy the Maryknoll property.

Photographs can kill you when they don't go with the right caption. The Marshfield Mariner editor still shudders over the mixup that confused one photograph of the newly installed Lions Club officers with another of some elderly retarded gentlemen. The Scituate Lions Club shudders too.

One of our advertisers recently tried to tell customers a grand prize would be offered at its raffle. Only we said it would be a grand piano. And one political candidate almost (we caught it) was quoted as saying he had worked as a shoplifter (he was a ship-fitter) during his college years.

To those discerning readers kind enough to point out our sins, we...ah, say thanks.

Meanwhile, the publisher has promised to increase next year's budget to include at least one more profreader.

Future of landfill is big concern

Letters

To the Editor:

A contract for the design of the sewerage system has been negotiated between the Town and Metcalf and Eddy, our Consultants, for the design of the plant, laterals, influent and effluent conduits outfall, pump stations, and all other requirements necessary.

Although the proposed contract is acceptable to both parties, it will not be signed until the Step 2 grant is approved — not expected before Feb. 1981.

Last July and August, M&E and its sub-contractors, conducted oceanographic, biological current flow studies, and took bottom samples off-shore in the area off Pleasant Beach — the proposed site of the outfall location.

All the data collected is being analyzed and tabulated, and a complete report will be included in the Step 2 design program.

At the Sewer Commissioners meeting of November 25, 1980 it was voted to change the name of the Citizens Advisory Committee to Wastewater Advisory Committee.

As of this date the committee has been brought up to strength and is being reorganized and a list of tasks is being drafted for its consideration.

As in the past, it is expected the committee will prove to be a valuable asset to the Commission and to the Town in aiding all of us to provide to us the best and most cost effective sewerage system that can be designed for Cohasset's particular needs.

The membership of the Committee consists of: Anne Churchill, Ralph Dormitzer, Robert Garvey, James Froio and Edward Dillon.

During the past few weeks, various members of the Commission and staff have visited several sewage treatment plants in Mass. and Conn. Each plant visited used a different method of treatment and sludge disposal.

The knowledge of how each type plant operates along with the advantages and disadvantages of each will greatly assist the Advisory group and the Commission in reaching our final decision.

Of great concern to the Commission is the rather uncertain future of Cohasset's Sanitary Landfill operation since it is planned by M&E and the Commission that this area could be used for disposal of dewatered sludge from the treatment plant.

Other disposal methods are under consideration as possible alternatives.

Face your responsibilities for once

To the Editor:
Dear MAN:

I address you as Man since I do not know your name. The Cohasset Police told us it was a Man who reported the accident to them and we are taking them at their word. The police could not have been kinder or more understanding to us.

This past Saturday morning you drove by Pond Street and Woodland Drive and struck a dog with your car. You did not stop to inquire at any of the houses nearby as to the ownership of the injured dog.

You drove on down Pond Street and reported the accident to the Police Department. You informed the Police that you did not have time to stop and aid the dog because you were rushing to work.

A policeman located the dog, after the animal had dragged itself behind a home trying to reach, no doubt, his master. A kind neighbor came by and identified the dog to the policeman.

The policeman came to our home and told us Commodore had been injured by a car and that we should get him to a vet as quickly as possible.

While my husband and children rushed to get dressed, the policeman returned and sat with the injured animal. He also radioed ahead to the vet to let them know we were on the way with an injured animal.

My husband and children returned from the vet without Commodore. The vet said she would try all that was possible to save the dog.

The children, my husband and I sat by the telephone and prayed that Commodore would live. Our hopes were shattered an hour later when the phone rang and the news was passed on that Commodore had died. Our joyful Thanksgiving holiday had turned into one of sorrow.

If you are wondering why I am writing this open letter to you in the newspaper, it is because my family and I are overwhelmed at your callous behavior.

We cannot believe that a "man" could not take the time out of his busy schedule to aid and assist an animal that he had just struck with his car. Would you have been just as busy had you struck a child and killed him or her?

Is your work so important that it meant leaving a family pet to die in the street? Surely, the job has not completely consumed your time that you can't break away for one minute to make a phone call and say, "I'm sorry." Have you really reached the age where you are referred to as a "man" and not yet learned responsibility?

It is very difficult for my husband and I to explain to five young children that a "man" killed their pet and yet does not have the gumption to come forward and say, "I'm responsible, I'm sorry."

Maybe this letter will help you to come forward and face your responsibilities. Try and be a "man" for once in your life.

Sadly,
Pat O'Connor

Chief commends auxiliary officers

[ED.'S NOTE: Cohasset Selectmen received the following letter from Police Chief John DeBassio at their meeting last week.)

Gentlemen:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I commend the actions and cooperation of the Cohasset Police Auxiliary.

Your attention is directed to Saturday, November 22, 1980 when Officers Andrews and Small responded to a request to establish a stake-out at the Cohasset Auto Body on Route 3A. Efforts were being made to apprehend persons responsible for the theft of auto parts and mechanics tools valued at over one thousand dollars.

Their attention to duty led to a series of observations which were communicated to the Cohasset Police Department and facilitated the capture of three local juveniles. Further investigation by Officers Doyle and Laugelle resulted in the return of all previously stolen property and the identification of all parties involved in the commission of the crime.

Since Officer Andrews and Small serve without compensation, it is fitting and proper that they be recognized for their timely and professional services to the citizens of our community and the Cohasset Police Department. I consider the services of the Auxiliary Police an essential part of the enforcement effort of the Town of Cohasset and offer this commendation for your attention and any action you may deem proper or appropriate.

Respectfully,
John DeBassio, Chief
Cohasset Police Department

Dean's with 'Betty'

To the Editor:

Mariner readers may find it amusing as I did to hear that the same Gifford Dean who could oft be found with salt on his brow among the ledges and race courses off Cohasset's shores, can now be found adrift off the balmy shores of West Palm Beach, Florida in his 27' powerboat, Betty Lou.

Prime time for men par for the course

(Ed. note: The names were changed to protect the innocent and not-so-innocent. All comments, however, are accurate and were made to Mrs. McDonough.)

By Claire McDonough

My friend Patience offered to teach me how to golf. "Great, I told her. How about Saturday morning?"

"Saturday morning's out. Club rules," she replied.

"That makes sense. You regular, accomplished golfers wouldn't want a bunch of beginners underfoot during prime time, so to speak." I admitted.

"It's not that exactly," Patience said. "Only men get to golf on Saturday morning."

Only men get to golf on Saturday morning? In this age of equal opportunity? In this bastion of liberty? This bulwark of freedon? Surely she was pulling my putter!

Not so. "It's the same everywhere," she assured me. "The guys say we'd slow them down."

But doesn't a slower golfer always let a faster one play through?

"Yes but, well...I guess they just don't want us there." Her eyes narrowed. "Come to think of it, I'm not sure how we ever started letting them get away with this. The Mariner should write an article about it."

Right.

I phoned one of our local country clubs. I asked if I could join if I had three sponsors.

"Of course you can." I was told.

I didn't exactly say so, but I hinted that I was an expert golfer. Could I golf on Saturday morning, the only time that was really convenient for me?

"Certainly not," the response was immediate. "That's when the men golf."

How come? Because, I was told, women can golf any time through the week. Men have to work for a living.

I was flattered by the assumption that my face is my fortune, but pointed out that I, too, work full time.

"Maybe so," I was told, "but men work to support their families. Women just work for a hobby."

Oh, really?

"Anyway," the voice hurried on, "the manis the primary member. The first person in a family to join is the primary member. The others don't pay full price."

"My husband doesn't golf," I said sweetly. "Do I get a reduced rate because I'm a woman?"

"Certainly not."

"Then as primary member I can play Saturday mornings, right?"

"Of course not. That's when the men play."

Did that mean the men couldn't play on Saturday afternoon?

Au contraire. "The men can play any time. They're the primary members."

Why did I have this feeling of deja vu?

I spoke to my friend Alfonse, golfer and all around sexist.

"Don't blame me," he protested. "It wasn't my idea. It's always been that way."

But did he think it was a good idea?

"Darn right. Who wants women on the golf course on Saturdkay mornings?"

I called Letitia, another golfing friend. "We tried to protest it for a while," she told me. "They finally did let us play on Saturday morning. But the men made us feel uncomfortable, and we stopped."

How did the men make them uncomfortable?

"Oh, little things. Like hitting golf balls at us. After a while you start feeling unwelcome."

I brought the subject up at a family dinner. Polarization was immediate. The guys felt it was only fitting and proper that men should be able to tee off any time they want without having women around. The gals became teed off on the spot.

Harold, another friend, thought he had the solution.

I used to belong to a combination athletic and drinking club," he mused. "We let women belong. The only thing was, they couldn't go in the front door. They used to have more fun trying to sneak in the front way. Now the rule has been changed and they don't have to use the back door any more. They don't have nearly as much fun now."

Is that right, Harold. You were doing it all for us? You wanted us to have fun? Well, don't worry yoiur dear little head. I have a feeling we're going to have fun with this one anyway.

Christopher Abbruzzese recently received one of 66 varsity letters and a numeral as a result of his membership on the Bowdoin Football Team. Congratualations, Chris!

Nicholas Berents, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Berents, Jr. was awarded a varsity letter for the fall soccer season at the Belmont Hill School, Belmont.

Berents, a junior, played second goalie for the team which this year won the Dummere Cup which is awarded each year to the champions of the Southern Division of the Independent Secondary School Soccer League.

The school also competed in the finals of the Stewart Cup Tourney, involving eight leading private secondary schools throughout the New England area.

Best wishes to Ethel Lillard who celebrates her 98th birthday on Dec. 11. Mrs. Lillard lived in Cohasset until very recently and was an active member of the First Parish (Unitarian) Church. As the oldest living graduate of Smith College, she recently attended her 70th reunion.

For friends who may wish to send her brithday greetings, her present address is The Westonian, 135 North Avenue, Weston 02193.

Volunteers are still needed at the Deer Hill School: help in the library, science program and IMS correcting is requested. Contact Ann Bowdoin, 383-9205, or the school office, 383-6115.

Dr. Roger Pompeo has completed the continuing education requirements necessary to retain active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors.

The requirements called for members to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years.

Abigail and Elizabeth Hobson both recently attended the annual Wheelock College Open House in Boston recently. The event featured workshops, presentations and panel discussions.

Jane Bergwall Shattuck of Rice Island (yes, that's in Cohasset) was recently selected to serve as steering committee member of the Simmons College Program for renovation and income development.

Ms. Shattuck, a 1948 Simmons graduate, has been named cochairman of the Committee for Planned Giving and Bequests.

Congratulations to Connie Grant who was accepted at Hamilton College in New York last week!

Wish we had known about it sooner...earlier this week Notes & Quotes generously agreed to make Dec. 8 and 9 Osgood School Days at their store. Parents were invited to choose from a selection of children's books, toys and records — with 15 per cent of the total purchase price going to the Communications Council.

Bartow fish story

A Hingham resident phoned COHASSET-FISH on Saturday and said, "Do you have any mussels?" The FISH volunteer who was manning the 383-6600 emergency assistance line, had to leave the phone to compose herself before she could respond to the inquiry.

The caller was not a crank, she simply forgot the name of "that fish store in Cohasset" and was desperate to have some mussels for lunch.

"I beg your pardon, was that muscles you were looking for?" the FISH volunteer asked. "Mussels, you know, like clams," the lady replied.

The volunteer politely, through her giggles, told the woman that COHASSET-FISH only pulled muscles for emergencies — transportation, babysitting, housekeeping. FISH also tries to provide daily telephone checks on people living alone or assistance to invalids and elderly for shopping or transportation.

The organization's name and logo are derived from the fish as an early Christian symbol.

Call FISH, 383-6600, for emergency help. Call a fish store for mussels!

As told to Karin Bartow by a famished fish friend.

Hockey coach in control

The team to watch in this upcoming winter season will be without a doubt the Cohasset hockey team.

If anyone on the team was asked what the main problem with last year's team was, they would surely mention the strained coach-player relationship.

This problem is solved.

Tom Burnell has taken over the coaching reins. Burnell is already noted for deadly practice sessions, but he is the type of man that even Bobby Orr would not question on hockey techniques.

The Skippers have seven returning forwards including Don O'Neil, Joe Becker, Sean Curran, Mike Nedrow, Jack McNeil, Barron Salvador, Danny Bowen and Andy Pottenger.

Defense will be the Skipper's weak spot early on until 3-time all-league junior Dominic Campedelli recovers from a back injury.

Gary Ormiston will be returning and Rich Evans will probably drop back from forward to defense.

The goalie spot will also be a tremendous strong point for the Skippers.

Last year's starting goaltender Bill Hollis is set for action as well as senior Mike Jones and juniors Steve Bowen and Scott Ripley.

The Junior Varsity will be under the tutelage of Coach Rick Graham.

The Skipper's first game will be Saturday againt Avon.

Players love Amanda

There's a new girl in Town.

Although she's a recent arrival, she drove the entire Skipper Football squad goo-goo with her coo-coos this year.

Having arrived on the scene around Halloween, she naturally couldn't have made it to every game. But when she did show up, oh baby! Skippers never

369 out for winter sports

In spite of some tough academic loads, like lemmings, CHS students show up in droves to participate in sports throughout the school year.

But their impressive numbers and interest, never ceases to amaze school officials.

Last week 369 students (46 per cent of the 800 member student population) signed up for wrestling, cheerleading, ice hockey, etc.

This year CHS has five more winter teams than Hull, its largest rival, and none of the 369 students are participating in more than one sport.

For the record, 75 girls tried out for cheerleading. Boys' varsity basketball attracted 30 students, 18 tried out for the freshman team, and 54 7th and 8th graders turned out for junior high basketball.

Girls' 9th grade JV and varsity basketball teams attracted 50 sportswomen, while the girls' 7th and 8th grade team attracted 30 students.

For ice hockey (two teams) 48 applied. And 40 boys tried out for wrestling (there are no cuts in this sport). Gymnastics attracted 24 women.

played better.

Sunday night at the Cohasset Gridiron banquet at CHS, "Amanda's men" gave her an Amanda football, dated 11/8/80 — in honor of the Cohasset-Abington game win! The Gridiron Club gave her a cuddly Teddy bear and a $50 savings bond, in honor of her play-making role for Skippers this year.

Amanda Leone is the four month old daughter of CHS Skipper Football Coach John (and Nancy) Leone of North Carver.

In other Gridiron news, Jack McNeil, Joe Becker and Paul Buckley were chosen captains of next year's Skipper squad. And awards handed out were as follows:

Senior Robert Fessler received the Unsung Hero Award; Junior Joe Becker got Most Valuable Player and Best Back. And Senior Mike Jones got Best Lineman.

The Cohasset News Company Thanksgiving Day trophy went to Tim Libby.

Cohasset's T assessment to go up $7,000

Cohasset's $146,000 a year MBTA assessment will go up another $7,000 before year-end, as a result of a recently-negotiated weekend vote of the state legislature to give the MBTA $31 million to pull it through its financial woes.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R- Cohasset, Hingham and Hull) is pleased with the new deal, which while it won't save taxpayers any money this year, will be "A step in the right direction."

The brief close-down of the T over the weekend appeared to cause Cohasset residents little distress. But had the close-down continued into the work week, many residents would have had to make different travel arrangements.

Cohasset residents appear to travel to work on a hop-skip-jump arrangement...with some residents catching the MBTA-subsidized Hingham boat, some driving to Quincy where they catch the T. While yet another group of commuters are faithful Plymouth/Brockton Bus Line patrons.

Rep. Murray said MBTA bills have already been filed, which will give MBTA management more rights in overseeing The T. And beginning Jan. 1, the MBTA will have a whole new budget.

"We're going to be able to cut out pension overtime. And the MBTA Advisory Board will hold the line on salaries. Salaries can't be cut because of current contracts. But the pay raises four times a year are out," Rep. Murray said.

Over the weekend, the House tried to suspend Prop. 2½ for the MBTA budget, but the Senate put 2½ back in..."Where it should be," Rep. Murrary said.

While the House initially supported a 50/50 payment split between the State and the Towns, Rep. Murray urged that the State fund the entire $31 million. Ultimately, parties agreed on the 75/25 State/Town split.

South Shore Art Center announces winners

The South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset currently has on exhibit a Blue Ribbon Show of the Center's own Gallery artists and members.

The Best of Show Award was presented to Syma Komarin of Hingham for her original and whimsical porcelain Bell to Summon the Force.

The Blue Ribbon in Watercolor went to Claffy Williams of Cohasset for her subdued, semi-abstract rendering of Alone.

The Blue Ribbon in pastel was claimed by Lisbeth Koopmen Wyman of Weymouth for her grandiose Grandmother's Wedding Dress.

Douglas Orr of Cohasset won his Blue Ribbon for Night Window a colorful oil done in a semi-impressionistic style.

The Blue Ribbon in Acrylic was awarded to Karen Danstedt of Weymouth for her realistic Summer Still Life.

And finally, the Blue Ribbon in Photography went to Gail Bryan for her eerily realistic polaroid, Prison Series 1.

This is the Center's Christmas Show and will be hanging until Jan. 5. There are 53 artists exhibiting in all, ranging from abstract to realism, including photography, painting and three-dimensional. The public is invited to come to the Gallery Monday through Friday, 12 to 4 and on Saturday from 10 to 1. The Art Center serves communities from Quincy to Cape Cod.

In the spirit of the holidays, the Art Center has gift certificates available for Christmas.

Illustrators delight Deer Hill

Fourth, fifth and sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School were recently treated to an exciting program last Tuesday by the Illustrators Sudio of Cohasset arranged by the Communications Council.

Four professional artists discussed their work, touching upon what art skills they use, how they get some of their ideas and showed the students the many different areas they can work in if they like to draw.

Chris Conley, director of the Studio, discussed her specialty — fashion illustration. In presenting high fashion, she told the students that you have to be good at drawing people and clothes and have to be able to create an image that will make people want to buy the clothes. She said she uses pen and ink, pencil and felt tip pen in her work.

James Tringale, photographer, works with art directors who organize advertising for clients. His photographs help sell ideas, like putting money in the bank presenting slogans like "Saving for the fun of it," with pictures. He delighted the kids with a photo board of a family biking together that was shot at the Deer Hill School. He explained that he takes several polaroid shots first to allow the art director to select the one he likes best and then takes the final picture.

Irena Roman, an award winning illustrator of books and magazines, presented many of her works as did Pat Collins, who's humorous illustrations for a Weight Watchers booklet and children's books made grownup art work seem like a lot of fun.

Another member of the Illustrators Studio, Joan Drescher, gave a program for the Kindergarten classes at the Osgood School on Thursday. The program was brought to the school on behalf of the Communications Council.

Ms. Drescher is a well known illustrator of children's books and has also written several of her own.

She showed the children several stories that she'd illustrated and told them how she developed some of the sketches she used. Her children are often models for stories about youngsters, and a stray dog in their neighborhood became the subject of a story on a hospital dog.

A lady she knows in Hingham was the model for Nonna; she explained how she used a paper towel to make the stucco in an illustration of a church. She told the group that it is very hard to get illustrations in a book to look the same throughout.

The children were fascinated with an on-the-spot drawing from a book she wrote and illustrated, The Marvelous Mess, which she explained was undertaken to try and get her son to keep his room clean! Each student gave her a bit of "mess" to add to the picture, which she colored in and presented to the class.

Senior 'mellerdrammer' with modern twist

On Dec. 11, 12 and 13, the Class of 1981 at CHS will be presenting Dirty Work in High Places, a comedy in two acts by Tim Kelly, directed by Ron Emmons.

The story of the play follows along the lines of an old-fashioned "mellerdrammer," but has a modern twist. Gentle Grimmes (played by Timmy Libby) is a disreputable rogue who, as president of the largest company in town, invents a smog machine which he plans to sell to developing nations so they can be "civilized."

He spies on his competitors, cheats on his income tax, even dispatches a company traitor (Caroline Wampole) by droppiner her in a paper shredder.

He has a small army of sub-villains (John Muir, Lindsey Gilmore, Koren Lipsett) who carry out his dastardly designs in hilarious fashion.

His pet project is ousting some senior citizens (Jerry White, Jeanne Donahue, Caroline Bonner and Brenda Birmann) from their cottages so he can build high rise apartments.

To accomplish this task, he plans to force the lovely heroine, Little Saccharin (Katie Smalzel) to be his bride.

Enter Dauntless Crusader (Pat Duffy), a consumer advocate who plans to expose the villain for what he really is. Complications ensue, including wild chase scenes, comic election rallies, long-lost parents, dirty tricks and young love.

Other characters such as Baby Bob (Dean Brown), Baby Alice (Barbie Gurnis), Ms. Shabby (Gail Smart), and Madame Presidente (Pam Johnson) lend humor and diversity to the play, leaving the audience helpless with laughter.

Also in the cast are: Heidi Brown, Donna Chisolm, Hannah Clinton, Kim Tollotsom, Michael Glasfeld, Steve Saleski, and Joe Whelan. Jon Antoine will be playing the piano, and Leslie Collins is the stage manager.

Tickets can be purchased in advance for $2, or at the door for $2.50. Show time will be at 8 p.m. SHARP, on all three nights, at Cohasset Junior Senior High School.

Chief's hand noticed in police operations

Over the past two weeks several police officers and two auxiliary police officers used their police skills, both individually and collectively, to wrap up some nasty business in Town.

It appears the police department is starting to click, and like much in Cohasset, or anywhere, this rebirth appears to be the result of a singular touch...that of Police Chief John DeBassio.

Last week Officer Robert Jackson nabbed an armed robber from Weymouth and won a commendation from both the Chief and Selectmen. While Auxiliary Police Officers Albert Andrews and Jon Small helped to apprehend Route 3A car part thieves...all juveniles and all Cohasset residents.

This week, Officer Gerard Doyle solved a burglary on Pleasant Street. Persistence, good questioning and double-checking resulted in a Quincy juvenile being arraigned in Quincy Juvenile Court, Tuesday, and a 17 year-old Milton man being arraigned Monday.

Both youths signed a full confession for Doyle, and returned some of the articles taken from a Pleasant Street home. The burglary was done while the residents were sleeping.

Sunday night, Officer Richard Fairbain observed a car cutting another vehicle off on 3A. When a siren signal to stop didn't work, he chased the operator up Beechwood Street, where the operator's car landed on its side.

The operator crawled out and ran. Fairbain chased him through backyards and bushes, then radioed the man's description to headquarters. A while later Officer Robert Jackson spotted the subject near the Texaco gas station, where the 17 year-old Scituate youth was arrested for operating without a license, operating a vehicle without authority and operating under the influence of alcohol.

The Scituate youth had stolen a Scituate Police Officer's private car. He was arraigned Monday in Quincy District Court.

Seven year-old Mathew Brown would probably like some more Star Wars figures. His sister, Kate (4 years) would be satisfied with surprises.

Breakfast with Santa

Mr. and Mrs. S. Claus will join children and grownups alike for pancakes and sausages at the Cohasset Community Center Saturday, Dec. 20 at 9:30 a.m.

Orange juice, coffee and milk will also be served. Santa said he will have surprises and treats for the children. Mrs. Claus will lead a Christmas sing. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brennock are responsible for bringing the Claus' to Cohasset.

Only 100 tickets will be sold. Tickets may be purchased at the Community Center weekdays from 9 a.m. to noon. The price: $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children. Call 383-0088 for further information.

Seniors make districts

CHS musical seniors, Ted Durant and Kath O'Brien were informed recently they had earned positions in the South East District Music Festival for 1980.

Ted plays French horn and Kathy plays clarinet and saxophone in the concert band and the jazz band.

Commentary

The odyssey is over

In this season of joy and thanksgiving it seems fitting that two of our own, Gerald and Diana Green, have returned home to us. Their odyssey is finally over.

It ended Monday when a Plymouth County judge found them guilty of contempt but deserving of no additional punishment. They had already paid a price more costly than justice could demand.

We have all suffered with the Greens; those of us who are parents, more than most. Day by day we watched as their child grew more ill, as their decisions grew more crucial, as their options grew more limited. Day by day, the urgency of their drama mirrored the passion of our fears.

None of us honestly knows what he'll do when this game of life grows fierce. We think about our children dying and all the lights in the world seem to go out. But then another thought races through the mind, the lights come back on, and we briefly look across the room to assure ourselves that thoughts are not reality. We see our child and, thank God, he doesn't have leukemia, he isn't dying...he isn't Chad Green.

I have often wondered whether I would have had the strength to follow my inner lights down paths that seemed so hopeless, so friendless, so endless. How easy it would have been to lie to myself; to say "Yes, the doctors, the judges; they must know, they must be right." I wonder if I could have chosen the one path most strewn with obstacles and legal consequences; would it have seemed unavoidable to me?

I have to believe, as a parent myself, that there are higher laws that must govern our actions, and that those laws will not always conform to the rules and practices of a society. Those higher laws are written into our roles as parents, as friends, as educators, as doctors. We'd do well to remember that Joseph and Mary fled to Egypt to save the infant Jesus from a lawful edict issued by the lawful ruler of their land.

The issue in the chad Green case was never who was right and who was wrong. The irony of this whole tragic affair lies in the fact that no one was wrong. Each party — the doctors, the judges, the parents — sought to do what was best within the limits of their own perspective.

The doctors saw a sick child's body that had little chance to survive without certain painful treatments; the courts saw the life of a citizen threatened by the benign and misguided actions of his parents; the parents saw only one slender chance to save the life, and protect the spirit, of their child.

For any of those parties to have acted in any way other than the way they did — having those beliefs — would have been wrong; cowardly; an abandonment of everything they should have stood for. The roles of the drama were set by circumstances beyond anyone's control. It only remained for all the participants to play their parts well. And they did.

The Greens will never fully recover from the loss of the child they loved. Nothing any of us can do will ever diminish that sense of loss. It only remains for us, as neighbors, as friends, as compassionate human beings, to give them the space they need so that the healing may begin.

For some time, we've had the lamp hanging high in the window. Happily, we can now take it down. The odyssey is over. Our friends have found their way home.

your life better," he said, "is what's in here (ourselves)." He listed all the familiar stops along the way to that discovery that we make as adolescents and adults: from Santa Claus, to our parents, to our peers, sometimes school, drugs, alcohol, college, religion, maybe more drugs, alcohol, marriage, a job, divorce and another marriage, new job, more school.... and sometime around the age of 40, we realize that "Santa really does exist, but he's not the guy in the red suit who comes down the chimney, but what's inside of us that makes it all better!

"First," O'Brien says, "believe and convince yourself that there isn't any such thing as a magical, absolute happiness, then you can help convince your kids." Tell your children, yes, you have a right to be happy, but it's not going to be new toys that will do it. He suggests that we begin to talk about what Christmas and the holidays really mean, either in a religious sense, or in terms of a special time when people get together, when relationships are renewed.

When we dust off the advent calendar on December 1, our children have already had a couple of months worth of pressure put upon them by every parent's adversary, television advertisers.

O'Brien suggested that a trip to the toy store can be a valuable learning experience for children when they see, for example, the tiny train that looks huge on TV. Somehow the promised happier life with a new game or toy on TV loses it's validity when kids realize they are being conned.

He suggests that children are "set up" both in school and at home, by a routine or rules that change unexpectedly. We need to help children understand and adjust to what's going on.

Limiting and structuring our children's schedules is one way of easing the frantic pace of the weeks before Christmas and it will also relieve stress on parents who try to keep everybody going in 10 different directions, including themselves.

Parents at the meeting complained about the deluge of Christmas specials on TV, often aired at a late hour for younger children. "Tell them they can't watch them," O'Brien offered flatly. "Tell them it's too late. You won't like it. It's sad."

One parent asked how you answer a five year old's request for a very expensive toy? O'Brien suggested that you tell the child to go ahead and ask for it, but also tell him there are no guarantees that Santa will bring it. "If you can't afford it, Santa Claus probably can't either!"

We've all had our children ask us if we believe in Santa Claus. What to do? O'Brien says, "My preference is to let it happen without making a big deal about it." Tell them you believe, if you do; no big deal.

O'Brien says he feels many children know intellectually that this (Santa Claus, reindeer, etc.) is all nonsense, but like himself as a boy, they don't dare want to admit it because, "Boy you may be wrong!"

And that's just fine, as long as we don't allow our children, or ourselves, to look for some "absolute, magical happiness" through something external to make our lives better.

Alas, 'castle' misses house tour again

My feelings are going to be hurt again. I can sense it. I know they aren't going to ask me if my house can be included on the annual Tour of Gracious Homes.

Happens every year. Some organization of women who know good stuff when they see it arranges a tour of elegant homes. This, like the Ms. America Pageant, will only get my attention one more time. They've overlooked my house beautiful once too often.

And I'm not sure why. 'Cause I've fancied how it would be should I be anointed bountiful hostess of my manor for a tour group. There's that fantasy of my drifting down a twining staircase, which is bedecked with garlands of greens. Dressed, I would be, not in my brown bathrobe (though I suspect that's been held against me too long), but in a long taffeta gown of holiday plaid. Trouble is, last time I tried to make a grand entrance down my stairs to a waiting group of committee women, I fell the length of them. I recovered, but the others were laughing so hard, they slighted their committee objectives.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

I'm at a loss to know what has caused my home to be erased from the list. Is it the pile of clean clothes at the foot of the straight stairs, waiting to be taken up...and waiting and waiting? Could it be the full wastebaskets waiting to come down? Was it my nail polish remover and vitamins sitting neatly beside one another on the kitchen window sill? Perhaps it is the lack of craft displayed in my 12 year-old homemade Advent calendar on the kitchen door, or the dog's water dish. Maybe it was the assortment of tennis balls he brings in the house and leaves in the dining room.

As annually as the house tours I've bought the leading women's magazines and scanned them for decorating ideas. One's fireplace mantle, for example, ought to be draped in holly or pine boughs with candelabra at one end. With my finesse for decorating I fear I'd only ignite the house, rather than the admiration of the house selection committee.

Certainly I'd make concessions for the tour day. I'd throw a blanket over the garage, hold the tour by muted flashlight and insure the stereo would be playing a bit of the "Messiah," instead of Willie Nelson's "On the Road Again."

I'd make certain the toothpaste cover was on the tube and I'd take down that poster of Ilie Nastase still pasted on the flowered wallpaper of a former resident's room. I'd put the dog down cellar and pretend he'd snarl if anyone opened that door.

True, there might be some snide comments about the piles of leaves on our lawn, which are apparently in the hands of a study committee. Hurl a little holly and plastic poinsettias here and there and who'll notice. We all know enough not to boil turkey bones in the big kettle the day of the tour. And if a group of fellows are lolling on the living room floor, watching the Patriots and eating popcorn, they'll know enough to share.

Never mind. I'm bound to be passed over again. They're not looking for a lived-in home. They want a model one and I don't think any of us could last eight hours as models of Home and Garden dwellers.

I'll stick to my drop-in tour status. Friends know the Christmas cookies they get at my house aren't shaped like angels. They couldn't tell you what shape they are, but that's because my oven runs 25 degrees ahead of its time.

It's back to my bathrobe for holiday allure and gracious casual receiving of friends. But that doesn't mean I won't be creating holiday spirit. I've already got a pile of tennis balls spray painted in polyurethane gold leaf. Wait till you see my front door this year!

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

"Tell me what you eat and I'll tell you what you are," a philosopher noted. Just so we don't turn into a nation of food junkies, it's always wise for the man of the house to see there's a new cookbook under the Christmas tree. He can read and drool, Mom can try out a few of the recipes and youngsters may be inspired to discover the fun of cooking. Looking around in Welch's gourmet corner the other day I noticed one of my favorite cookbooks displayed prominently and would urge you to peek when next in Scituate. "Cohasset Entertains" is a collection of outstanding recipes from members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and their friends. Of particular interest at this holiday season is their section entitled "Gifts We Make or Bake" and there you'll find recipes for cookies, candies, special breads and coffee cakes, chutneys, cordials and much, much more. A perfect hostess gift would be a jar of Bobbi Cox's

HOLIDAY FRUIT SAUCE

1 can apple pie filling
1 jar maraschino cherries, chopped
1 can pineapple chunks
1 jar orange marmalade
1/2 tsp. ground giner

Mix all ingredients together and put in small jar. Perfect for hostess gifts. Easier to make in double batch. Store in the refrigerator. Delicious served on pound cake or ice cream.

A fine cookbook is said to be a perpetual feast and when a book goes into its second printing, you know it has to be good. Such is the case with the Marshfield Newcomers Club's "Delectable Collectibles." Mary Volonino is the gal to call if you would like to order a cookbook which offers a range of recipes from gourmet to easy. If you are planning a holiday party, their chapter on "Beverages and Appetizers" will be of interest, for there you'll find such recipes as Cathy McClellan's

CHEESE KRISPIES

8 oz. grated sharp Cheddar cheese
2 sticks butter, or margarine
2 c. flour
2 c. Rice Krispies
1/2 tsp. salt
Dash red pepper, optional

Cream cheese and butter. Add flour, salt, pepper and Rice Krispies. Roll in a ball (about marshmallow size). Place on cookie sheet and flatten with spoon. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 min. These can be made ahead of time and frozen. Just place on cookie sheet and heat at 350 for 10 min.

Certainly not a cookbook, but a great comfort in a household emergency, is "Mary Ellen's Best of Helpful Hints." Chock-full of ways of solving household problems, you'll find out that shaving cream or club soda is an instant spot remover; fish thawed in milk has a fresh-caught flavor and candles may be made dripless by freezing them. If you want gravy that is smooth as silk, keep a jar with a mixture of equal parts of flour and cornstarch. Put 3 or 4 tablespoons of this mixture in another jar and add some water. Shake and in a few minutes you'll have a smooth paste for gravy. If your potatoes are overcooked and soggy when milk is added, sprinkle with dry powdered milk for the fluffiest mashed potatoes ever. If you poke a hole in the center of hamburgers you are shaping, the center will cook quickly and when the hamburgers are done, the holes are gone. To clean your blender, fill part way with hot water and add a drop of detergent. Cover and turn it on for a few seconds. Rinse and drain dry. Before washing your meat grinder, run a piece of bread through it. Cranberries will grind very neatly when frozen if you wash the berries, pat dry and freeze in plastic bag until ready for use. Store your brown sugar in a plastic bag. Wrap tightly and place in coffee can with snap-on lid. Marshmallows will not dry out if stored in the freezer. Simply cut with scissors when ready to use.

Sunday River Makes Snow All Season Long

Sunday River has the ability to operate 80% of lift capacity with no natural snow. In 1975, there was skiing with the goblins on Halloween. Over 31,000 feet of pipe line the Ecstasy-Cascades, Lower Lazy River, Sunday Punch, and the Mixing Bowl from top to bottom, a total of over 60 acres covering better than $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles of trails. Typically, we make snow during the entire season—

...early to get started
...in the middle to make it better
...and in the end to keep it longer

Sunday River is owned and operated by the Sherburne Corporation which owns and operates Killington and Mt. Snow.

There may be better known areas in the East, but for great skiing, great value and minimal lift line time, it's hard to match Sunday River.

Teriffic Ski Values

For couples, for families, for weekends, weekdays or holiday weeks, it's hard to match these great ski values.

Skiing at Sunday River is a real treat – and the facilities of the Inn are unmatched:

- Sixty-five guest rooms in colonial decor and all with private baths.
- The comforts of a living room music room, library, dining room, and lounge all with their own fireplaces and all at the disposal of our guests.
- Formal and informal dining with elegant and hearty fare with seating of up to 220 for special affairs.
- Our comfortable Downstairs bar and lounge with live entertainment and food served until late in the evening.
- Our Cross Country Ski Touring Center with rentals and instructions available.
- A modern sauna.
- A variety of indoor games to continue the competitive spirit into the wee hours.

Most importantly, the staff is anxious to serve your every need.

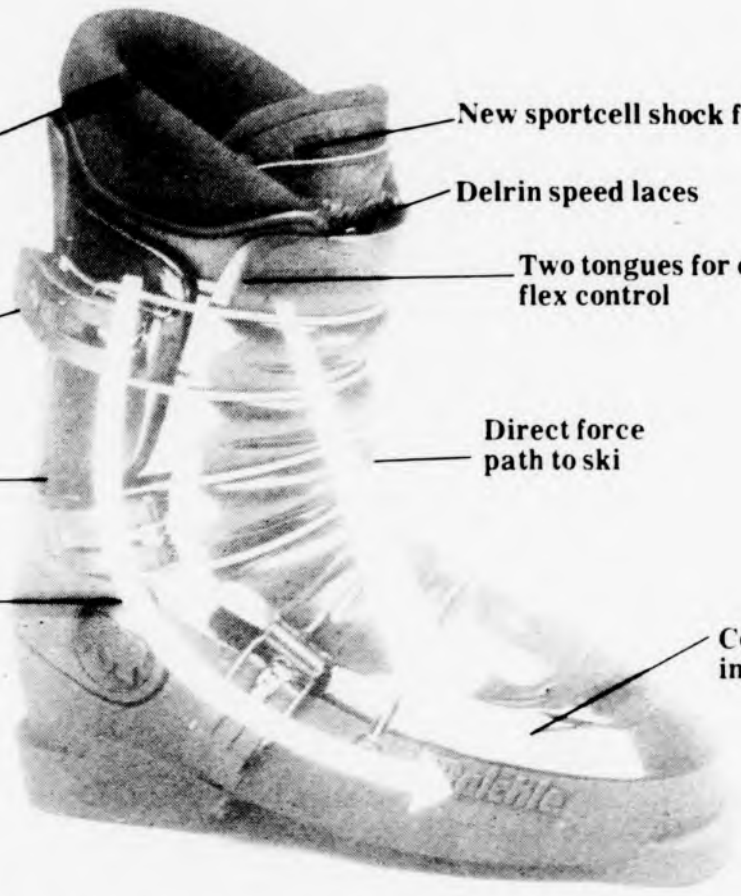
The Raichle Flexon* Concept

The New FLEXON 5



*POWER FLEX TONGUE

During the early 70's, through the scientific technology of plastic molding, the 3-piece ski boot shell was born. It made ski boots lighter and more efficient. Although a step better than the past, these plastic boots had a tendency to bulge and place uncomfortable levels of pressure on the skiers' instep. In order to reduce this pressure, a floating tongue was incorporated in the design. Better than conventional tongues but far from the ideal, Raichle re-enforced the floating tongue by inventing the "bridged" tongue. Another step up the evolutionary ladder. But these tongues were, at best, early solutions. That is, until Raichle's "power flex tongue" was developed. An ingenious application of space-age technology, this new tongue flexes with the skier without discomfort and transfers the skier's energy in a more direct and powerful way. At last, a ski boot design for improved power performance and total comfort. A High Performance ski boot with true dynamic energy transfer. Welcome the first in the new generation of power performers...The New Flexon 5 from Raichle.

Should Ski Boots Really Hurt?

Absolutely, positively, unequivically NO!!

A ski boot's magic design is comfort — the more expensive the boot, generally the better the fit... but not always. I have tried on some $280 ski boots I couldn't wait to get off.

If your ski boots hurt, chances are they don't fit properly. Proper fit of a boot must be determined first by measuring the foot, (not just the toe length, but the ball to heel measurement).

If your boot salesman arrives at the scene with a boot size that you requested, beware. If he puts the boot on your foot, buckles it up, looks down at a huge piece of plastic and makes a statement like, "Can you pick up your heel?", beware. If any salesman declares that all ski boots should be fit smaller than your shoe size, get up and leave!!!

Every boot within the last six years has a removable liner. This liner must be pulled out to determine not only proper fit but warmth. If your toe is pushing into the liner, chances are you will have cold feet, bone spurs or just plain pain. There must be a space between your toe and the liner to insure proper insulation and comfort.

A properly fitted boot makes your skiing day what it should be.

Exhilarating! Fun!

Prehistoric Skiers

Skiing began as a method of transportation in northern schussing areas. Imagine the first skiers down a slope about 5,000 years ago! Stockholm, Sweden museum's exhibit early skis, made of large animal bones, dating back to those days of yore.

The use of skis expanded into military use in the 1200's. The Norwegians used skiers as scouts in the early battles of Sweden and Norway. During World War II American ski troops fought in the European Alps on skis.

The sport of skiing, however, began in the 1800's. Americans were introduced to the sport by Norwegian immigrants before the Civil War.

In 1926, the sport of skiing gained in notice and popularity when the Olympic Committee added winter sports to their program. The first Winter Olympic Games took place in France in 1924. In 1932 they were held at Lake Placid, N.Y. Squaw Valley, California hosted the 1960 Olympics. Lake Placid hosted them once again in 1980.

Since the first winter Olympics the popularity of skiing never waned. It has become a favorite American and European sport for several reasons. The Cascades, Rockies, White & Green Mts. have become ideal ski recreational areas for all levels. Ski areas are, thus, within driving distance for many. The overall excitement and thrills of skimming across mountain terrain cannot be duplicated. Ski fever beckons us all to the snowy slopes in the winter & stimulates us to pull out our skis when the first flakes appear!!! The conviviality & excitement of the skiing populace will keep ski history filled for an additional 5,000 years.

Teachers leaving classrooms early Fees on town services increasing

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Months before Proposition 2½ private schools reported being beseiged with new applicants.

Teachers began looking for jobs in industry. It was decided not to replace the CHS librarian, who resigned early this school year.

Town fees for just about everything have been increased or will be increased. The Town Recreation Department may not be around next summer, or if it is, residents will pay for all programs. It appears the Town is entering a pay-as-you-go period of time during which it is not inconceivable residents will shell out $15 for a library card, another $15 for a Sandy Beach Sticker...would you pay for an Annual Town Report (possibly the dullest book in the world)? Selectmen have discussed that possibility, in order to offset printing costs.

The Town Hall could conceivably be open for government meetings only two nights a week, which will make it even more difficult for Board Chairmen to schedule meetings, and make reporting of Town government news even more of a nightmare.

Already, a couple of reporters are discussing a "team" approach to reporting.

This week School Supt. Eugene Crowell noted the resignation of CHS Nurse Claire Collins, who resigned because of "The possible effect of Prop. 2½ on my position," although Ms. Collins also stated family commitments were a secondary reason for her resignation.

Beth Macy, a mathematics teacher at CHS, also resigned this week. She will begin her job as a computer supervisor at a North Shore company in January.

However, the School Committee voted this week to post her position immediately. Mathematics teachers have long been a difficult breed to attract to public school systems, as they can earn higher salaries in industry.

Ms. Macy, as Ms. Collins, attributed her job search to the birth of Prop. 2½.

The latest on 2½

Proposition 2½ is definitely lacking in absolutes.

An unexpected 13 per cent inflationary allowance, as allowed by the state Department of Revenue, will definitely soften 2½'s impact on the Town — from a $1.2 million loss to $709,613 in 1981-82's fiscal year.

But as of this writing, officials feel the Town will not be able to use any revaluation figures earned as a result of the Town's on-going reassessment of properties to full and fair cash value.

The revaluation is not expected to be completed until fall, 1981, Assessor Chairman Allen Weisenfluh said this week.

After revaluation is completed, the figures must be certified...all of which would take place long after Annual Town Meeting 1981.

While Town officials said Towns throughout the state will probably attempt to delay or postpone their annual meetings, to what avail is not clear, as all budgets run dry on July 31.

'Earn it'-a panacea for crime?

Police Chief John DeBassio doesn't like being put in the position of playing judge. He knows he has a certain slot in the criminal justice system and he'd like to stay in that slot.

While he thinks the Cohasset PD's Earn It program is worthwhile when it is administered through the courts (court referrals), he doesn't particularly care to get involved in it outside of the courts. Nor does he wish to act as a collection agency (when restitution is made).

No one, including police officers, wishes to shoot a first-time juvenile offender off to Quincy Court over a minor or first time offense. Youngsters who do go to court over a minor, first time offense are usually ordered by the courts to make restitution for damages, and can be assigned to the local PD's Earn It program whereby they perform community service. Chief DeBassio is very much in favor of this type of "diversion" program. But he's not comfortable when Earn It skips the court proceedings, and is administered by the Cohasset Police Department.

Why? "People end up being treated differently," DeBassio said. "I don't like to make exceptions. I would rather refer everyone to court."

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22

Three Cohasset juveniles and an 18 year-old Kingston man are apprehended by a police officer in the act of taking parts off a truck at Cohasset Auto Body on 3A.

The three juveniles have no prior record. The Kingston man has had a prior charge of larceny against him. He admitted to that charge and paid a fine.

No one wanted to prosecute the four youths involved in the Nov. 22 operation. The youths did make restitution. At the present time, the three juveniles are participating in the Cohasset PD's Earn It program at the request and consent of their parents. The Kingston man is not participating because he is in the Armed Services. An exception was made.

Chief DeBassio feels all individuals involved in the larceny should have gone to court. As it stood, Chief DeBassio said he had no willing witnesses. "I exercised the Earn It option as a result of a compromise reached by the parents of the youngsters and the owner of the Body Shop. But I wouldn't encourage it as a regular policy. I'm a policeman, not a judge. But if Earn It (through the Cohasset PD) is the only alternative left (to youngsters going scott free) I will avail myself of the practice."

Chief DeBassio noted that the Norfolk County DA's office also has a diversion program. "If we see a potential for growing involvement we can use those facilities."

But DeBassio feels favortism is built into the Earn It program when it is not court administered and he doesn't want to become involved. "If I feel the crime, first time or not, is serious enough I will prosecute." DeBassio said he doesn't want to compromise the position of the police department.

Nothing happened

While students, teachers and yes — even some administrators — prayed Monday night's blizzard would hit Cohasset with a wild force...

While the same above group hoped (not all of them, of course) the School Committee would close the schools Monday and Tuesday in an effort to conserve heat...

While more of the above ilk of individuals prayed the flu epidemic might worsen enough to become epidemic...

None of the above happened and school remained open. This is a non-news story.

'Gift of perpetuity' presented by sculptor

A magnificent constancy of character and purpose has continually been apparent in his life and art.

And never more so than when Richardson White, 74 year-old sculptor and farmer, turned over 119 acres of woods, salt marsh and fields which lie between Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road to the Turstees of Reservations.

While there will be no public access to the land, it connects to Wheelright Park at its southern border, enlarging the park.

According to Donald Connors of Duxbury, the White's attorney, the land will remain on the tax rolls and taxes (approximately $200 an acre) will be paid by the White family.

Selectmen gave their approval for the trust at last week's meeting, with approximately 20-30 Townspeople in attendance. When Selectmen signed the agreement, a round of applause broke forth, with several residents speaking in favor of the transaction.

The White family has owned the land since the 1840's, and the decision to protect the land from development took White and his family over eight years.

Connors said "It was the feeling that the single, most effective way to protect the land was through a gift of perpetuity. The land will forever be held for natural and open space uses."

Connors also added that this assignment was one of the most enjoyable and extraordinary he has ever been involved with as a counselor.

While the land is to be maintained for passive recreation, various agricultural and farming and forestry operations would be permitted, as well as fishing, clamming, hunting and boating on the Ice Pond.

Gambling legislation

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset, Hingham, Hull) notified Selectmen last week both she and the Berkshires representative have filed gambling legislation (by request only) in Adams and Hull. Both representatives have spoken out against gambling in the state.

Resignation

Maurice McLoughlin of Town Counsel's firm, resigned as Assistant Town Counsel effective Dec. 1 of this year.

Insulation

Sheila Evans, chairman of the Library Board of Trustees for the Paul Pratt Library told the Advisory Committee recently as a result of an energy audit at Paul Pratt, it was realized 30-40 per cent of the heat was exiting through a second story glass floor. She asked the Committee to consider a $2,300 sum of money for insulation. The Committee took no action on the request.

Absentees

Don Steele was sick. Tom Burke had another meeting. Terry White was tied up. Jim Lagrotteria was not present (which is not like him) and John Keane was "away." As a result, the Advisory Committee could not officially conduct business last Thursday.

Curley apt. made

Early this week Benjamin Curley was appointed Acting Water Superintendent, with a review to be made within the month. Curley was appointed acting head of the department when Richard McLoughlin of Glenwood Landing, N.Y., said he would be unable to consider relocation at this time due to illness in his immediate family. McLoughlin was offered the position two weeks ago.

Curley accepted the position with the understanding that he might not be appointed to the position permanently.

Heart volunteers

The Southeast Division of the American Heart Association has many opportunities (for you or your group) to help in fundraising efforts at the local level.

Specifically, Heart Sunday follow-up callers are needed to make phone calls the first week in February. These calls will be made from your home and will contact our local door-to-door volunteers to remind them to collect for Heart Sunday February 8, 1981. Perfect for a group wanting to do a community service.

If interested please call for more information: 584-0446, Katie Mason.

Early in January

Cohasset Police Chief John DeBassio met with the Health Advisory Committee and interested parties last week with regard to preparing a drug display to be exhibited to (mostly) teachers and students sometime in January, for instructional purposes.

What a dish!

"It is kind of gross. There's enough salad, but it's in a small bowl. It's kind of a soup," Junior Holly Grant, of the CHS Student Advisory Council, said of the new salad bar at school.

School Committeewoman Patricia Walsh brought up the subject at this week's meeting, suggesting that platters might be obtained. School Committee Chairman Frank England agreed the present situation didn't scund very appetizing. But then, with Prop. 2½...Supt. Crowell will look into the matter in any case.

Provide toys appropriate to skill level

Mary Benbow has been working as an occupational therapist in the Cohasset schools for the past four years. When she started, handwriting was an incidental part of her job. Once people realized she could offer help to the poor handwriter, however, she began receiving 50-75 referrals a year. Her work in remediation of poor handwriters led to a new cursive handwriting program in the elementary grades.

In an effort to increase parent and community awareness of developmental steps necessary for good tool and writing skill, Mrs. Benbow has spoken to parent groups at the Cohasset Community Center and Communications Council and has prepared the following article on the subject.

In our eagerness to help our children to learn, we often introduce or give support to skills attempted too early by a child. If we jog our memories on child development, we will recall hearing that control of body parts progresses from the midline to the periphery. Control of the shoulder comes before control of the forearm; control of the hand comes before control of the fingers; control of the fingers must be fairly advanced before much skill will come from a tool held in those fingers.

Remembering this should help us to provide toys and equipment that are more appropriate to the child's developmental and skill level. We could benefit from a cultural rule of Japan's, where children are introduced to the brush or pencil only after good functional skill is achieved with chopsticks.

A four or five year old child should be provided with a blackboard or easel and chalk and paint brushes to develop control of his shoulders, forearm and hands in the proper sequence. Any child at this age is not fully left or right side dominant. He can gain great success if he holds chalk or brushes in both hands and creates symmetrical designs. His productions will delight him and amaze you.

Jacqueline Goodnow reports research findings on children's drawing behavior in developed and undeveloped countries in her book for the Harvard Developing Child Series. Dr. Goodnow found that children age five to eight copied shapes and drew people using one continuous line which she calls "threading." Thirty out of a sample of 33 children in Cohasset's morning kindergarten class also copied squares and triangles with a continuous line. Younger children can more naturally acquire cursive writing, which is similar to the threading tendency found in the primary age child. Threading is on the decline at age eight and little remains around age nine — the time that cursive is customarily taught!

This is developmentally understandable if you analyze skill progression. Cursive requires the pencil to be held fairly still in the fingers and the arm and hand control the stroke; in printing, the fingers need to be more actively involved in positioning the short line segments for the manuscript symbols.

It was after a thorough review of the scientific literature that a study committee consisting of Jean

The Mariner Gallery of Rogues has moved to Paul Pratt Library

Because Proposition 2½ is going to have a large affect on community services...and especially on Paul Pratt Library...we have moved the Cohasset Mariner Gallery of Rogues picture board to Paul Pratt.

Fees for Town services are increasing in every respect. Accordingly, after consultation with Richard Hayes, Paul Pratt Librarian, we have agreed that the prices of pictures from the picture board will increase from 25 cents to 50 cents.

All proceeds from picture board sales will go to Paul Pratt Library for books, maintenance, whatever. Pictures which appear on the picture board are pictures which we have used, and not used, in Cohasset Mariner editions. So check the board carefully for pictures of friends and family.

The board has been placed directly in front of the checkout desk at Paul Pratt.

Persons wishing to purchase additional prints of photos which have appeared in the Cohasset Mariner over the past year should send a check along with information regarding the date and page photo appeared to Greg Derr, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050.

Prices are as follows: 5x7 glossies: $4; 8x10 glossies: $7. Price includes mailing charges.

In the meantime, thanks to our old and continuing friends at The Cohasset News Co. who have allowed us window space for picture display over the past year.

Letters

Rep. Murray thanked for MBTA reform

To the Editor:

The MBTA is again running, and several significant reforms are now law. Among the reforms are: personnel cost controls that give management the right to assign, promote and discharge employees, set productivity standards, assign overtime, and hire part-time workers; retaining control over the MBTA budget for district cities and towns; and a prohibition of automatic cost-of-living clauses in contracts.

The number of organizations which worked very hard for these reforms would like to publicly thank Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for the assistance given during the difficult struggle to enact key management and fiscal reforms that were part of the bill filed by Representatives David Cohen and Michael Barrett.

In helping to clamp down on the MBTA's wasteful spending, Rep. Murray has performed well for the district and the Commonwealth, since residents both inside and outside the district are taxed to pay the MBTA's deficit.

Juveniles in court, adults in the Log

Recently a Cohasset policeman entered the Log & Line and informed the patrons therein he would shortly be ticketing cars parked illegally in the immediate area. If anyone wished to move their car, he said, they should do so promptly.

One patron left the Log to move his car. Several other patrons, whose cars were to be ticketed just a few moments later, continued to sip their coffee, eat their delicious blueberry, cranberry and bran muffins. What's a $5 parking ticket?

Monday of this week a Mariner reporter observed a local tradesman in a truck zip into a parking slot in front of the Log — headed the wrong way. When her publisher asked where she had parked that day, she said, in the Post Office lot. "But only for 20 minutes," while she had coffee.

A parking violation is a minor one, certainly. But the attitude of any violator is of major concern to law enforcement officials.

*** *** *** ***

In an interview with Police Chief John DeBassio this week about CPD's Earn-It program, DeBassio said he was concerned that some parents and business people look for other alternatives to sending juveniles to court.

He also said, "A lot of cities and towns don't seem to want to build a sense of responsibility in their youth."

Interestingly, the City of Marlborough sent a copy of pending legislation to Cohasset Selectmen last week which proposes to aid local communities in dealing firmly with the chronic problem of minor crime. Filed by Rep. Joseph Navin (D- Marlborough), the legislation proposes the Attorney General appoint an attorney practicing law in the state and residing in the municipality or district of 10,000 (sic) or more in population to serve as a magistrate and dispose of complaints or charges brought for non-felonious offenses by police officers or aggrieved citizens.

Magisterial hearings and dispositions, and records, would be closed to the public. And charges and dispositions resulting would not terminate in confinement or other physical restraint.

We feel this pending legislation would provide a workable approach to the matter. We do not feel its cost would outweigh its benefits.

It is easy to blame insurance companies for high premiums. But for too long we have left the insurance industry to provide the sole partial compensation for massive aggregate material losses suffered.

Several Cohasset Police officers spoken with this week feel the overburdened court system cannot provide the minor offender "due, careful attention," which assures an open-ended extension of the problem.

Yet another Mariner article this week discusses a new, first of its kind, consumer-business arbitration center which would also free up the courts for more weighty matters. The center, in Natick, is being sponsored by a grant from General Motors, which has agreed to submit some, but not all of its claims, to binding arbitration, as delivered by "citizen" judges.

A young mother was severely burned over 60 per cent of her body last Thursday night while tending to a wood stove fire.

Marion Douglas of Beechwood Street, wife of John, and mother of Jennifer and Sarah, will require extensive skin grafts. Friends say her condition is stable, but she will be in the Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston for some time.

Contributions towards her recovery may be made to the Marion Douglas Fund at Rockland Trust Bank, Account No. 9-117-409, in Cohasset. Bank official Mary Arcand would be happy to assist you.

Other persons assisting in the fund raising are the Douglas' neighbor, Roberta Richardson (545-3926), James Litchfield (383-0017) and Clark Chatterton (383-0560).

Artists in national show

Six South Shore artists were chosen to exhibit in New York City in the Catherine Lorillard Wolfe show being held at the National Arts Club on 15 Grammercy Park South through Jan. 4.

Constance Flavell Pratt of Norwell received a Gold Medal for her pastel portrait; Mary Lizotte of Norwell received the Anna Hyatt Huntington Bronze Medal for her watercolor "Jelly Beans" and Margaret Dillon of Cohasset received the Catherine Lorillard Wolfe cash award for her acrylic "New York Winter."

Berj Kailian of Weymouth is exhibiting in the print division with "Sea People," Claffy Williams of Cohasset was chosen to exhibit her watercolor "Porto" and Elaine Wentworth of Norwell is exhibiting a watercolor.

Former Norwell resident, Janet Wentworth, was also chosen to exhibit. This is the 84th National Annual Exhibit of the CLWAC.

Early deadline

For the next two weeks, the Mariner will set an early deadline for advertising copy and news releases.

Please have all vital information in our hands by 2 p.m. Saturday both Dec. 20 and Dec. 27 to enable staff members to complete work in time for shopping, baking, cleaning, decorating, and celebration of both Christmas and New Year's.

Place orders for Narrative History book now

The classic Narrative History of Cohasset, originally published in 1898 and out of print now for over two years, is being reprinted by the Cohasset Historical Society and gift certificates are on sale as Christmas gifts, with delivery scheduled for not later than February 1.

The Narrative History, written by the Rev. E. Victor Bigelow under the auspices of a committee on town history appointed at the town meeting of 1894, carries the history of the town, as well as much geologic and environmental lore, up through the end of the 19th century.

When the original edition was exhausted, a Bicentennial Edition was printed from the original plates in 1970. This supply was also exhausted over two years ago and a new Memorial Gifts Edition is now in the process of printing, with the cost defrayed by gifts in memory of prominent citizens so that all proceeds will go to the Historical Society.

Price of the volume has been set at $20, plus $1 tax, a fraction of what second-hand copies are now selling for when available. Gift certificates may be obtained by calling Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, 383-0773, or by mailing a request with check to the Cohasset Historical Society, Box 324, Cohasset, Mass. 02025.

Other Christmas gift suggestions from the Historical Society include Minot's Light cup plates, Cohasset Common Tiles, and Volume II of the Narrative History of Cohasset by Burtram J. Pratt, bringing the town history up to the 1950's.

Seniors get standing ovation for dirty work

Dirty Tricksters: Koren Lipsett, John Muir and Lindsay Gilmore.

Brenda Birmann

By Tanna Kasperowicz

If you're tired of dramas where you have to solve mysteries...if you've been irritated by TV serials which leave you hanging for eight months, short stories that never end...then you should have seen Dirty Work last week for some emotional relief.

The good guys wore white and the bad guys wore black. If you were still confused, little signs popped out at the audience frequently telling it when to boo and when to cheer.

This was just darling — and lots of fun!

Although Director Ron Emmons is capable of leading his actors and actresses through more emotional and complex orchestrations, he chose a "mellerdrammer" — Dirty Work in High Places — as the senior class play this year.

Just under 50 students participated — 22 on stage, another 26 behind the scenes. There were 10 scene changes with lots of chasing up and down the aisles, and a political rally.

The admission? Just $1 an hour.

Tom Libby as Gentle Grimes of the same company (a 412 story beachfront building) was a twit. I forget why he was driving the elderly from their beachfront homes, perhaps to put in a gambling casino.

Libby had a lot of great touches, a unique falling act. And his sing-talk solo "Ha Ha Ha Little Black Book" showed a strong sense of the territorial imperative. His slow-motion fist fight with Pat Duffy, as Dauntless Crusader (a consumer advocate) was equally wonderful.

Looking and sounding like Chris Reeve (heard Superman II movie is now playing in Europe and won't be to the U.S. for six months), Duffy was a perfect foe for Libby and a handsome romantic lead for Little Saccharine (Katie Smalzel). Duffy can sing, too, as he proved with Go away, I must be dreaming. Am I imagining something here or did Superman sing a similar song in Superman I?

I noticed Katie Smalzel made the honor roll this term, so Emmons didn't type-cast her for this naive, sweet part...which she performed flawlessly, and with logical bizarreness.

Like Rob Tis (Mariner sports columnist), Little Saccharine couldn't type and could only file in Spanish. Her good looks got her the job with Grimes, who dropped her on the floor beautifully several times after being caught trying to seduce her. Ultimately, he tries to force her hand in marriage by putting her into his smog machine...until Dauntless rescues her.

Widow Aged as played by Caroline Bonnar wore neat blue knee socks and was a terrific candidate for mayor. While Brenda Birmann did a fine job as Widow Desperate. Both seniors had great padding everywhere. Good, good costumes and make-up.

What a cute spy! Koren Lipsett, as one of the three Grimes Company tricksters, was precious. Trickster John Muir had a great chuckle. And Rotten, played by Lindsay Gilmore, did a mixed metaphor kind of thing, and well. They did some complicated scurrying scenes at the tip of a whip, and were really well-coordinated. This drama looks easy, but requires precise exits and entrances.

Jeanne Donahue and Jerry White could give Carol Burnett a run for her money with their old persons act. Again, good padding, good acting. And Baby Bob and Baby Alice (Dean Brown and Barbie Gurnis) were sweet, but not as sickeningly sweet as Little Saccharine.

Kudos to Gail Smart, who somehow learned how to walk like a butter churn (she was Ms. Shabby, Grimes' secretary). And Caroline Wampole (Ms. Yesperson) was a striking double consumer agent. Alas, she ultimately gets consumed by a paper shredder. She looked black and evil, but I couldn't tell whose side she was really on. Perhaps she was on her own side.

Good show to Pam Johnson as Madame Presidente of Banana Land...her accent was difficult to place. Must have been Spanish.

At the end of Saturday's show, Ron Emmons received a cast gift, which he didn't open so I don't know what it was. And Leslie Collins, in charge of lights, also received a gift, which she didn't open.

John Antoine was somehow left off the program — he did a fine job on the piano.

☐Wayne Brown was second prize winner in the Hanover Mall Christmas Coloring Contest — mixed media category. Over 3,000 entries were received, with the event drawing entries from every age group and every imaginable media. The contest was judged by Becky Haletky, a freelance artist and member of the Whitman Art Association.

☐Mark Rattenbury, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane, recently enlisted in the Navy's delayed entry program.

Mark enlisted for six years with guaranteed training in the nuclear power program. This program will consist of approximately two years of classroom and practical training on nuclear reactors prior to reporting to the first ship. To be chosen for this program, Mark had to score high on the Armed Services vocational aptitude battery test along with scoring high on the nuclear field qualification test.

Mark is a senior at Cohasset High School. He will report for active duty on October 15, 1981 and will attend basic training at the Naval Training Center in Great Lakes, IL.

Would you like to give yourself a delightful Christmas present?

We're well into that season noted for such famous phrases as "10 percent off" and "20 percent off."

For those of us who occasionally weigh the idea of slimming down, this is the best of times and the worst of times. A combination of stocking-stuffing and stomach-stuffing.

Overeaters anonymous is a way of life. It helps individuals to stop compulsive overeating.

Through group participation, the problem of obesity is attacked on the physical, emotional and spiritual levels.

If you are interested in learning more about what O.A. can do for you, drop in any Thursday evening, at the Cushing Room, adjacent to the Rockland Trust Company, Cushing Plaza (3A), Cohasset, at 7:30.

☐Again, wish we knew earlier, but you're still not too late to buy some Christmas treats for the children and adults on your list at Notes & Quotes this week through Friday. The shop has generously agreed to extend Osgood School Days through the week. Fifteen percent of your total purchase will be donated to the Osgood School.

The Communications Council says the money will be made available for enrichment programs and "The sorts of extras that might become scarce in our post-proposition 2½ budget."

Any choice from Notes & Quotes new stocks of books, toys, cards and records as well as any Christmas order or gift certificate, are all eligible for the 15% referral to the Osgood School.

The Council says, "Here's a great opportunity to cut your Christmas shopping list down to size with a minimum of dashing about, and help the school at the same time!"

The residents of Cohasset Knoll especially enjoy it when the Deer Hill School band comes to play. (Derr photo)

☐Local girl scouts are going to sing carols at the Christmas tree in the Village (between Cohasset Central Market and Curtis Compact) on Monday, December 22 from 4:00 to 4:45 p.m. Parents and friends are invited to join the singing. If you can't sing, come listen!

The group of six troops (approximately 100 scouts) will be going to the Congregational Church for hot cocoa and goodies to eat afterwards.

☐Cindy Hoy graduated on Sunday from Curry College with an associates degree in nursing. The daughter of Jim and Loraine Hoy, Cindy is also a graduate of Cohasset High School and is working on the obstetrics/gynecology surgical floor of Beth Israel Hospital.

Cindy and her fellow nursing graduates had dinner to celebrate the occasion last weekend at Hugo's.

☐Richard and Annemarie Goff of First Parish Road, Scituate, became the parents of their first child, a son, on November 23. Michael Ryan Goff was born at South Shore Hospital and is the beaming pride of grandparents Ed and Beth Goff of Cohasset and Mike and Mary Ryan of Scituate, and great grandmother Vida Racette of North Main Street, Cohasset.

☐Santa — did you know there were 18 elves hamming it up here in last week's paper?

☐Around Town Columnist Karin Bartow celebrated her birthday twice last week...for the first time at Hugo's with her family, where she consumed a whole doll cake practically by herself... and then with her regular Birthday Lunch Group at Fiddler's in Hingham. She is still under 40. Happy birthday, Karin, from your friends!

☐Polly Doggett, Public Communications Director for the Mormon Church of Hingham, reminded us this week that a half hour TV special on Sunday, Dec. 21 at 6:30 p.m. (Channel 38) will feature film star Jimmy Stewart in the story Mr. Krueger's Christmas.

The film was prepared by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (the Mormons) and portrays Stewart as a lonely old man who is day-dreaming of being wealthy, dignified and surrounded by friends.

As he drifts to sleep, listening to a Tabernacle Choir record, he imagines himself conducting the choir.

The music for Krueger is from the choir's latest Christmas album, White Christmas. To make this film, Stewart actually conducted the choir in Salt Lake City.

"It was one of the most wonderful experiences I've ever had," he said. And he added that he like the film because "It tells the real, true reason Christmas is celebrated: the birth of Jesus Christ."

☐Assistance needed...a member of the community needs assistance with transportation from the Kidney Center at 1050 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, where she is receiving dialysis treatments. Anyone able to help on a once-a-month basis, either on a Monday, Wednesday or a Friday, or for the return trip to Cohasset (only at 5:30 p.m) should call the First Parish Church or Rev. Ed Atkinson.

Skill level

Fink, Ray Levine and Mary Benbow realized it would be advantageous to introduce cursive earlier in our curriculum. Cursive is harder to teach, but developmentally is more natural and easier for children to learn.

Some developmental guidelines might be useful in structuring your pre-schoolers activities. Pencil skills are probably too advanced if: your child has not settled on which hand to use for small motor skills; right or left handed, your child inverts (curves inward) his wrist to draw or color; your child has not developed skill in cutting along lines with a "reasonable" pair of scissors; your child does not hold his fork or spoon in an "open palm," curved hand posture; your child insists on holding his head very close to the working surface (a good distance is about the length of the forearm); your child uses excessive pressure with the index finger on the pencil or crayon; or if your daughter is under 4½ or your son is under 5.

Other activities that can be used with a child who does not seem ready to use a writing tool include: use of an eye dropper with colored water for coloring; tweezers with rice and small objects to manipulate; spinning wooden-stem tops; stringing beads, straw segments or cheerios; threading yarn needles and sewing in sewing cards; turning over cards, checkers or coins rapidly without sliding them to the edge of the table; flicking coins, ping pong balls or tiddly-winks with thumb and isolated finger into cup; or snapping fingers — middle and thumb — to rhythm.

Tool skills should be carefully guided and learned correctly the first time. Motor learning is quickly transferred to automatic control and it is most difficult and trying to re-learn. The schools are working hard to make this basic skill more efficient and effective. You can help too.

Parents may contact the Osgood School for material on activities that help develop skills discussed in this article.

[ED. NOTE: Mrs. Benbow will discuss the cursive handwriting program in the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools in later articles.)

Give a detector

Give a gift, give a smoke detector.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission states that more than 6,000 people die and over 300,000 are injured each year in home fires. Most deaths and injuries occur in fires that happen at night, while the victims are asleep.

Smoke detectors have been proven to be one of the most significant improvements in fire safety ever to occur; every residence should have at least one.

For a free booklet describing the selection, care and maintenance of smoke detectors, call toll free 1-800-638-8326.

Think about safety

For kids' sake, think about toy safety. Choose toys with care; select the right toy for the child. The Boston office of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends that consumers read toy label recommendations. Be especially aware of small parts where children under three are concerned. Electrical toys are recommended for children over the age of eight, while skateboarders should be at least 12 years old.

For free toy safety information, call toll free 1-800-638-8326.

Watch out for lights

The Boston Office of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission warns of possible fire and shock hazards associated with Christmas tree lights. CPSC suggests: examine all light sets before decorating; check for sockets that are cracked or broken; look for exposed bare wire; when purchasing new sets look for UL or NOEL label; never string more than 200 midget lights through any one string or cord.

To report a product hazard or for a free fact sheet on Christmas tree lights, call 1-800-638-8326.

Give a Coke and a smile...hobo no-toe shoes

By Bucky Yardume

With only 7 more shopping days til Christmas, get cracking before the goodies are all gone!

Gift shopping is a problem for some. With prices what they are, for many. But we were thinking aesthetically.

What to give whom...what size...color...style... even why?

Catalogs aimed at helping reach such monumental decisions clog mailboxes.

Some are helpful. Some just laughable.

Still, there probably are some who'd flip over getting a Raquel Welch toothbrush, being unable to get the real thing, that is.

Ties are an all-time favorite gift except with many who get them. Now nudie ties, yet!

You can give a Coke and a smile, also a crate of realistic mini-Coke bottles. You can but why would you? If that doesn't grab you, there's also a Coke belt buckle.

But to go with the Raquel Welch toothbrush, how about a toothpaste squeezer which just goes to show how automated we really are.

Then there are international welcome mats which welcome visitors in any tongue, except presumably Iranian. There was no indication, but they probably have them that say "Scram!" in any language including Iranian.

For just $7.98 you can give hobo no-toe shoes. At the going rate of footwear, cheap, except for frozen toes. Trouble is at going rates, many people already have them. Also no-soles and rundown heels.

Would you believe a liquor dispenser in the form of blood transfusion equipment? If Dot Dickson gets one for her Bloodmobiles, we'll have more followers than Raquel. Well, almost.

There's also something available called a cat talk book. Exactly what that might be is as indiscernable as most cats are inscrutable.

What everybody needs is a crooked pencil. Well, if not everybody, every crook.

Another gem is a milk chocolate greeting card. Might not be so bad. If you don't like the verse, you might like the candy.

For those who park their chewing gum wherever you sit, the perfect gift is a chewing gum parker, in lieu of the guillotine.

Also a potty for the big beer drinker.

Appliances are very big. Color TVs...and electric toe toasters.

What every well-dressed male should have in his wardrobe is a Tuxedo T shirt, complete with human

The Advisory Board was scheduled to meet with Selectmen this week to begin reviewing individual Town budgets. While the Advisory Committee initially asked department heads to produce budgets with a 15 per cent reduction, it agreed last week to ask for 10 to 12 per cent cuts.

While the reduction asked for is smaller, Town Accountant William Signorelli noted that the numbers plus inflationary factors, may translate into something greater.

Some departments will be cut more or less (or not at all) than the percentages asked for.

Volunteer your services to be 'Judge for a day'

If you want to serve the Commonwealth and your country in a really worthwhile (unpaid) capacity, offer your services as a volunteer arbitrator to the Better Business Bureau (BBB) Arbitration Center in Natick.

The first of its kind in the nation, the center proposes to offer both the consumer and company an effective way in which to handle their problems without the wait for court dates, excessive legal expenses and in a less intimidating setting than a formal court procedure.

The new Natick Arbitration Center, which was established through a grant from the General Motors Corporation, will serve as central headquarters for BBB arbitration procedures throughout eastern Massachusetts.

Police Chief John DeBassio said he read the original legislation regarding the center. "And I feel it's a good thing."

In the Brockton Police Department, DeBassio was one of three police officers assigned to the consumer department. The officers dealt mostly with licensing problems regarding the sale of alcohol, auto dealerships and investigated license renewals.

Recently, DeBassio said he received a lodging house complaint (violation of local ordinance) which he may refer to the center. "In a department this size, an arbitration center is an advantage."

He added that the BBB center will be able to handle a multitude of consumer complaints. Ultimately, the courts may refer some of their cases to the center, Chief Debassio said.

Persons wishing to be a volunteer arbitrator should call or write: BBB/Central Office, 150 Tremont Street, Boston, MA 02111. Phone: 482-5102.

BBB policy is that volunteers will be called upon no more than twice a year and probably only once. People from all walks of life are encouraged to volunteer.

Earn it

"I don't know if I'm regimented that way or what...but I feel certain kinds of behavior should go to court."

He's also concerned about parents and businessmen looking for alternatives (to court). "Arrangements can be useful in some ways, detrimental in others," DeBassio said. But he still feels arrangements are an evasion of individual responsibility.

"I have in my care now one youngster who has enough background to warrant court. Another would be considered a first offender. I would have to give consideration to both. I'd rather let the court decide."

The 'CONWAY COUNTRY' SCHOOL OF REAL ESTATE, INC.

Twenty-five (25) hour sales course teaches the Basic Fundamentals of Real Estate Brokerage and meets the requirements of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in preparing for the salesperson's real estate license exam.

NEXT COURT: Our next course begins Monday, December 29th. Because of the holiday the second session will be Tuesday, December 30th. The following week the course will resume a Monday, Wednesday schedule for 4 more weeks. Each session starts at 7 p.m. and concludes at 9:30 p.m.

Coach John Leone at wrestling practice.

Mat grapplers have extensive experience

By Mike Ellis

The Cohasset Matmen are going to Rule this year. After coming off a disappointing season, the Skippers are scheming to bring into action Coach Leone's three-year plan.

This plan entails the use of veteran seniors Jack Hernan, Dave Duncombe, Todd Langford and Mike Buckley. The juniors are another story. Spearheaded by the inexhaustible Torin Sweeney, juniors J. T. Price, Gordon Ricketts, David Rourke, Don McKinnon and Ron Burgenheim all expect a turnaround in their personal records.

All of these grapplers have extensive mat experience and Coach Leone plans to combine all this talent into a strongly knit squad.

"Unfortunately, I was the only Skipper to reach the states last year," reminisces Tom Sweeney. "But this year I plan to be just one of a group to dominate in the states."

This seems to be good, optimistic thinking because about half of the team went to wrestling camp this summer and all gained vast amounts of experience on the U Mass Amherst mats.

Captains for this year's squad are seniors Jack Herman and Todd Langford with junior Torin Sweeney. No lack of leadership there.

With all these veterans and a coach that's used to winning (football) there is no reason why the matmen won't go all the way this year.

Testing ice for safety

According to the Cohasset Recreation Department, there are specific ways to test ice for safety.

Throwing rocks, branches, sticks, etc., is not the way to properly test ice for safety.

Most debris thrown out on the ice will eventually freeze into the ice surface, making it dangerous for skaters.

Test the ice on the edges of the skating area by carefully stepping out about 6-8 inches, proceeding carefully out to about two feet if ice appears safe. Chip the ice with a tool or stick until you can get a rough idea of how thick the ice is. You should always have another person with you when you do this.

Stay off salt water ice completely!

McCarthy at Babson

After winning their opening game of the season against Brandeis, Babson College Coach Nancy Dizio's squad suffered two losses in games against Nichols and Amherst College.

Against Brandeis, Freshman forward Ellen McCarthy (of Cohasset) scored 10 points and 13 big rebounds for a 56-46 win against Brandeis. At Nichols College, McCarthy led all scorers with 17 points and 11 rebounds.

McCarthy finished a good week from the field against Amherst when she collared another 13 rebounds. She leads the Babson team in that department, with her rebound average of 12 a game.

The Mariner looks at the Chronicle

By Karin Bartow

The Deer Hill Chronicle's newsroom is Room 14, a seemingly ordinary classroom in the school. There are no telephones or typewriters and there is a sense of orderliness and calm.

But there is energy in the room and the professional sounding reporters, editors and other workers are charged with enthusiasm. They banter the pros and cons of issues more worldly than the 6th grade environment in which the Chronicle's staff works.

More than an extra-curricular news activity, the Chronicle is an in-class study project for approximately one-half of the Enrichment Class at the Deer Hill School. Eleven 6th grade students who qualified for participation in the program make up the staff of the new paper.

"The Enrichment Program," explains teacher Melissa Haught, "gives the students who have a little extra ability the chance to study subjects that they wouldn't have in their regular class." Teachers make nominations to the program over a two year period on a student's creativity, motivation and leadership. The student's most recent SRA scores are also considered. After initial selection, a standardized intelligence test is given for final entrance.

Who is an enrichment student? "They're smart," answers one. "I'd say they're talented," from another. They're motivated and good students, otherwise they wouldn't be able to leave their regular classrooms twice a week and make up the missed work. They're very earnest about the newspaper they've created.

Ms. Haught has organized a study outline to go along with the "business" of producing a newspaper that covers everything a good editor or reporter should know, from the First Amendment to punctuation and spelling to what an editorial is versus a feature or news article.

Editor-in-Chief, Scott Fitzsimmons, makes the final selection of what goes in the paper from preliminary selections made by the other three editors, Nicole Gamst, Lisa Low and Dona Tehranian.

Assignments posted on the blackboard ensure that there's plenty of material in the designated envelopes on the copyboard..."Due by December 9: five fillers, one news story or editorial and one feature story." A Have You Earned Your Byline chart records the number of articles published by each student — they earn their byline after three have been printed.

Reporters' stories must be neatly typed before they can be considered by the editors. "Am I going to have designated space?" Nicole asks knowledgeably about editorial space. (That's space held aside for a specific article/editorial/ad.) On the week before their paper "goes to press," many stories are in the envelopes and Phillip Mahoney, head of advertising, has sold three ads.

Patrick Walsh, sales manager, determines where and at what price the paper will be sold and how many issues they will print. Susie Camardo works with Patrick doing poster and art work.

The range of stories that reporters are working on is wide and extends well beyond the realm of the Deer Hill School.

Kyle Hublitz is working on a sports violence story and wrote an editorial on field trips (they're great, but not when they coincide with other special activities going on in school;; Bob Durkin and Scott Fitzsimmons have created a story contest for the December issue and Bob wrote a hostage piece.

Scott creates fillers (little tidbits of news/facts/illustrations to plub "holes"); Nicole wrote a story on the "T" because she didn't like Governor King's plan for financing it.

Kim Beace wrote a story on where to buy good Christmas gifts for under $10 and one on casino gambling in Hull; Dona Tehranian and Nancy Lincoln interviewed Barbara Conte, school secretary; and Lisa Low wrote on Christopher Warren and Proposition 2½.

There were also some editorials on Cohasset school buses (too crowded, late and unreliable).

This small band of student-professionals finds, as one put it, that "Doing a newspaper is fun — there's always new things to do!" She's right about that — every issue.

Ms. Haught is impressed with what the class has done so far this year and says that the newspaper project will probably continue through the end of the school year.

The Deer Hill Chronicle, Volume I, No. 2 is now on the newsstand, the Deer Hill school office, for five cents and is available during the school day.

heart boldly emblazoned thereon.

There also are Christmas lights for cars. Can you see some joker bombed out of his mind on the Xway when he spots mini-blinking lights staring into his bleary eyes?

Truth to tell, some stuff in the slick suggestion brochures look like something you'd win at Paragon Park for knocking over three out of five milk bottles with a softball. Pure gauche!

There's a book available entitled, 'World's Best Dirty Jokes.' Not on the Book of the Month list. Should be 'Worst' anyway.

What might be a boon in disguise is something called a phone stopper. If it works it would beat cutting shears.

One of the easy ways out is to give money. Now you even can give a $1 bill with Santa Claus instead of George Washington decorating it. Of course, if whoever gets it tries to use it as coin of the realm, you have to come up with the bail bond.

What every damsel indubitably yearns for as much as Chanel No. 5 is a nail polish tilter.

There are other thingamajigs!

But the absolute ne plus ultra even for the man or woman who thought they had everything, has to be this gemola of all time.

Part of the holiday scene is the Partridge in a Pear Tree & assorted Co.

You can give it all...partridge in a pear tree...turtle doves...French hens...geese a'laying... the works. All delivered over the 12 days of Christmas, naturally and on schedule. Or so it says.

The price?

A mere $50,000.

Teachers leaving

Supt. Crowell said he recently met with staff regarding Prop. 2½, as contract language requires all non-tenured teachers to be given proper notification that their positions would not be secure in the system as of a January 1981 date.

Crowell assured the School Committee that it was not alone in the matter. "We're losing our young and good teachers. School superintendents in the area are forming collaboratives to deal with replacing teachers. School department employees across the state are leaving early. They know there will be reductions."

Residents from Church Street, Beechwood Street and Aaron River Road (a recent development) cornered the School Committee this week about its providing better school bus service in the area.

Reportedly, children have to walk a half a mile to the Beechwood Fire Station pick-up area. Parents said they felt uneasy about traffic in the area at that time of the day. While the Committee directed Supt. Crowell to examine the matter, members also remarked that with Prop. 2½ many children may be walking further to school bus stops, or not taking the bus at all.

School Committeewoman Walsh advised the Committee to look into the possibility of increasing lunch room fees from 50 cents to 65 cents (Boston rates) for students, and from $1 to $1.25 for teachers. "Food is going up at a rate of 12½ per cent," Ms. Walsh noted.

Raymond, a man of influence

By Lois Martin

It's time to remember Raymond.

I don't particularly like to do that because conjuring up Raymond Jordan and the lesson he taught me has always been a source of sadness and embarrassment. But it has also been consistently humbling and I've discovered I've never outgrown needing occasional reminding, sobering though it always is.

Raymond was in high school when I was there. Unfortunately he represented a classic element found in every school. He was part of the small percentage of students who got made fun of a lot.

Raymond looked about 40 to the rest of the student body. When all other boys wore crew cuts, he wore his neatly parted and combed. He steadfastly attended to the business of school, carrying with him a brief case long before even book covers were used. In the winter he wore a long man's overcoat and quietly viewed the blackboard from behind authentic spectacles.

While others hooted in the halls, lingered around lockers, passed notes and pretended we weren't chewing gum, Raymond merely attended school. Yet his unobtrusive manner, his inoffensive demeanor failed to spare him ridicule.

It isn't that everyone spent everyday making sport of Raymond. No one plagued him unerringly. It's just that he was set apart and therefore wasn't the recipient of the same natural banter and acceptance accorded among other students.

I'm getting now to the hard part. One day when I was a sophomore I waited after school with friends to go on an out of town bus for a special visit. It was also Raymond's bus. I followed him out the door and in so doing, I imitated his unique gait. I did it too well. Raymond hadn't noticed, but the others did and rewarded me with undisguised laughter.

Within moments Raymond approached me and gently told me that I was blessed with a gift of being able to make people laugh. He went on to tell me what a pleasure it was for people to find relief now and then through merriment....and that it appeared I would always be able to lighten heavy hearts through this medium.

I was shamed. As I listened I felt as lowly as I've ever felt, that this person of whom I'd so successfully made fun should ingenuously commend me. I boarded the bus as quietly as Raymond did. I knew that those five minutes must hold for me a lifetime of philosophy....that I must never again entertain myself or others at the expense of someone else. I've never forgotten Raymond. I have a timeless, perpetual apology for him in my heart.

Anyway this was brought to the surface of my mind afresh last week after a sad incident was confounded by teasing, zooing, fun-making which has been in society since its beginning. I simply felt I must mention it here.

Because so long as we share society, we must share compassion and the unerring knowledge that we are as vulnerable, as deserving of being made fun of as other people. The differences are only that some people's vulnerabilities are more conspicuous than those of others.

Years ago I heard a tale which best depicts the possible impact of teasing. The fable speaks of a pack of wolves which caught a rabbit and kept tossing it in the air...just playing. They were surprised when they discovered the rabbit had died from the game. They never meant that to happen but it did.

In our lifetimes each of us has suffered embarrassment at one time or another because of the way we look, the way we talk, the way we do things. It's been unpleasant, uncomfortable for all of us. Perhaps being unkind isn't really the opposite of being loving. It is instead that some have allowed themselves to lose sight of how incredibly vicious, how unalterably damaging making fun of someone can be.

Several years ago our oldest son, Brian, was remanded to write a paper based on an experience of one of his parents. I knew immediately what experience I'd pass on to him. We sat together on the couch and I told him about Raymond. He understood entirely. And thereby the teachings of Raymond, my unlikely tutor, are securely handed along to the next generation.

Raymond Jordan and I were not two ships who passed in the night. We keep running into each other. And we hold one another in high regard. I suffered genuine pain through shame in accepting the gift of enlightenment he gave me. I still cherish it. And I hand it along in the spirit of this precious season, that it may somehow be used as a gift we share, a grace we give one another and hope we are also accorded the same kindness for our own flaws.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

How very festive our countryside appears as we approach the Christmas holidays. Our wreaths are hung on the door, lampposts and mailboxes festooned with garlands and tree lights twinkle through the windows. Soon the children will be tucked in their beds, waiting for Santa Claus while "visions of sugarplums dance in their heads." Having always been curious as to just what sugarplums are, I was pleased to clear up another of life's little mysteries when I came across a recipe in an old copy of Gourmet magazine. If you want to give your youngster something to dream about, here's how to make

SUGARPLUMS

In a bowl beat until frothy:
1 egg white
1/4 c. cold water and
1 tsp. each of cream of tartar and vanilla. Add
6 c. sifted confectioners' sugar, 1/4 c. at a time, beating and continue to beat the mixture until it is thick and smooth. Add:
1/2 stick butter, softened and combine mixture well.

Stir in: 1/2 c. unsweetened grated coconut and 1/4 c. each of chopped glaceed cherries and chopped glaceed pineapple. Chill the filling, covered, for at least 48 hours. Slit lengthwise 1½ lbs. large prunes, pitted. Stuff each prune with 1½ tsp. of the filling and roll prunes in granulated sugar. Garnish each sugarplum with a sliver of glaceed cherry and store the confections in an airtight container. Makes about 72 sugarplums.

More traditional than snow, more enjoyable than most things money can buy, are the festivities that center around the pleasures of good food. When the entire family joins in these last few days of preparation, it will always be remembered down through the years as a very special part of the Christmas holiday. Even small children can help, stuffing dates with nuts and rolling them in sugar. Perched on a stool at your side, your littlest sugarplum could make these

CHRISTMAS BALLS

1 lb. figs
1 lb. dates
1 lb. walnuts
1/4 c. honey
1 T orange juice

Put first three ingredients through food chopper. Mix with honey and orange juice. Shape. Roll in powdered or granulated sugar or ground nuts.

A week from today is that most magical time of the year — Christmas Eve, when "not a creature is stirring, not even a mouse." We can all sleep more soundly knowing all is readied for the holiday feast. The secret is in planning and doing all you can ahead. Select the foods you'll be serving and list those that can be made ahead and frozen. Think, too, about how you will be setting up your table or buffet and if your china and crystal hasn't been off the shelf for awhile, wash them squeaky clean. Check your candle supply and think about a centerpiece and some evening while watching television, make use of the time to polish your silver. If turkey is on the menu, make the stuffing ahead of time, freezing it in its own baking dish, never putting it in the bird before roasting, for fear of contamination. If you are getting a frozen turkey, make a note of when to take it out of the freezer, so it will be thawed by roasting time. For instance, a 20-pounder will take three days to thaw in the refrigerator. Here is a vegetable that Pat Savola likes to serve her company, for it can be prepared ahead and it always makes a hit.

STUFFED ACORN SQUASH

Halve the needed number of acorn squash and cook upside down on tinfoil in a moderate oven for 45 min. When cool, refrigerate. An hour before serving, fill each cavity with small white onions in cheese sauce,found in the frozen foods' section of your supermarket. Place equal number of onions in each half and spoon the cheese sauce over each. Top with bread crumbs, butter and parsley and heat before serving.

ΧΡΙΣΤΟΣ ΓΕΝΝΑΤΕ - ΔΟΞΑΣΑΤΕ

Christ is born...glorify Him

It's the Thursday before Christmas.

Churches throughout the Cohasset Community are busy with Christmas preparations, choir rehearsals, in order that the celebration of His birth may be accomplished with perfection.

Far from the Village, on North Jerusalem Road, the former Pope Memorial Church is once again filled with activity. Its new residents, and legal owners, are from a brand new (to Cohasset) faith. But the faith itself is an ancient one.

Members of The South Shore Greek Orthodox Church are holding a council meeting in the left foyer of the church.

"You're welcome to attend, all council meetings are open to the public," Ernest Sofis says. In the main part of the church another group rehearses its Greek music. The names of this congregation are tongue-twisters for the most part: Syrmopoulos, Papadopolous, Sofis, Gallas, Valis. All kindly pronounce their names several times over. But Ernest Sofis is a Hingham neighbor. Eugenia Syrmopoulos and Michael Valis live near their new church.

And Father George Gallas, Bishop Anthimos's chancellor, is a native of Reading, Pennsylvania.

The Greek Orthodox Church is to hold its first services on Christmas Day. The public service will be at 10 a.m. Father Gallas, Deacon Joy Chim (an ordained priest), and Bishop Anthimos of the Boston Diocese will preside over the Hierarchical Divine litughy, which means the Bishop presides.

Father Gallas said for the immediate future the new church will be serviced by visiting priests, until the Bishop feels the parish is large enough to support a resident priest.

Already, the former Pope Memorial Church is lending its beautiful stain glass windows and edifice to this new group, which has placed icons on the walls (icons are pictures of the Blessed Family and Saints). The parish has borrowed a dozen or more beautifully painted icons from the Boston Hellenic College.

Father Gallas said the Greek Orthodox Church does not believe in the use of statues or intercession by the Saints. "The icon is the prototype of sculpture. It is venerated, but not worshipped. When the Greek Orthodox Church broke away from the Catholic Church in the 10th century the two were split over the question of the infallibility of the Pope. The

Katie Murphy & Andrea Featherston are top poets

Sooner or later we will learn what everything is made of and how everything works — everything, that is, except poets and their societies.

A fourth grader and a senior took the top prize in the Mariner poetry contest this week. 56 poems were judged. Both poems made a different mark. One was simple and complete in itself. The other, reflective and reaching.

Fourth Grader Katie Murphy and Senior Andrea Featherston each received $10 as their First Place prize.

Andrew Trask got Second Place for his poem, Reflections on Christmas Together. And Patrick Conroy, Grade 3, got Third Place for his poem, Present. Both Trask and Conroy each received $5.

Tow Special Honorable Mention prizes were awarded to Sarah Manchester, a 10th Grade student at Milton Academy, for her poem entitled The House Cat; while CHS 10th Grader Jeff Giles won with The Jester.

The judges determined that neither The Jester or The House Cat were officially Christmas poems, but felt the need to offer special recognition to both students, for poems which were beautifully written.

Other Honorable Mention prizes went to Jimmy Land (Grade 3) for Stockings; Cindy Spooner (Grade 5) for Christmas; Alison Crehan (Grade 4) for The Toys' Christmas; Liz Buckley (Grade 3) for Christmass Il, Pam Haase (Grade 3) for Bell; Chris

Library trustees ponder 15% cut on budget

In a special emergency meeting Saturday, Trustees of the Paul Pratt Library deliberated over how to deal with a 15 per cent cut in services as a result of Prop. 2½.

According to Librarian Richard Hayes, Trustees said they would try to retain a fair balance between cutting the new book budget and keeping the library open.

Presently, there are three fulltime workers and five part time library workers. Twenty-six volunteers work in the library on a regular schedule. In 1979 volunteers gave 2,516 hours, more than 48 hours a week.

In fiscal 1979 a total of 98,126 library materials

Detour- a story for Christmas

By Rev. John M. Benbow

I'm not an avid party-goer, having a great dislike for any situation in which the level of sense decreases as the level of sound rises, but I want to tell you a story I heard at one of the noisiest parties in our noisiest season — Christmas.

It was one of those regrettable occasions when everyone seemed to compete for everyone else's attention. I was busily engaged in planning my exit, absent-mindedly wishing I were absent-bodied, when another guest began to tell me a long story.

He obviously thought that since I wasn't talking, I must be listening. He was wrong. I missed some of the details of what he was telling me, and even missed his name. He looked familiar, but I haven't been able to describe him well enough that anyone else at the party can tell me who he was.

But no matter. It was his story that finally caught my wandering attention. Since I don't know quite what to make of it, I'll tell it to you. From there on it's your problem.

When I first began to tune in on anything he was saying, I was sure I was hearing one more bore describe the daily horror show on the Southeast Expressway. If that subject were suddenly declared off-limits for suburban conversations, our whole

Border St. parking

Parker Avenue is not the only locus in the Town with parking problems. A resident of Border Street, Neil Murphy, recently complained about being tagged twice for parking on Border Street, during snow removal hours. But it doesn't appear Selectmen are going to make any exception for him.

While Murphy said it would be impractical to consider the construction of a driveway at the locus, Selectmen noted the Cohasset Police Department had already invited him to park at Government Island (across the street).

Murphy said he stores valuable equipment in his truck.

Selectmen said remove the equipment, or sell the house to somebody who doesn't have a car.

"It's not the duty of the Town to supply residents with parking places," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

Budget preliminaries

The Fire and Police Departments may well be sharing "citizen" dispatchers beginning next year, a budget-saving measure proposed as a result of Prop. 2½. Figures are preliminary, but the Advisory Committee and Selectmen have tentatively agreed the Fire Department budget must be cut $86,000, in order to bring it down to 85 per cent of this year's figure. The Police Department budget will probably be maintained at 1980-81 budget figures.

Town Counsel's budget will not be tampered with and may even be increased; the Town Accountant's office will suffer an 8 per cent reduction. The Treasurer-Collector's office, 10 per cent; Building Inspector's department, 5 per cent; Sewer Department, 5 per cent; Recreation Commission, 20 per cent; Civil Defense, 25 per cent. And the Harbor Budget, by 5 per cent.

Last week the Cohasset Harbor Committee advised Selectmen to increase mooring fees from $1 to $1.50. Selectmen voted the increase. The Committee feels a budget cut of 5 per cent will allow it to keep night harbor patrol in the harbor. The increase in mooring fees will raise (predictably) another $4,500 — which will be put in the general fund.

Yellow ribbons

MJM (that's short for Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray), has installed a unique Christmas wreath on her front door. It has 52 yellow ribbons tied all over it. She said it's a wreath for the hostages. She also broke a rib coughing (bout with the flu) last week.

Appointment made

Attoney Michael Roberts, of Town Counsel's firm, was appointed assistant town counsel for the ensuing year at a recent Selctmen's meeting.

Roberts replaces Maurice McLoughlin, who resigned the position earlier this month.

Alewives

At the request of Bernard Salvador, Selectmen will write to the Department of Natural Resources with regard to stocking the Town Reservoir with Alewives in March and April 1981. Copies of the letter were to be sent to Senator Allan McKinnon and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

Correction

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray did not file gambling legislation recently. The legislation filed was by a Berkshires representative. Rep. Murray said this week proponents of gambling in Hull have stated she can file their petition as an amendment to any filed gambling legislation.

Check this

The Town's insurance agent, MacIntyre, Fay & Thayer Insurance of Newton, has recommended that the Town pay a 10 per cent increase on its insurance coverage to meet the impact of inflation.

With the 10 per cent increase, the Town would pay $3,642 in premiums for $13 million in property coverage.

Selectmen agreed to forward a copy of the agent's letter to their Insurance Advisory Committee. Selectman Henry Ainslie said he didn't think an increase in insurance coverage should necessarily result in a higher premium. "There have been changes in the insurance industry."

H.E.A.T.

Bay State Gas Company announced this week it is sending H.E.A.T. for $5 to anybody who asks for its beginning Dec. 22.

Christ is born

Catholics believed the Pope was infallible. While the Greek Orthodox Church believed that Jesus Christ was the head of the church, and that the Senior Bishop was the first among equals.

Father Gallas added that more recently, the Greek Orthodox Church and the Catholic religion are looking for the things which unite them.

"In the middle 1960's Patriarch Athenagoras (of the Greek Church) and Pope Paul met in Jerusalem. Both recited the Lord's Prayer, and decided to look for a union of the churches. The Greek Church has lifted the bans of excommunication, and you might say we are now in a bethoral stage."

Although this new church is a beginning one in the area, the parish it will service is from the immediate, surrounding area of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Weymouth and further south.

"Most of the present Cohasset parish has been attending services at St. Catherine's in Quincy and the Cathedral in Boston. But over the past years a number of Greek families have settled in the South Shore area. Approximately 150 families will act as charter members of the church," Father Gallas said.

The Boston leader of this faith, Bishop Anthimos, is a young man, in his 40's, Father Gallas said. "He studied at the Halki College in Constantinople, Turkey. He served the church in Germany, Belgium and then as Dean of the Holy Trinity in New York. He was responsible for restoring the N.Y. Cathedral to its original luster. He also preaches in perfect English, while being fluent in German, French, Greek."

Like the Catholic Church, the Greek Orthodox Church has nuns,brothers and uses holy water. Nuns are unmarried, as are monks and brothers. There are three orders: the first order being deacons, priests and then bishops. Priests have an option. Celebate (unmarried) priests can advance to become bishops and archbishops in the church, while married priests cannot advance.

Santa uses a power boat in Florida

To the Editor:

My husband and I love keeping in touch with our home town via the wonderful Cohasset Mariner. We came to Cohasset in 1947 and still summer there although have been legal residents of North Palm Beach for 11 years. Our daughters went through Cohasset schools, K through 12, and, before that, to the Community Center nursery school, then headed by Betty Grassie.

There are lots of other former Cohasset residents living in the Palm Beaches. (Dr.) Jim Moriarty and Mary; Glen, Ed and Joe Burnham; Gifford and Dot Dean; the Dwight Macauleys; Lewis Loring; Lib Cook.

Part-timers include Jayne and Blake Thaxter, Scott and Susan Low, Ann and Bill Fitzgerald. And probably lots more we have not run into yet. Just up the pike are the Norman Scotts, Nan and Parker Schofield. Not far down the pike is Eunice Truesdell.

Thought, as a thank-you I would send these impressions of a Florida Christmas.

IN FLORIDA

Santa doesn't come down the chimney. Who has chimnies? On our roofs you will usually find central heat and air-conditioning units, nestled among the TV aerials.

No, Santa power-boats into the North Palm Marina which is, literally, our front yard. He and his entourage yo ho ho their greetings and the white boats in their slips bull-horn back the same. The boats are all done up too, with colored lights and little trees.

Much of Florida Christmas is literally plastic, like our Christmas trees. You can buy live ones but even before sold, outdoors, they are a sorry sight, under an 80 degree sun.

But putting together a fake tree is an hilarious prelude to the Great Day, especially if there are several people around telling the putter-togetherer how to do it! Ask Sam Hassan, as he was here once for that event.

Suppose meeting relatives at the airport is the same all over. These times — I almost typed "days" — they usually arrive at some witching hour like 1, 2 or even 3 a.m. Exhausted, dressed for a cold-weather departure rather than the Florida arrival.

And how about the pre-holiday, preferably pre-Thanksgiving, journey to UPS? Not as far away as Brockton but far enough, located on Electronic Way. I say pre-Thanksgiving because otherwise you will find a line stretching all across said thoroughfare to the U and ME Transfer Co. (What do they transfer? Always wondered.)

The holidays are fun, too, because there are children in and around the pool. Many condos here, like ours, ban children under 16 as residents. And we still love small children, if not our responsibility. We have served our time with the PTA, Cub Scouts, etc.

To tell the truth we do get a bit homesick for a glimpse of a snow-covered Common.

Well, see you when the lilacs bloom! Have a happy and safe holdidays!

Editorial

Christmas is...

...getting a Christmas story from Reverand John Benbow which is so super it could run in Atlantic Monthly. John said "It is entirely fictitious; any resemblance to real persons, etc..."). Not to worry, John, but a Mariner reporter thinks she ran into the same guy in your story of couple of weeks ago at Massa's.

...receiving a funny, up letter from Alice Nisula in Florida and learning where Town Counsel Blake Thaxter vacations before Town Meetings. Perhaps it's time we named a Florida correspondent. The job's yours if you're game, Alice!

...being depressed about a short, short Christmas deadline and having no poems, and then 56 entries to the Mariner Poetry Contest show up all at once — pow! When there were only two entries a week ago. Thanks everybody.

...having a Post Office person say "Hey, do you want some news?" and telling us about the retirements of two solid Post Office employees this week. We're not happy to learn Charlie Marks and Audrey Devin are retiring...but we were happy to have the news for this week.

...picking up the phone Friday morning and having somebody say: "This week's issue (last week's) of the Mariner was absolutely the greatest!" In our shock, we never got her name. But thank you. Neither do we know why it was the greatest.

...getting a call from Reporter Karin Bartow in which she says: "Don't worry about the short deadlines for the next two weeks. I've got scads of Around Town items and 56 features." But she didn't say that this week. That was a Christmas wish.

...Sadly telling Clark Chatterton about the lack of "news" in Town these past few days and having him respond: "Don't worry, I've got 20 stories right here on my desk," and finding out he really does.

...finding out a lot of the wrong-number calls going to a certain Mariner reporter are callers wishing to reach a certain Cohasset Selectmen, because their numbers are similar, 1195 and 9115. Wondering how this can be utilized.

...giving Selectman Henry Ainslie a break, for once, by nor publishing what he said. There are no conditions, Henry. If we had wanted to use it, we would have. But this being the Christmas season...

...wondering who will be angry with us after the Christmas issue.

...wondering how long G.H. will stay angry.

...wondering where Neil Murphy will eventually end up parking his car.

...wondering is the flagnappers will return the flags this week.

...getting ready to give everything we get from you back again, next week...

Merry Christmas!

Put 'Paul' on your gift list this year

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library wants more donors of current magazines and books, according to library director Richard Hayes.

Already, of 200 magazines carried by the library, 35 are gifts. Most of these gifts are personal subscriptions which the donors bring to the library within a couple of weeks.

If the library knows a donor will supply every issue, the library will not purchase a subscription. Potential donors are invited to call Mr. Hayes at 383-1348.

Hayes said the library has had a good list of magazines, but as a result of proposition 2½, will cut about 40 of the least vital subscriptions this year. Included in the cuts are some standard titles, indexed in the magazine index, but not heavily used.

Current books would also be welcomed gifts, Hayes said. The library has long waiting lists for all current best sellers, but in the future may be unable to buy multiple copies.

Older books and magazines in good condition are also welcome. Hayes examines them all to see if the library needs them. Those not needed go to the Friends of the Library for their book sale, or to the free magazine exchange table.

The Friends raise about $800 a year in used book sales. These funds provide the museum passes, and supplement the library book budget. Hayes said, "The library needs Friends more than ever, to help maintain services, as well as to be understanding when services are reduced next year." He suggests that a generous membership contribution to the Friends of the Cohasset Library, Inc. would be a good tax deductible gift to the town. Membership forms are available at the library. Membership categories are $2, $5, $10, $50 (life), and "Special Donation."

Special Gridiron award to Marge Libby

(ED.'S NOTE: The following award was read at the Cohasset Varsity Gridiron Dinner in recognition of Marge Libby's many contributions to CHS football.)

For Marge Libby from the Cohasset football fans in recognition of her deication from the labor room to the laundry room in producing and providing for Cohasset High Schhol from the 1960's to 1980.

A number of six sons who have embraced the gridiron and have gone on to lives of integrity and success.

In recognition of her multi detergent and Chlorox use, of her school deliveries of the newly washed and dried football attire, of her ministering to the cuts, bruises, aches and pains; in recognition of her patience exhibited in the hospital and doctors' waiting rooms, for her courage to face other parents when "her son" fumbled, for her ability to watch patiently those referees who "love to throw flags against Cohasset," for her sportsmanlike conduct in these situations, and for her kindness, courage and great Toll House cookies, we the Cohasset football fans cite Marge Libby as a true, valiant and heroic mother of football and declare her to be the best all around contributor to the game of football in Cohasset for the past 17 years.

In recognition of this remarkable feat, we hereby award to Marge Libby a standing ovation as a salute to her dedication and participation.

Awarded this 7th day of December, 1980 in the Year of Our Lord.

To Frank Libby, in recognition of his intelligence to have picked such an up and coming football contributor as Marge, and for being a good guy and a great father.

CHS buzz'n over new Bruins' man

Cohasset sports fans think it's probably the first time a "local" boy has made the Bruins' Ice Hockey team and they're excited about it.

The Town was buzzing over the trade the Bruins made last week in acquiring Mike O'Connell, 25, from the Chicago Black Hawks in exchange for left winger Al Secord.

While O'Connell resides in Scituate during the off-season, he has strong Cohasset ties (Frank Evans, his father-in-law) on Fairoaks Lane. Born in Chicago, O'Connell was raised in Cohasset.

O'Connell was in his third full season with the Hawks when traded. He had five goals and 16 assists in 33 games this season. In 1976-77 he was voted the CHL's top defenseman.

His father, Tom, played quarterback for Illinois in the Rose Bowl and later for the Chicago Bears.

7th grader skates to CHS ice hockey berth

The CHS ice hockey team berth may be third string, third line center, but to 7th grader Jeff O'Neill it's a varsity berth, nonetheless.

CHS Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said Jeff's being chosen for the varsity squad had caused a little controversy among sports fans. But Coach Tom Burnell said "In hockey, size isn't the determining factor, it's the ability to skate."

The youngest and shortest member of the varsity squad, O'Neill, at 4'10", 95 lbs., is a foot shorter than Co-Captain Gary Ormiston, (tallest team member) and 75 lbs. lighter.

Burnell said Friday 45-50 students tried out for ice hockey. "But a majority were in 8th Grade." The present team consists of four seniors, six juniors, three sophomores, three freshmen, two Eighth Graders (Mike Carey and Steve O'Connor) and O'Neill.

Jeff said he was shocked when he discovered he made varsity. And nothing in his background really prepared him for this honor. While he spent only one year in the street hockey program, he's been skating since he's been three years old. Jeff's brother, Don, a Soph, plays first line center on the ice team.

Did Don's great performance have anything to do with Jeff's selection? Burnell said: "I hope Jeff will be better."

Jeff plays baseball, and hopes to play football next year. An honors student, he's a forward with defensive responsibilities, and he's played against Rockland and Avon in rink-run and scrimmage matches.

Burnell, a teacher of human physiology in Scituate (a senior honors course) thinks Jeff's looking good, and thinks it will be a good year for the CHS Icemen.

In their first game against Marshfield, Skippers came up with a 7-7 tie. "Marshfield scored two goals in the last five minutes," Burnell laments.

News from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst!

Susan Curley of Grace Drive is participating in the UMA's internship program for the fall semester. Susan, a senior hotel, restaurant and travel administration major, is interning with Soupson in Boston.

Joanne Sadler of Pond Street is also participating in UMA's internship program. A senior home economics major, Joanne is interning with the Massachusetts Adoption Research Exchange.

Liz Conklin and Marley Rabstejnek both received a Regional C-3 rating at Ponkapoag Pony Club ceremonies held in November.

On a written test (C-2 & C-3) Liz Conklin was a top scorer. And in the ratings, both Liz Conklin and Marley Rabstenjek received best attendance awards.

Victor A. Najjar, M.D., of Cohasset has received a $20,000 grant from the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation to study persons who lack a blood-borne molecule known as tuftsin, so named because it was discovered at Tufts University School of Medicine in 1969 by Dr. Najjar and associates. Individuals lacking tuftsin are susceptible to severe infections.

Dr. Najjar is the American Cancer Society (Massachusetts Division) Professor of Molecular Biology and Chairman of Protein Chemistry and also is a professor of pediatrics on the Tufts University School of Medicine faculty.

The presence of tuftsin stimulates white blood cells in their fight against invading microbes, according to Dr. Najjar. Tuftsin-lacking "Susceptibility is particularly pronounced in the newborn period," he said, noting problems which include pneumonia, inflammation of glands and severe skin infections.

Dr. Najjar will study six families with 13 members deficient in tuftsin. He will seek to identify an abnormal tuftsin-like molecule which these patients have instead of tuftsin. He also will investigate how normal tuftsin attaches to white blood cells to activate them.

"Our fervent hope is to make tuftsin available for therapy, which would be the only way to correct the deficiency," he said.

This week the South Shore Art Center announced an ongoing exhibit of its Gallery Artists at the First National Bank Data Processing Center in Dorchester. This exhibit includes acrylics, oils, drawings, pastels and and photography and will continue through Jan. 5.

In related South Shore Art Center news, Margaret Dillion, director of the center, announced the receipt of funding from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities to underwrite speakers' fees for a series of seminar, The Creative Process, which will be presented in February and March.

Monday, Dec. 15 a family birthday party was held at the Healy's, 49 Cushing Road, to celebrate Brant's first birthday. Brant sat at the head of the table with his party hat on and enjoyed his chocolate cake and all his gifts.

Brant is Bob Healy's Laborador Retriver.

Dear Santa Claus:

One of the third grade classes here in Cohasset wrote letters to you last week. The reason that I am sending them to you through the Mariner is because their hopes for their families, country and the world are pretty important.

Some requests might be difficult for you to fill. Therefore, it might help to bring some of these things to other people's attention since we all know it's a big world with big problems that all can't be solved with a present from Santa!

"I want taxes to go down. For my family, I want them to have a happy life with everyone. For myself, I want a canopy bed,, roller skates and skating outfit. The rest I would like to be a surprise.

"I want my Mommy to have a happy life. I want everybody to have peace and quiet and gas."

"For Christmas I would like anything for boys."

"One is for the prices of food to go down. And another is for my family to grow strong and healthy. I only want a little, because Christmas means more than just toys; it's Jesus's Birthday!"

"I wish that I could have a gymnastic mat. I wish that the whole world was beautiful and that the whole class was quiet."

"You are a nice myth of some people's imagination. I don't think that you can give me this...please, peace; peace with Iran."

"I wish the whole world was rich...my father the president of his building...my mother to get a job..."

"I want the whole world to have a place to live. And I want my family to be happy forever. And I want some games, a doll and some doll clothes, and some hair things for them too."

"One very special gift to the world is that the American hostages be released. My family's present would be a ten year supply of gasoline. Then me, I don't care what you give me as long as it's something."

"I want the world to have no war. I want happiness for my family. For me, a few Empire Strikes Back figures a game and surprise me with the rest. (Signed, from you know who.)"

"Peace for my country...riches for my family...a baseball bat for me."

"I would like a law that all immigrants can come here to America. I want the game Life for my family. And last for me, I just want some surprise."

"A whole bunch of gas. My family would like snow. I would like tin soldiers."

Detour

social fabric would begin to unravel. It's as if we don't get enough of it in two daily rush hours; we've got to savor all the agony and then bore one another with it at parties.

By now the guy was imitating one of the helicopter traffic reporters — Joe Green, Kevin O'Keefe, or a combination of both. If a Level I bore is someone who gives you all the details of his drive home from work, a Level II bore is one who gives you his impression of Joe Green and the 'BZ 'Copter. Complete with sound effects and static. "It's creep and beep all the way from the Mystic-Tobin On-ramp to the East Milton Exit," the guy says. "A minor fender-bending bumper-crumper filling every lane from the Dorechester Tanks to Neponset means you'll stall and crawl all the way from Congress Street to Duxbury. If you know an alternate route, you poor slobs down there, go for it."

His Skyway Patrol impression is about a three on a scale of ten. I laugh, having heard worse; before I know it, he has moved on from the traffic to the weather. Right into the rare category of the Level III bore: Expressway, Eye-In-the-Sky, and Storm Desk.

What did I do to deserve this? I know what's coming. His Don Kent impression. Glare ice, wind-chill factors, guesstimates of a foot of snow: the works. The complete works.

Somewhere beyond the outer limits of mere human boredom, I began to realize that he was telling a real story, though, not just rattling on with party talk. It was something I had to listen to because he had to tell it. Shades of the Ancient Mariner! Something in his eyes just said "Listen to this. You've got to listen to this." Maybe he'd had a drink too many, I don't know. But I listened.

"It was the Christmas Eve Blizzard of, what was it, half a dozen years ago? Somehwere ahead of me as I clenched my jaw and my steering wheel and drove through the blinding snow. I could see flashing lights. Not blue; not red, thank God. White, I guess. They were a few hundred feet ahead of me. I knew they meant trouble. I couldn't put on my brakes, of course. I eased my speed down slowly the way you have to do in ice and snow. I'm thinking, if Joe Green is flying tonight (which of course he wasn't) he'll see the biggest fender-bender of his life. But meanwhile the flashing lights didn't seem any nearer.

"People were barrelling past me as if they could see no danger. Two or three of them even used their horns in lieu of profanity as they shot past.

"Before long, traffic came to a stop. I manage not to hit anybody or get hit, and I'm thinking. This is what the flashing lights were all about, a tow truck or something. Traffic starts and stops again several times in the next ten minutes.

"Then I'm crawling along a car-length at a time, spinning my snow tires each time I start to move, and allowing myself so much stopping-space that cars from other lanes move in ahead of me two at a time.

"When traffic really starts rolling again — maybe five, 10 miles an hour — I'm close to an exit, and I make a snap decision based more on fatigue than common sense.

"I take the exit, which is full of snow. Almost as soon as I'm commited to it, I realize two things. One, I don't even know which exit it is — couldn't read the overhead sign, can't make out any landmarks. Two, the flashing white lights are still ahead of me. Great! I'm following whatever was blocking traffic on the distressway.

"And then I realize something else. Nobody else took the exit. Where am I? I don't know. There are no stores or filling stations on the street. For lack of anything better to do, I follow the lights still blinking and pulsing a few hundred feet ahead.

"I was telling myself, 'What you are doing is stupid and dangerous,' but I kept on just the same. Off the Expressway, I could see how much Don Kent's guesstimate was going to be exceeded if this kept up all night. It seemed as if I drove for miles and miles through the otherwise deserted streets of Dorchester or Milton or whatever it was, following those flashing white lights. The lights were just far enough away that I couldn't see what kind of vehicle they were on — if any. By then I was hopelessly lost. From time to time I even lost sight of my "guiding lights," as I'd begun to think of them. I'd turn a corner at random — and there they'd be again."

He stopped talking long enought to pick up a few snacks from a passing tray, and it occurred to me that I might be dealing with the one thing worse than a Level III bore: namely, the absolutely convinced flying saucer person.

The kind who sooner or later is going to look you right in the eye and swear that he was given a medical exam by small green gentlemen with voices like electronic pinball machines. The ultimate bore: a flying saucer person telling you all about his operation!

But I was lucky, and wrong. As he went on with his story, it was in some ways even stranger than UFOs and Martian Medics. He told me what he was thinking about as he drove along mile after mile unsure of where he was or how he'd ever find his way home again.

"There were a lot more hills than I could remember," he said, "and for long stretches of time I couldn't tell in the snow whether there were even any houses along the roads I was traveling.

"What I was thinking about, and what I'd been thinking about all week, was what a strange life this is. We travel along year after year not realizing how strange and incredible the whole thing is.

"You know? We're born before we know what's happened to us. We'll die eventually, and so will everyone who'd even remember us. We leave no tracks in the snowfall of a winter night.

"I was thinking about the Expressway, somewhere behind me, filled from one end to the other with the futile symbols of our strange world: endless traffic, stall and crawl and stall again, using up the resources of fuel and time that can never be replaced. Our lives moving along at a snail's pace or breakneck speed to get from an entrance ramp to an exit.

"And I was thinking about my life. And my family's. The generations before us and after us, all of us, lined up bumper to bumper, life to life, on the Expressway of time and space. About how much of our living is too much like Expressway driving: Speed up, get ahead of that bus, slow down for that idiot in the left lane, wait, signal, rush, stop.

"I don't know how many miles I drove. I can't even tell you when I finally lost sight of whatever those flashing white lights were — maybe nothing but a reflection in my windshield, for all I know.

"What I did know was that in spite of being more lost than I had ever been, and for all the danger of getting stuck in the ice and snow, I was enjoying my detour from the Expressway. It was like in those old movies, when the fighter pilot would be slapped across the face by his co-pilot, and he'd say 'Thanks, I needed that,' and go on to finish the mission or win the war or whatever.

"In fact, I clearly remember saying exactly those words as I shifted into low for the hundredth time to crawl up another snowy hill: Thanks. I needed that. I needed the detour. I needed to get lost off the Expressway for a while. Alternate route to nowhere, maybe, but I needed it.

"A few minutes later my detour ended on a dead-end street. I rolled to a stop in the thick snow. Right ahead of me, lighted only by my headlights, was a Nativity scene — you know, the stable, the holy family, the shepherds, wise men. All sawed out of hardboard, of course, and painted the garish colors of Christmas piety. Among the lambs and donkeys, half covered with snow, was old Rudolph — somebody's idea of a comtemporary touch.

"I sat looking at the scene in front of me, feeling exactly what I was: lost and found, a dozen miles from home, yet home again as I hadn't been for a long time. Lost, and found. I'd find my way back, of course, and before long I'd be sitting by the fire at home complaining about the weather and the traffic.

"That wasn't even important, for the time being. What was important I couldn't begin to put into words. It had something to do with lost and found, traffic and detours, life and frustration and Rudolph in a manger scene. It had something to do with the tear rolling down my cheek and the laughter coming up out of me, something to do with the Christmas carols I was still singing off-key and loudly when I got out of the car, safe in my own driveway at last. And there's my wife, leaning out the door to ask, 'Where in the world have you been?' All I could say was, 'I don't know, sweetheart, but it was the best detour I've taken in years.' "

That was the end of his story. As I said, the guy had a very familiar face; but as hard as I've tried, I can't remember his name. Maybe I'll see him around at some Christmas party this year. Or next. Who knows?

REFLECTIONS ON CHRISTMAS TOGETHER

Seems forever we've spent Christmas together.
Seems forever we've stumbled over each other to decorate the Christmas tree.

Seems forever we've found kittens sleeping among the gifts
Seems forever we've listend to the scratchy old Christmas records that will be playing soon.

Seems forever we've stood under the same mistletoe.
Seems forever we've sat
by the fire drinking wassail and making wishes on the glittering tree.

Seems forever we've given our love to each other for Christmas.

Seems forever could happen again
if you'd only come back to me.

THE HOUSE CAT

Child of the jungle, wild pretending tame,
Gold eyes remember eons of the hunt,
When scurrying prey sought shadows in the dark
To shun the cruel playfulness of your claws.
The fierce joy in the kill, the blood, the cries,
The panic-stricken heart so quickly stilled
Are patterned on your brain, locked in your genes,
And captured in the soul of all your kind.

But you, you only chase a ball of string
And pass milk-lapping days by civilized fires,
Pedigreed to extreme, sleek, brushed, perfumed.
The only hint that you were ever wild
Are thoughtful looks at starlings in a tree.
Do you acknowledge your dark ancestry?
With balled paws you wash cunningly and smile
Through pointed teeth. No, you admit nothing.

THE TOY'S CHRISTMAS

The Toys Christmas was a sight to see
All of the dolls were dancing with glee
The toy soldiers marched straight and proud.
When all of a sudden appeared a cloud—
"I will ruin Christmas once and for all!"
He said standing so tall.
But toys although very, very small,
Will fight to the last,
That I know hearing blast after blast.
And as I watched, more toys fell,
And the cloud, O how he bled,
When at last he did surrender,
And the toys how they cheered,
The poor cloud was jeered,
Oh my friend, you should have been there.

THE JESTER

The spirit of a nightmare,
Has cast a shadow on my soul,
It has left my conscience weary and my world,
Deathly cold,

Yet its wretched companion rides on,
About the storm,
It has left its bloody footsteps,
On the evening path it's worn,

I can hear the jester laughing,
His soul as black as night,
I can hear the jester crying,
Dancing images in the light,

Fallen spirit echoe,
Guide the sould I can not see,
Even waters shadow,
Reveal the man I could not be.

One inflation solution

By Lois Martin

This year I'm giving people pictures of what they want for Christmas.

That'll be the best I can do. Because I've spent the entire month pawing through piles of jeans looking for 32 x 33s. As children snuggled in the lap of Santa outside men's and teen's stores, I was looking at the labels on rear ends of pants.

At first I thought I had an advantage. For once I've got a couple people who need the same waist and length in britches. I figured I'd stockpile. Either there's no call for 32 x 33 or everyone else already bought them. No shortage, I noticed, for the 36 x 29 person or 30 x 28s. But the ones I looked for were extinct.

PATCHES

Furthermore, in a letter I'll pen to Mr. Levi I intend to put his back to the wall on a couple other issues. What possessed him to devise the 'student boot,' 'the flare leg' and the 'pre-washed' models? That wasn't what I was looking for. They say girls are fussy but we know boys have pre-determined and inflexible prerequisites for jeans.

First of all, they have to look exactly like those on everyone's rear end. Scratch the individualism. And heaven forbid their pant legs flare a bit or be in bright pleasing colors.

I probably would have been a better sport about fruitlessly spending my time over a pile of pants if I hadn't gone shopping with mothers of girls. They flitted around from sweaters to kilts to taffeta to gold chains. So heavy were their burdens of bundles they made several trips to the car to free themselves for further successes.

I saw them as I wistfully gazed over piles of corduroy and denim to where they raced around counters in lingerie and your better blouses.

I'd have been a better sport about it if I could have bought just one Matchbox car, or even a GI Joe or something made by Tonka. Instead I've advanced to the socket wrench set stage, the book backpack which I've been requested to fund but not to purchase based on his previous experience with stuff that looked wonderful only to me.

Clearly I've not many responsibilities on Santa's behalf save being remanded to pants. No wonder I concluded that day of shopping with a supper of beans and hot dogs and a rest on the couch before a meeting.

It was while I was there that I decided I didn't want to listen to the news. That was a treat I could afford and find. Instead, though, I thought how nice it would be to listen in my solitude to restfully moving Christmas music. I remembered a gift I'd been able to find for a friend, a Christmas album featuring her favorite, Luciano Pavarotti. In a flash the cellophane wrapper was ripped from the album and Luciano was singing to me.

My friend has good taste. He's all that he's cracked up to be, a colorful tenor. But added to my guilt for having confiscated her gift, I'm faced with a problem of finding something else she'll like as well. If I can't iron that cellophane back in place, I figure she might like a pair of jeans, 29 x 36.

Merry Christmas!

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

The happy confusion of the Christmas rush draws to an end. Cards have gone their various ways, the tree is up and the beribboned gifts just waiting to be opened. And yet, Christmas wouldn't be Christmas without friends, so dust off the punch bowl, hang up the mistletoe and make ready for the long holiday weekends ahead.

COFFEE PUNCH

2 gallons strong coffee, plus
2 T instant Espresso, cooled
2 gal. vanilla ice cream
1 pint half and half cream
Sugar to taste
2 bottles Cognac or brandy, 4/5 qts.

Freeze one qt. of the coffee in a ring mold. Pour the rest into a punch bowl. Add ice cream, cream, sugar and frozen coffee. Stir well and add Cognac. Makes 50 punch cup servings.

Here in New England one never knows quite what to expect in the way of weather. Anything from the traditional white Christmas to rain and slush can come our way and for children, the ideal vacation week offers a chance to try out new sleds or skates. Many a grown-up can't resist the lure of a pond gleaming with glassy ice, or a snow-covered hill just begging for a toboggan ride. When the season's Wolf Moon is at its fullest, a toboggan or skating party is a must. When toes tingle and Jack Frost has had his way, it's time to retreat indoors with a hearty appetite. A pot-luck buffet, with everyone contributing a dish, would never be amiss. This casserole serves six or eight guests.

WILLIAMSBURG SCALLOPED OYSTERS

1/2 c. butter
3/4 c. flour
3 tsp. paprika
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. black pepper
Melt butter and add flour until it has become browned.
Add three other ingredients and cook three min. Add:
4 T finely chopped green pepper and onion
1/2 tsp. chopped garlic
Cook 5 min. on low heat. Remove from heat and add:
2 T lemon juice
1 T Worcestershire sauce
1 qt. heated oysters

Pour into baking dish and sprinkle buttered cracker crumbs over top. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 min. Also a great brunch dish!

These long holiday weekends are ideal for get-togethers and it's fun to do the rounds, seeing friends, admiring their decorations and chatting in front of the fire, but comes the inevitable day when it's our turn to play host. Many a housewife is weary of cooking and working women have little time to make party preparations. That's when you turn to Sue Sack and Jan Fossella of Marshfield. Serendipity is their business and lending a hand to the hostess, their specialty. Whether you decide on a brunch, dinner, or buffet, they have a variety of dishes they can deliver for your party. The oyster recipe printed above is theirs and here is an appetizer which can be made ahead and frozen.

CHEESE PUFFS

Remove crust from loaf of unsliced white bread and cube.

Sauce:
1/2 lb. sharp cheddar, chopped
4 oz. cream cheese
1/4 lb. margarine

Place in double boiler and melt slowly. Remove from heat and add 2 egg whites that are stiffly beaten. Dip bread cubes in cheese sauce. Shake off excess. Place on ungreased cookie sheet to freeze. Then remove and store in plastic bag. To serve: remove from freezer 15 min. before heating. Bake on cookie sheet at 400 degrees on middle rack for 10 to 15 min.

As I stash away my typewriter to retire to my own kitchen and take a little vacation as well, I want to wish our readers and especially those who have contributed so much to this little column, a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

were loaned. And there is at least one cardholder in 75 per cent of Cohasset homes.

Hayes said Saturday, Trustees are proposing to deal with the 15 per cent budget cut in the following manner:

— A reduction in open hours from 66 to 53 hours, or the elimination of one day.

— Possibly closing the library two days a week in order to save in heating bills.

— Cutting the staff anywhere from 10-15 per cent, keeping custodial service at its present level.

— Cutting the buying power of the library from 40-50 per cent (by not buying multiple copies of books), and eliminating the library's reserve service.

— By limiting the number of times a resident can renew a book.

— By reducing (or eliminating) the time spent aiding the school department, which presently has no librarian.

Hugo's cook charged

Alekos Papadourakis, 23 year-old Brockton resident and cook at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, was arrested in a Black Rock Road resident's garage early Sunday morning and charged with breaking and entering Hugo's in the night.

Cohasset Police Department officials said Monday a warrant would be taken out for a second man, Salvadore Salamone, who was also seen running from Hugo's by Auxiliary Police Officer Lawrence Ainslie, who was on special detail at Hugo's that evening.

Police departments from Scituate, Hingham and Hull, as well as State Police dogs, assisted in the capture of Papadourakis at approximately 7:24 a.m. Sunday.

Center closed 'til 5th

The South Shore Art Center will be closed Dec. 24 and will reopen on Monday, Jan. 5.

Enrollments for January classes (Fortin, "Beginning Photography"; Wasko, "Intermediate Photography"; Patrick, "Watercolor"; Hancin, "Children's Art"; Komarin, "Children's Clay") should be made before the 24th, by mail during the vacation period or on Monday, Jan. 5.

Gift Certificates are available for all Winter and Spring Classes. For further information, call 383-9548.

Obituary

Ruth Barry

Mrs. Ruth (Reynolds) Barry died Dec. 17 in a local nursing home.

She was born in Ohio and had lived in Cohasset for 18 years.

Wife of the late John L. Barry, she leaves four daughters, Barbara Roper of Marblehead, Constance Lydgate and Angela Smith, both of Pelham, N.Y., and Joan Brookes of Gibson Island, Md.; 12 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

A memorial service was conducted Tuesday in St. Stephen's Church. Burial was private.

Remembrances may be made in her memory to St. Stephen's Church.

S.S. Art Center show opens Jan. 18

Calling all Artists and Photographers! The South Shore Art Center is delighted to announce its 2nd Annual All-New England Juried Show which will open Jan. 18 for two weeks.

The theme of the show is "Spring Light" and all media, styles and techniques will be included. Categories of the show will include Photography, Painting (oils and acrylics), Painting (watercolor), Drawing, Pastels, Prints, Sculpture (3-D), Fine Crafts, Portrait and Figure and Mixed Media.

All entries must be delivered to the Art Center Saturday, Jan. 10 between 10 and 4 p.m.; no work will be accepted after this time.

Entries must be accompanied by a $4 hanging fee which will be refunded to those works not selected by the jury. There will be a limit of three entries per category except Photography which allows five entries.

There will be an opening reception and awarding of prizes on Sunday, Jan. 18 from 2 to 4 p.m. and the public is invited.
